

Make international connections.
177-100-2727

THE JERUSALEM POST

VOLUME LXII, NUMBER 18745

FRIDAY, AUGUST 19, 1994 • ELUL 12, 5754 • I RABIA 12, 1415

NIS 4.80 (EILAT NIS 4.10)

ISRAEL • EGYPT
JORDAN • SYRIA LEBANON
GULF STATES
TRAVEL WITH THE EXPERTS
see last page

For all information call us:
MAZADA TOURS
TEL AVIV: 141 BEN GURION ST. • 03-5444454, FAX: 03-5441928
JERUSALEM: 4 KING SOLOMON ST. • 02-2377777, FAX: 02-2554564
HAIFA: 1 KHAYAT ST. • 04-6244440, FAX: 04-6244464

IN TODAY'S JERUSALEM POST

● The Islamic movement in Israel, the most powerful single force in the Arab community, may make a run for the Knesset in 1996. Steve Rodan and Jacob Daliel examine the revolutionary political ramifications. Magazine.

● The radical Jewish firebrands of the 1930s may have lost some speed, but not their taste for the good fight. Tom Tugend visits a unique, scrappy senior citizens home in Los Angeles. Magazine.

● Taxing capital gains — the most stunning development in the Rabin government's economic policy — may be less simple than you think. Neil Cohen discusses this and other possible surprises with Finance Minister Avraham Shohat and Bank Governor Jacob Frenkel. Section B

Hannah Leibowitz, wife of philosopher Yeshayahu Leibowitz, receives condolences at her husband's funeral yesterday in Jerusalem. (Stain/Harari)

Philosopher Yeshayahu Leibowitz dies

HUNDREDS of academic, religious and political figures yesterday attended the funeral of Prof. Yeshayahu Leibowitz, scholar, theologian and gadfly, whose outspoken views engendered respect and controversy in equal measure.

Leibowitz, who was 91, was found dead of a heart attack in his home in Jerusalem early yesterday morning.

President Ezer Weizman, describing Leibowitz as "our spiritual conscience" said he was "one of the great figures in the lives of the Jewish people and Israel, a humanist, a scientist, a philosopher and a pathfinder."

In his eulogy for his father, Ilya Leibowitz, a mathematician, re-

HAIM SHAPIRO
and news agencies

called how Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin had criticized his father's nomination for the 1993 Israel Prize, because the elder Leibowitz had called on IDF soldiers not to serve in the territories.

Three hundred years earlier, he said, there had been another Yitzhak, Isaac Newton, who noted that all he had achieved was because he stood on the shoulders of those who preceded him.

Without detracting from Rabin's accomplishments, Leibowitz said, the prime minister's diplomatic achievements in the last year came only because he, too, too, stood on the shoulders of giants, the greatest of whom was Yeshayahu Leibowitz.

Leibowitz was a deeply observant Jew who decried the loss of faith among Israelis, but he urged the separation of religion and state, saying the mix of the two would lead to fascism.

His most consistent religious message was that the service of God must be for its own sake, divorced of any worldly aims like human perfection or national redemption.

Leibowitz recently said that the Western Wall, the single remnant of the Temple, was a "disco," and that he would gladly return the site to the Arabs.

(Continued on Page 4)

IDF kills Hizbullah gunman in security zone

AT LEAST one Hizbullah gunman was killed and two IDF soldiers were lightly wounded in a clash along the coastal road in the security zone yesterday afternoon.

News agencies reported that three Hizbullah gunmen had been killed in the encounter and a fourth captured, but the IDF spokesman only confirmed the death of one of the terrorists.

UNIFIL spokesman Timur Goksel was an eyewitness to the attack, which occurred less than two kilometers north of the headquarters of the international peacekeeping force in Nakoura. "I was driving back to Nakoura when I encountered an IDF road-clearing patrol with two armored personnel carriers and several soldiers on the terrain searching the road, as they always do, for explosive devices," said Goksel.

DAVID RUDGE

"About two minutes after I had passed them I heard the first blast behind me and sometime later there were two more explosions. I found out later it was the patrol we had encountered and I suppose immediately after we met them they were attacked," Goksel told The Jerusalem Post.

(Continued on Page 2)

Freed Palestinians may be allowed to rebuild homes

Peres to meet Arafat today in Gaza

DAVID MAKOVSKY

ian Authority once the authority establishes a tax collection agency, according to participants in the meeting.

Section eight of the three-page joint statement issued by Peres and Shaath in Alexandria early yesterday reads: "The opening of sealed houses and the rebuilding of destroyed houses of persons released from prison and deportees who have returned is under review by Israel."

Between 243 and 249 prisoners are due to be released today. (Story, Page 2)

According to B'tselem, since the start of the intifada, the IDF has blown up 434 Palestinian homes, 191 of them in Gaza. It has sealed 314 homes, 82 in Gaza.

It was not clear if Israel would pay for any of the home reconstruction costs.

Israeli and Palestinian representatives have been meeting in Casablanca to discuss the final-status issue, a source close to the talks told Reuters yesterday. The talks, which began on Monday, were due to end last night.

The two sides also discussed borders, settlements and the future of Jerusalem, the source said.

In Alexandria, the two sides also urged the wrap-up of negotiations on transfer of civilian authority in four spheres throughout the territories in a week from now. A fifth category, education, will be transferred to the Palestinians on August 29 as a gesture before the start of the school year.

Officials suggest that until $30-$40 million in international funding is available for the transfer of authority, Israel will pay ongoing Palestinian educational expenses from the 25% of Palestinian tax revenues it will retain.

Peres also informed Gidal yesterday that Israel would transfer NIS 350 million of Palestinian (Continued on Page 2)

Peres objects to Barak's Golan claims

DAVID RUDGE
and news agencies

meter of the Golan Heights, and also at a time of peace we had better stay on the Golan Heights."

Barak spoke after discussing with senior US defense officials the security implications of a future peace with Syria. His remarks were broadcast by Israel Radio yesterday.

Barak said that as an army officer he could neither determine nor assess the eventual decision of "an elected government, which is of course authorized to decide differently in shading or substance from the content of the professional position."

Yesterday Golan Heights residents welcomed Barak's comments.

"The position of the IDF over the Golan as expounded by the chief of staff proves the justification of the battle against any withdrawal from the Golan," said Uri Heitner, spokesman for the Golan Settlers Committee.

"We are delighted that the IDF (Continued on Page 2)

T o u r i s t s

Bank Hapoalim can help you invest in Israel - from foreign currency investments to mutual funds.

The warm, golden sunshine signals a host of golden investment opportunities at Bank Hapoalim - Israel's #1 bank.

For a limited time only, Bank Hapoalim offers preferred rates on its tax-free and confidential foreign currency investments.

- Short and long term deposits
- Guaranteed Fund Plus S&P 500
- 50 Bank Hapoalim Mutual Funds including Umbrella Funds and Ankor, Moriah and Cosmos funds exclusively for Foreign Residents

This in addition to: Foreign currency mortgages • International private banking and portfolio management • Foreign currency dealing room services • Trust services • Investment banking.

With assets of over $36 billion, Bank Hapoalim provides security and experience.

So stop by an Investment Center for Tourists and Foreign Residents or any branch of Bank Hapoalim in Israel and profit from our Golden Sunshine Special.

BANK HAPOLIM

Foreign Resident and Tourist Department: 104 Hayarkon St., Tel Aviv
Investment Centers for Tourists and Foreign Residents: Tel Aviv: 50 Rothschild Blvd., 50 Dizengoff St., 76 Ibn Gvirol, 4 Weizmann St., Jerusalem: 16 King George St., Netanya: 11 Kikar Ha'atzmaut, 32 Herzl St., Ashdod: 9 Shavei Zion St., 3 Haim Moshe Shapiro, Bat Yam: 71 Ha'atzmaut Blvd., Beersheva: 40 Ha'atzmaut St., Eilat: 3 Hativat Hanegev St., Givatayim: 20 Weizmann St., Haifa: 15 Hovev St., 1 Pal Yam Blvd., Kfar Sutzaryah: 2 Hahorev St., Nahariya: 37 Ga'on Blvd., Petach Tikva: 1 Hovev Zion St., Ramat Gan: 112 Ahuva St., Ramat Gan: 32 Bialik St., Rehovot: 179 Herzl St., Centurion

Insurance Agencies Ltd.

When only the best will do!

Fully trained English Speaking Staff
3 Be'eri Street, Jerusalem 02-247333-4

IF YOU'RE AMONG THE DWINDLING NUMBER OF PEOPLE WHO DIDN'T COME TO ISRAEL TO BUY SILVER,
THEN MAYBE YOU SHOULD PAY US A VISIT!

HaZorfin

Israel's Leading Silversmiths, since 1952

FACTORY OUTLET SHOWROOMS: V.A.T. refund

TEL AVIV: 75 RIBBITZ GALLERY ST., TEL. 03-6266666 TEL AVIV: 1 ALLEMAN ST., OPERA TOWER, TEL. 03-5191666
BETH-SARAH, 41 BETH-SARAH ST., TEL. 03-5200000 JERUSALEM: 3 KANAFI NEHARIM ST., SHARON CENTER
GIVAT SHLOMO, TEL. 03-5200000 JERUSALEM: 5 KANAFI NEHARIM ST., GIVAT SHLOMO, TEL. 03-5200000

TRAVELING ABROAD?
Let Us Worry
About Your Car!

CENTURY
STORAGE LTD.

Airport pickup and delivery service Tel. 02-235427, 09-929046 Fax. 02-240713

Now in Tel Aviv

Dizengoff Center, 45 Dizengoff St., Tel Aviv, Tel. 03-5251336

Could I possibly live here?

The biggest selection of CDs and movies in Israel.

always

SHABBAT
Jerusalem
Tel Aviv
Haifa
Beersheva
Eilat

BEGINS ENDS
6:42 7:57
7:00 7:59
6:53 7:59
6:58 7:55
6:55 7:55

17081007

Forecast: Cloudy to clear.
Outlook for Shabbat: A further rise in temperatures.

Arafat to Meretz: I'm trying to stop terror

JON IMMANUEL

PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat told a visiting delegation of Meretz MKs in Gaza yesterday that he was determined to prevent terror by Islamic militants but blamed Israel for making things difficult for him by not adhering faithfully to the Cairo agreement.

"I am completely condemning what is going on and I am doing my best to stop it," he said. Asked if he would fight terrorism by Hamas, he said "I am not going to fight Hamas terror. I am going to prevent them from doing any terrorist actions."

MK Ran Cohen said after the meeting that he felt Arafat was "feeling under siege" but was determined to stop Islamic terror. He said Arafat told the group that "dozens of Izzadin Kassam suspects were still under arrest." This contradicts reports that all but a handful of those arrested on Monday and Tuesday after the two attacks on Israelis at Kissufim Junction had been released.

The Arabic daily Al-Quds yesterday quoted Gaza police chief Ghazi Jabali as denying any decision had been made to confiscate weapons held by Izzadin Kassam members, and some Israeli reports of rough interrogations had been exaggerated. He was quoted as saying armed attacks could not be prevented but the police "are keen on arresting the perpetrators."

Hamas issued a leaflet yesterday accusing the Palestinian Authority of acting as Israel's occupation police. "The Palestinian Authority has agreed to be the security for the occupation in the Gaza Strip. The irresponsible arrests creates a major threat to the Palestinian union," the leaflet said.

The Hamas leaflet added the crackdown would not deter them from their fight against Israelis. Arafat was particularly upset that Israel had not released more Palestinian prisoners. Israel is scheduled to release between 243 and 249 prisoners today following an agreement between Foreign Minister Shimon Peres and chief Palestinian negotiator Nabil Shaath in Alexandria Wednesday. Including those to be released, there are 5,267 security prisoners still in detention according to the Mandela Institute, a Palestinian organization working on behalf of "political prisoners."

Arafat said that he understood Israel agreed to release more prisoners in return for a Palestinian amnesty for suspected collaborators, which he would raise with members of the Palestinian Authority council. Environment Minister Yossi Sarid, who was not at the meeting with fellow Meretz MKs yesterday, denied Israel had agreed to such a deal.

Arafat appeared more good-humored than on recent visits by Israelis. "In the past you were our cousins, but now you are our neighbors and our friends. Tell them that we are sure we will be able to take the peace of the brave," he told the group.

Following a feeling of isolation after the Israel-Jordan agreement, Israeli-Palestinian talks have now become a daily matter, evidently improving Arafat's mood.

Jordan, Israel to connect electric power grids

ISRAEL and Jordan have agreed to connect their electric power grids. The project will be executed in stages, the first of which will connect the Eilat and Akaba networks.

Work will be executed jointly by both the Israeli and Jordanian electric companies. The Energy Ministry said yesterday it viewed the move as "part of an overall plan to connect the electric networks in the entire region, which will allow trade in electricity between the two countries and more efficient management of the electricity market."

The countries agreed to accelerate negotiations toward a peace treaty after a successful first round that produced initial economic and tourism cooperation pacts.

Jordanian delegation head Fayez Tarawneh said committees on mapping the border will meet Tuesday in Israel and other groups will convene on the Jordanian Dead Sea shores later in the week.

The talks were initially to be suspended for several months. "The continuation of negotiations means that we're serious in achieving results," Tarawneh said. He described the talks so far as "very positive and serious." Israeli delegation head Elyakim Rubinstein said negotiators will alternate between Israel and Jordan over coming months.

The goal is a full peace treaty by year's end, said Foreign Ministry spokesman Gabi Baktinsky.

"We want to achieve a peace agreement as soon as possible," he said. "There are no major problems and we hope that... in a few months we can reach a comprehensive and a good agreement for both peoples." (AP)

Border produce market proposed to Jordanians, Page 9

Hussein takes over PLO brigade

AMMAN (AP) - King Hussein yesterday ordered a 2,000-strong Palestine Liberation Organization army unit placed under the kingdom's patronage.

The king said the move was prompted by lack of attention by the PLO, which had led to a financial crisis for the brigade and a collapse of morale among its soldiers.

In a statement carried by the state-run media, Hussein said he was responding to appeals from the brigade's commander, Brig. Mohammed Abdul-Rahim Kudsiyyeh. Kudsiyyeh declined comment on his appeal.

The unit, officially known as the Badr Forces, has been stationed in Jordan under the command of the PLO for nearly 12 years. It is supposed to be part of a Palestinian police force that would enter the territories after an eventual Israeli withdrawal under peace terms with the PLO.

The development could further strain relations between Jordan and the PLO.

Hussein's statement announcing Jordan's assumption of care for the Badr Forces was addressed to Prime Minister Abdel-Salam Majal and directed him to care for the brigade and provide its training and funding. He said Kudsiyyeh had complained that his unit was being neglected by the PLO.

"The commander of the brigade has pointed out that... his unit is undergoing the severest difficulties it has ever faced," Hussein said.

"It is suffering paralysis resulting from lack of funds, which has resulted in the forced discharge of its recruits, the undermining of its morale and its destruction as an effective military unit," he said.

A senior official of the Badr Forces told The Associated Press that the PLO has not paid many of the unit's soldiers' salaries and other expenses since the beginning of the year.

The Badr Forces is part of the Palestine Liberation Army.

Jordanian opposition: Peace won't help economy

AMMAN (AP) - Hard-liners opposed to Jordan's pursuit of a peace settlement with Israel yesterday accused the government of "spreading delusions" by claiming that peace with Israel would lead to economic prosperity.

The Jordanians should "consider all those who cooperate with the Zionist enemy as outside the law, and subject to punishment," said a joint statement by nine groups with ideologies ranging from fundamentalism to communism.

Included in yesterday's statement were The Islamic Action Front, the political arm of Jordan's most powerful Islamic fundamentalist group, the Muslim Brotherhood Movement.

The hard-liners yesterday warned that economic cooperation with Israel would turn the kingdom into "a source of cheap labor for the Israelis and a captive market for their goods."

Winning numbers

In last night's Payis Hazak drawing, the holder of ticket number 635500 won NIS 1,000,000.

The holder of ticket number 416585 won a Honda sports car. Tickets numbered 176476, 463440, 160156, 622515, 863195, 757899, 873634, 799536, 455479, 489457, 325599, 602564, 851751, 706019, 639178, 173901, 134190, 133344, 265533, 532604, 214575, 430556, 052404, 434465, 808123 and 639978 won NIS 5,000.

Those tickets ending in 26691, 23505, 23897, 20866, 78969, 64734, 14999, 39434, 66501, 78585, 15585, 94116, 34954, 88132, 44238, 62959, 63145, 20708 and 92013 won NIS 1,000.

Tickets ending in 404, 815, 711, and 721 won NIS 100.

Tickets ending in 44, 32, 00 and 47 won NIS 20.

Tickets ending in 60, 21, 65, 35, 38, 80 and 19 won NIS 10.

Tickets ending in 0 won NIS 7.

Winning cards

The winning cards in yesterday's Chance game were the 10 of spades, jack of hearts, ace of diamonds and queen of clubs.

(Continued from Page One) pensions once the Palestinian Authority establishes an institution similar to the National Insurance Institute.

Israel fears that if the money is transferred before this, it could be diverted by the Palestinian Authority for operational expenses, officials say.

The Alexandria joint statement also makes clear that Palestinian liaison officers may begin working at the Allenby and Rafiah terminals alongside Israelis. Israel will try to cut down on the waiting time for those Palestinians entering the terminals. According to the Israel-PLO implementation accord, new terminals are supposed to be constructed in both locations to deal with new entry and security procedures.

PALESTINIANS

Joining Peres, Arafat, and Gidal in Gaza today will be three Norwegians who were substantively involved in the Oslo talks: Deputy Foreign Minister Jan Egeblad, Norwegian academic and now UN coordinator for programs in Gaza Terje Larsen, and Larsen's wife, Norwegian diplomat Mona Juul, who both helped create the channel and sustained it through months of arduous diplomacy.

In yesterday's Peres-Gidal meeting, the Norwegian promised that his country would work this fall to eliminate old anti-Israel resolutions still on the books of the UN General Assembly and replace them with resolutions supportive of current Middle East peace efforts.

Participants said yesterday that Gidal was keen on having Norway develop a data base on Middle East water problems. He said that his country would host a seminar on water by the end of next month, and it hopes to have Syrian academics attend.

Peres praised the Norwegians' contribution to Middle East peace, saying the Oslo Accord has become a landmark in world politics.

"The atmosphere they have created, their devotion in such a sincere way and manner to promote peace all over the world and particularly in our region, has really started a revolution in the Middle East," Peres said.

HIZBULLAH

were transferred to the Nahariya government hospital for treatment.

Golskel said it was the first roadside bomb attack he could recall so close to Nakoura. "On the other hand, we are constantly facing the danger of roadside bombs and ambushes on the roads we are using in the security zone so this is really nothing new, but being a bit close to home it makes us think a bit more," he said.

Hizbullah, in a statement issued in Beirut, claimed responsibility for the attack which occurred shortly before 2 p.m. Shortly afterwards Hizbullah gunmen fired several mortar rounds towards IDF and SLA positions.

charged, killing one of the gunmen. The rest of the attackers fled.

Widespread searches were launched with the aid of Cobra helicopter gunships to try and track down the attackers, who left behind a large quantity of equipment including more explosives, a LAW anti-tank missile launcher, an M-16 rifle, hand grenades and a grenade launcher, as well as ammunition and food supplies.

OC Northern Command Maj. Gen. Yitzhak Mordechai went to the scene and debriefed the troops involved at the scene. The two wounded soldiers

BAT-DOR STUDIOS OF DANCE

Director: Jeannette Ordman
Assistant Director: Rosaline Subel-Kassel

Bat-Dor Studios of Dance opens: Thursday, 1 September, 1994

AUDITIONS: Wednesday 31 August

CLASSICAL BALLET * MODERN DANCE * JAZZ

REPERTOIRE CLASSES IN CLASSICAL BALLET AND MODERN DANCE

PAS DE DEUX * FUNDAMENTALS OF MUSIC

RAD Major and Grade Examinations

Men's Classes, Professional Classes

Highly qualified teachers for all levels from age 6.

REGISTRATION: From 21st August, 1994
Sunday - Thursday: 9 am - 6 pm, Friday: 9 am - 1 pm

Bat-Dor, 30 Ibn Gvirol, Tel-Aviv
Tel. 03-6963175/6/7

AN IMPORTANT INVITATION
We Dare Not Forget Their Sacrifice
You are invited to a special Evening of Remembrance and Solidarity for the Victims of Arab Terror in Israel which will take place, please G-d, Monday evening, Aug. 29, 1994, Elul 22, 5754 at 8:00 p.m. at Yeshurun Central Synagogue
44 King George St., Jerusalem with the participation of noted personalities.

Memorial tribute by Cantor Asher Hainovitz
and Violinist Yehoshua Rochman

Seating is limited. Please come on time.
For further information, please contact VAT International, Jerusalem, Tel./Fax. 02-821-106.
Zev Rapp Chairman Shifra Hoffman Founder

Livnot U'Lehibanot
"To Build and To Be Built"

a one-day hike in the ancient Judean hills for those interested in experiencing a day with Livnot U'Lehibanot - the work and study program. Designed for men and women ages 21-30 with little Jewish background.

When: MONDAY, August 22, 8:30 am - 4:00 pm
Cost: 25 NIS includes food, buses and tour
How: call by Sunday, Aug. 21st 12:00 noon to reserve a space 02-793-491/2

Livnot U'Lehibanot has designed three-week and three-month programs of working in the community, hiking terrain not seen by the average tourist and studying in an open, questioning atmosphere. Programs are based in Jerusalem and Tzfat.

Full session: Aug. 28th - Nov. 13th
Special Holiday session: Sept. 4th - 16th
For more information call: 02-793-491/2 or 06-970-311
Livnot U'Lehibanot, 27 Ben Zakai St., Jerusalem

CAESAR YAM

Prestigious Cottage Neighborhood in the Binyamin Bay - Hadera

Caesar Yam is situated in an area of intensive development, which will include a marina, prestigious holiday village, exclusive hotel, etc.
Sale of Stage Two has begun - cottages of approx. 150 sq.m. on a 250 sq.m. plot.

The Caesar Yam project can be seen every Friday on the Shishi Hai program on Channel 2.

To reach Caesar Yam, turn west off the Hadera Interchange towards the sea and follow the sign posts. Open also on Saturday 1:00 - 5:30 p.m.

Bnei Or Maintenance Ltd. Bnei Or
* According to the official exchange rate.

When in Jerusalem, you'll enjoy staying at the MENORAH HOTEL
Homey atmosphere, large rooms, excellent location
(opp. the King David Hotel, only minutes from the Western Wall).
Attractive rates - from only $60 per room, per day, for two persons
24 King David St., 02-234252
Fax: 02-242860

Arutz 7, 711 AM at 12:00 a.m.

Palm Beach Hotel in Gush Katif

Rosh Hashana, 4 days, 3 nights, $150 p.p. full board.
Sukkot special, 1/2 board: 10 days $550 p.p. incl. transportation
8 days, $485 p.p. Both include full board on Chag and Shabbat.
For details call: Sol Small 02-527845 NOF Bargain Tours & Travel
Gazit Lemehadrin - Shmilla Lechuma

WORLD CLASS UNIVERSITIES... A WORLD OF OPPORTUNITIES

BEN-GURION UNIVERSITY OF THE NEGEV

BOSTON UNIVERSITY

CONTINUING EDUCATION FOR QUALIFIED MANAGERS

YEHUD TECHNOLOGY CENTER

CERTIFICATE PROGRAM

ADVANCED MANAGEMENT STUDIES

STARTING JANUARY 1995

* Students completing this program with a grade point average of 3.0 or better may continue for the MASTER OF SCIENCE IN MANAGEMENT degree in Beer Sheva.

For information and applications write, call, fax:
Boston University/BGU
Continuing Education
POB 653, Beer Sheva 84105

Sasha Sadan adds:
More incidents of rape and other sexual assault, particularly between acquaintances, may be reported now, the Israel Women's Network said yesterday in response to the sentencing.

Miriam Isserow, legal coordinator for the network, noted that the courts "once again abstained from imposing the maximum sentence for rape [20 years in prison] but is not letting them get off, which reinforces the meaning of its earlier ruling on what constitutes consent [from a woman]."

Isserow said that according to the 1993 annual report of the country's rape crisis centers, the assailant is unknown to the victim in only 16% of cases.

DAMP?
Because we use only the best and most advanced materials, applied by responsible and conscientious workmen, our success rate is unmatched.
Makes you think, doesn't it "DR. RETIVUT"
Call today - be dry tomorrow!
Tel. 09-624043
Netanya, Tel Aviv, Jerusalem

I'd love to live here. But what about...

COMMSTOCK

INTERNATIONAL STOCKS OPTIONS CURRENCIES
COMMODITIES
MUTUAL FUNDS

For details, call Alan Schwartz in our Jerusalem office or return the attached coupon to: CommStock Trading Ltd. POB 7777 Jerusalem 91077; fax 02-244876

Please send me more details about CommStock Trading.

Name _____
Address _____
Phone _____ Fax _____

CommStock Trading Ltd.
Futures, Options and Stock Brokers (Est. 1981)
Jerusalem: City Tower, 34 Ben Yehuda St. Tel. 02-244963; Fax: 02-244876
Givat Haim: Beit Silver, 7 Abba Hillel St. Tel. 03-575-8826/27; Fax: 03-575-8990

Canadian board to discuss 'refugees'

BATSHEVA TSUR

ARE Israeli citizens who emigrate to Canada refugees? This question will be discussed today when the Canadian immigration and refugee appeal board convenes in Montreal to hear the testimony of expert witnesses with regard to the large number of Israelis originally from the CIS who have requested refugee status in Canada.

The board decided several months ago to discuss the matter because of the large number of applicants for refugee status and not as a result of media reports on the subject, Canadian Ambassador Norman Spector said yesterday.

The legal experts who are to testify include Lynda Brayer, executive legal director of the Society of St. Ives, a legal resource center operating under the auspices of the Latin Patriarchate of Jerusalem. She has presented the Canadians with most of the affidavits that served as the basis for the claims of refugee status.

In the affidavits, Brayer describes legal discrimination in Israel as being comparable with that under the former apartheid regime in South Africa.

Also due to give testimony is a Canadian human-rights expert, Prof. Irwin Cotler, who has spent the past two weeks here examining whether there is any state-sanctioned persecution in Israel and if so, what legal remedies are available.

The third expert is former Meretz Party activist, lawyer Jonathan Livne, who has represented numerous immigrants from the CIS on a volunteer basis in Israeli courts.

"The board is a quasi-judicial body, independent of government criticism," Spector said yesterday. "It receives requests for refugee status even from the US and examines them on a case-by-case basis."

He added: "Neither the Canadian government, nor a foreign government [Israel] has the right to criticize it or intervene — just as they would not intervene with Supreme Court decisions."

But Israeli government officials denied there had been interference and said that the board had actually requested position papers from Israel.

Spector also criticized the publicity here on the subject, saying it was very poorly received in Canada.

"This is particularly ironic when Israel has no equivalent system to accept refugees according to the UN convention, and often turns to Canada to take in genuine refugees who are in fear of their lives," he said.

Spector said, however, that he had conveyed to his government that he had not seen state-sponsored persecution of former CIS olim in Israel.

Foreign Ministry spokesman Rafi Gamzu yesterday downplayed talk of tension between the two countries.

He said Canada was entitled to absorb Israelis in its regular immigrant quotas and that Israel's only objection was to the declaration of these emigrants as "refugees," which casts this country in an unfair light.

One of the contestants shows off her prowess at a kite-flying contest held yesterday at the Israel museum in Jerusalem. (Isaac Harari)

High-class hookers may have to declare earnings

RAINE MARCUS

HIGH-CLASS prostitutes who until now have enjoyed tax-free earnings may be forced to declare their income to authorities, tax sources said yesterday.

One such woman, who said she has worked for Tel Aviv escort agencies for the past three years, complained that if she had to register with tax authorities she would also demand social benefits.

"If I have to pay tax on my earnings, then authorities should also ensure I get proper health care services and other social benefits," said Rahel, who added she earns from NIS 200 - NIS 500 per client, usually visiting them in their hotel rooms.

The move follows raids by tax officials on Tel Aviv escort agencies over the past few days. Owners of such agencies, said investigators, have defrauded tax authorities out of millions of shekels.

"Every escort agency in the city will be investigated, and owners will have to start paying taxes, just as other companies do," said a tax official.

Yesterday two owners of escort agencies were released on bail by Tel Aviv Magistrate's Court. Levana Avigzer, 36, has managed over the past two and a half years call-girl services under such names as "Paradise" and "Alma," and is the former business partner of Kach activists turned pimps Assaf and Elzmon Rosenberg, investigator Sassi Cohen said in court. The Rosenberg brothers were questioned and released on bail on Wednesday.

Investigators seized hundreds of documents, including index cards listing names of call girls, from Avigzer's home/office. She also failed to pay taxes on her employees' earnings, said Cohen. Avigzer, the mother of a small child, said she only earned around NIS 6,000 - NIS 7,000 monthly and had to pay apartment rental, and bills and expenses for her child. "I don't have the cash to put up bail," she said.

Judge Yehudit Shevach set bail at NIS 60,000 and barred her from leaving the country.

Avigzer's boyfriend, Shimon Sa'ar, suspected of failing to pay hundreds of shekels in taxes on earnings from escort agencies, was released on NIS 100,000 bail and ordered to forfeit his passport.

He told investigators he collected NIS 100 in commission from every NIS 350 charged to clients. The call girl keeps the remaining amount.

He admitted tax evasion of NIS 600,000 in the sum of NIS 600,000, said Cohen.

Duke of Edinburgh to make short visit soon

BATSHEVA TSUR

BRITAIN'S Prince Phillip is to pay a short visit to Israel at the invitation of Yad Vashem. He will be received by President Ezer Weizman and Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin.

The Duke of Edinburgh will arrive here before the end of the year, the Foreign Ministry spokesman confirmed yesterday, but it is not yet clear whether the visit will take place on the proposed date of October 30.

Yad Vashem invited the prince to receive the Righteous Gentile award in the name of his mother, the late Princess Alice of Greece, who saved a Jewish family during World War II.

Princess Alice gave instructions to hide members of the Cohen family in a room in the palace in Athens, according to Dr. Mordechai Palzur of Yad Vashem. The Cohens had been friendly with the Greek monarchs before the Nazi occupation and some of them escaped to Egypt where they joined the Greek forces.

Princess Alice arranged for the remaining family members to receive a room in the palace which was guarded 24 hours a day and for food to be brought to them. The guard was instructed not to ask any questions.

The Jewish family remained in the palace under Princess Alice's protection for almost a year, until the Nazis left Athens in October 1944, Palzur said. Two of the Cohens' children are believed to be living in Paris today.

While in Jerusalem, the prince will pay a visit to the grave of his mother who is buried in the Greek Orthodox cemetery of the Gethsemane Church.

Top Zanzibar politician coming Sunday

A LEADING political figure from Zanzibar is due to arrive here on Sunday to explore the possibility of establishing economic ties between that mainly Moslem area and Israel.

Isaac Sepetu, the Minister of Planning of Zanzibar, an autonomous region within Tanzania, will be the guest of Economics Minister Shimon Shetret. During the four-day visit, he will also hold talks with Foreign Minister Shimon Peres and meet with the heads of local industries.

Tanzania, in East Africa, does not have diplomatic ties with Israel.

Man held for corrupting teen with drugs

A Tel Aviv man who is suspected of corrupting a 14-year-old girl by giving her drugs and then having sex with her will appear in Tel Aviv Magistrate's Court for a remand hearing today.

But police said they feared the girl would be too afraid of reprisals to testify against the 22-year-old man.

The girl's father alerted police to the matter after he smelled hashish coming from his daughter's room. When he entered the room, three men escaped through an open window. The father persuaded his daughter to explain what had been happening and then filed a complaint with police.

The man, known to police for drugs offenses, is suspected of showing the girl how to use drugs and then taking advantage of her sexually.

Court rejects request to ban teaching of peace process in schools

THE High Court of Justice yesterday rejected a petition by lawyer David Mintz and his wife, Varda, seeking a temporary injunction against the Education Ministry regarding the theme of the upcoming school year, "The Peace Process - Israel in the Middle East."

The couple live in Judea and have three children in the school system. They claimed the subject was a political and controversial one, and that opening the schools to political discussions posed a danger to democracy.

Justices Dov Levin, Aharon Barak and Mishael Cheshin rejected the petition, stating that the material prepared by the Education Ministry which was presented to the court was balanced.

The justices added that the Mintz's claim insults the intelligence of the nation's youth, who are capable of discussing and studying controversial subjects. They added that any teacher was capable of teaching such subjects.

manner in which the petitioner sought to have some subjects barred from discussion in the schools was more in keeping with a totalitarian regime than a democratic one.

Education Minister Amnon Rubinstein welcomed the decision, saying, "The High Court only strengthened the argument that we must not be afraid of including subjects in the news for discussion in our schools, on condition that the discussion is fair and not used for propaganda purposes."

"We cannot ignore the peace process and Israel's position in the Middle East, particularly now. Moreover, when the court rules that the material distributed to the schools is balanced, it confirms that the Education Ministry has prepared for the study of the subject in a very responsible way, with special care paid to my instructions, and with sensitivity to the different views held by the Israeli public."

Warder's remand extended in murder, suicide attempt

PRISONS Service warder Pinchas Abukasis, who shot and killed his girlfriend, Mazal Zana Wednesday before trying to commit suicide, had his remand extended yesterday by five days by a Beer-sheva Magistrate's Court judge.

The judge also ordered an autopsy performed on Zana, who was shot to death at the Sapir Center in the Arava.

Abukasis, who is unconscious and hospitalized under police guard at Soroka Hospital, was to have had his remand hearing at his bedside, but he was still unconscious when the hearing was to have been held.

A police representative gave Judge Yosef Eliaz a note from a hospital doctor confirming that Abukasis had been anesthetized for an operation and it was unclear when he would regain consciousness. Police told the judge that in view of the circumstances, they would make do with a remand of a few more days, and Eliaz agreed.

Meanwhile, the Wizo women's organization announced yesterday that it had proposed an amendment to the firearms law which would require testing of the emotional state of those granted gun licenses.

The request follows several recent incidents of women being murdered by their husbands or boyfriends.

The organization said that the fact that the recent killings were carried out by two policemen and a civilian carrying a licensed weapon should serve to warn of the danger in granting gun licenses to emotionally disturbed people.

King Shaul Hotel in Ashkelon

Gilat Lemehadin - Shmitta LeChumra

Rosh Hashana, 4 days, 3 nights, $125 p.p. full board.

Shabbat Shuva, 3 days, 2 nights, $70 p.p. full board.
Shiurim by Rabbi Chaim Ruben (Ramot)

Sukkot Special, 10 days, 9 nights, $535 p.p. full board.
Shiurim by Rabbi Shimon Green of Yeshiva Bircas Hatorah (old city)

3 DAY WEEKEND SPECIALS AT $70 p.p. full board.

For details call: Sol Small 02-527865 NOF Bargain Tours & Travel

SOTHEBY'S

Ten Years of Sales in Israel

Faberge, Jewellery, Silver, Paintings, Icons...

Sotheby's international experts are in Israel to evaluate your property for our Autumn sales in London, Geneva and Amsterdam.

Icons, Russian Paintings and Silver
Mr. Ivan Samarin - Sotheby's London
August 24 - 25

19th Century Continental Paintings
Ms. Veronique Biddell - Sotheby's London
August 24 - 25

European Silver
Mr. Kobus du Plessis - Sotheby's Paris
August 30 - 31

Jewellery and Gemstones
Mr. Jonathan Condorp - Sotheby's Amsterdam
August 31 - September 1

For a complimentary and confidential evaluation, please call for an appointment:
Sotheby's, 38 Gordon St., Tel Aviv 63414
Tel: 03-5223822 Fax: 03-5225454

Can I work in my profession?

can my puppy get his favorite dog biscuits?

Where will we live?

How will I learn Hebrew?

Just thinking about living in Israel raises 1001 questions. Get the answers.

TOLL FREE INFORMATION HOTLINE
177 022 8055
5:00 - 8:00 p.m. Sun. - Thurs. throughout August

A DAY IN THE LIFE OF ISRAEL

Be an Israeli for a day. Visit growing neighborhoods, hi-tech parks, shopping malls, schools and more.
ONLY NIS 30!
Tours depart Tel Aviv & Jerusalem: Thursdays Aug. 4, 11, 18, 25, Sept. 1

THE WAY IN

Discuss with new immigrants their joys and tribulations in an evening moderated by an Afyah Counselor.
Tuesdays 8:00 p.m.
Jerusalem: August 9, 23
Tel Aviv: August 16, 30

Luxurious Terrace Apartments in Malha, Jerusalem

Givat Danir

offers a wide selection of luxurious 4 and 5 room terraced apartments, and 6-room cottages.

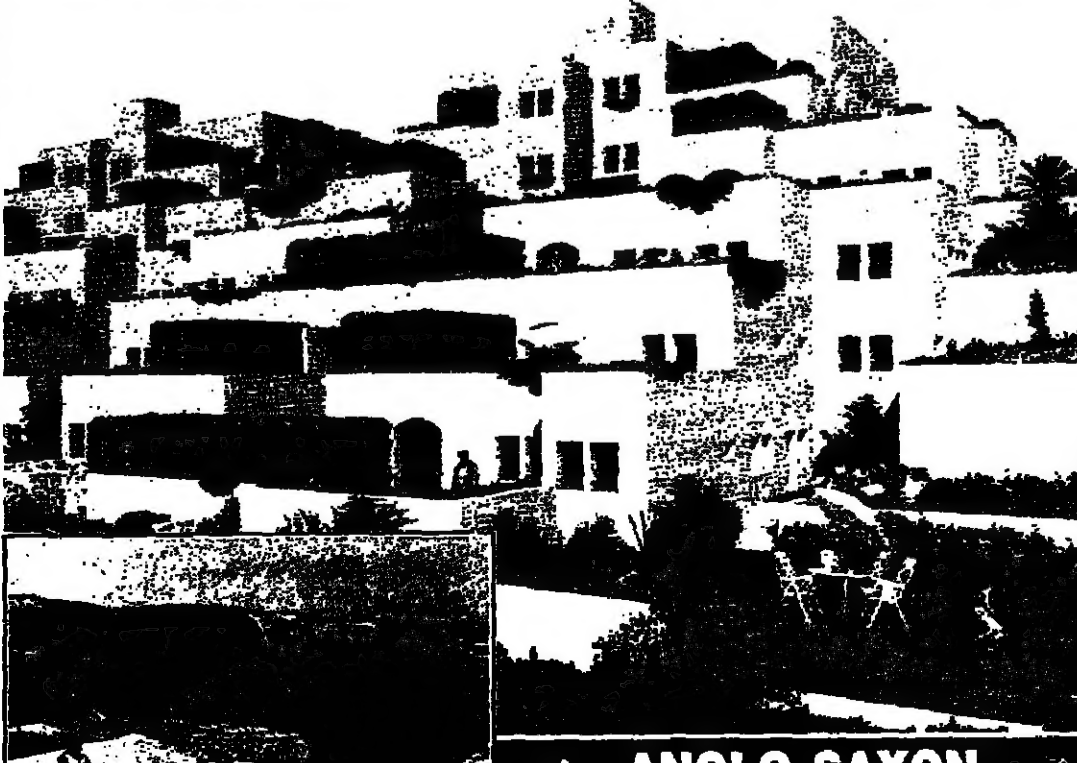

- Private access road
- Magnificent views overlooking the Judean Hills
- Elevator
- Huge terraces
- Storage rooms
- Underground parking

Only two minutes from the Malha Shopping Mall and ten minutes from the center of town

Only five minutes from Rehavia & half the price!

from $ 275,000

Visit our model apartment!

ANGLO-SAXON
Real Estate Agency (Jerusalem) Ltd.
2, Haspog St. Tel. 02-251161 Fax. 02-259207

Mourn the passing in his 90th year of SEN BARON

in Bulawayo, Zimbabwe.

SHAS's Wife: Rachel, Bulawayo
His Daughters and their husbands:
Merle and Gert Guttman, Kfar Shmaryahu,
Saone and Chester Crocker, Washington D.C.
Beverley and Alan Caplan, Moshav Manof.
Granddaughters: Mandy, Sheli, Yehudit, Batsheba, Karena, Rebecca, Tali, Mla, Daniella and great grandchildren

To Merle Guttman & The Baron Family
Your friends, colleagues and volunteers of ESRA join in offering their deepest condolences on the death of your father, BEN
in Bulawayo

United Israel Appeal of Canada Inc.

המגבית המאוחדת לישראל בקנדה אינק officers and staff extend sincere condolences to

Shmuel Rosenman
on the passing of his beloved mother

ZEHAVAH ROSENMAN ז"ל

Steven Ait Executive Vice President Dr. Amnon Shinar Director General, Israel Office

The Masorti Movement The Seminary of Judaic Studies
Are deeply grieved at the death of our colleague and student

JERRY POTACK ז"ל

We extend our sincere condolences to the family
May his soul be bound up in the bond of eternal life

The Board of Directors and the staff of the Mandel Institute, Jerusalem extend our deepest sympathies to Mrs. Barbara A. Mandel and her family on the passing of her mother

LILLIAN A. WEINBERGER

Mrs. Joyce Davidson and family deeply mourn the passing of their dear sister-in-law and aunt HARRIET (Hannah) DORFMAN ז"ל and express their heartfelt condolences to her Husband: Dr. Maurice Dorfman

Mother: Mrs. Tzivia Speler
Children: Yoel, Meir, Sigalit and Ariel
Daughter-in-law: Yael Grandson: Sdeur
and Brothers: Mr. Mordechai Speler and family
Mr. Dov Speler and family
כולנו יחד
המקום ירחם את נשמתה ויגדל ויחיה ויחיה ויחיה

The Martin Marietta Corporation extends its condolences to the family of SHLOMO ZABLUDOWICZ upon his untimely passing.

He was recognized in Israel as well as in the U.S. as a great industrialist leader.
Martin Marietta is proud of its long-term relationship with the Zabludowicz family and he will be missed by his friends and colleagues.

Norman R. Augustine
Chairman and CEO

BAR-ILAN UNIVERSITY extends its sincerest sympathies to Larry Roth and his family on the passing of his father, JOSEPH ROTH ז"ל
of Syracuse, New York

The unveiling of the tombstone of
Dr. MAURICE CHAYEN ז"ל will take place at Har Hamenuhot - Har Tamir (Section Dalet) on Sunday, August 28, at 4 p.m.
Learning of Mishnayot at 4 Abaranel St., at 6 p.m.

A stern prophet who fascinated the nation

It may have been just as well that Yeshayahu Leibowitz decided not to become a doctor after receiving a medical degree in 1934. Had his bedside demeanor resembled his subsequent public demeanor, a patient with a stubbed toe might have considered himself lucky to escape with amputation below the knee.

Prof. Leibowitz, who died yesterday at the age of 91, was distinguished by his predilection for hard and controversial observations that made him into a public figure that has held the nation in uncomprehending fascination for a generation.

Born in Riga, Latvia, in 1903 to a prosperous timber merchant, Leibowitz had a privileged youth, studying with private tutors. As a child, he excelled in family quizzes on Hebrew and politics. But he later told his grandchildren that he always lost quizzes on religious subjects to his younger sister Nechama, today considered one of the greatest living Bible scholars.

After the Germans occupied Riga in 1937, the family moved to Germany, where he studied chemistry and philosophy at the University of Berlin and biochemistry at the Kaiser Wilhelm Academy. Armed with a doctorate, he continued studies in medicine in Cologne and Heidelberg — "just for the knowledge," he once explained.

He received German citizenship but left the country in 1933 when Hitler rose to power. The following year he received his medical degree from the University of Basel and emigrated to Palestine where, in 1935, he began teaching chemistry at Hebrew University. He remained a full-time faculty member for the following 34 years, taking time out only for a stint as an officer during the War of Independence. While teaching, he also served for a number of years as editor-in-chief of the Encyclopedia Judaica.

"He was not a great scientist, but he was one of the best teachers at the Hebrew University," a colleague said, in an interview for a profile of Leibowitz last year. "People would come from all departments to hear him."

(Continued from Page One)
In the same breath, however, he said the existence of Christian churches in the vicinity of the Western Wall deeply pained him. He despised Christianity, blaming it for centuries of persecution of the Jews.

Leibowitz emerged as a voice of dissent in 1967, when he warned that Israel's triumphs in the Six-Day War would turn to ashes unless it quickly withdrew from the territories.

"I wrote on the seventh day that this brilliant military victory will prove to be a historical and political disaster for the state of Israel," Leibowitz once said.

He called on Israeli soldiers to refuse to serve in the territories, and believed the issue of the territories could lead the country to civil war.

"Our problem is not to liberate the Palestinians, our problem is to liberate Israel from this curse," Leibowitz told The Associated Press last year.

His nomination for the Israel Prize, generated such controversy that he eventually refused to accept it.

Still, despite Rabin's criticism of the nomination, Leibowitz in an interview with Ha'aretz two weeks ago Rabin as "Israel's De Gaulle" making the necessary hard political and diplomatic decisions.

Likud MK Dan Meridor who attended the funeral, said that he had not agreed with many of Leibowitz's views, but that his words always had cultural and moral depth.

Right-wing thinker Yisrael Eldad, who often debated with Leibowitz, refused to accept the Distinguished Citizen of Jerusalem award in 1990 when he learned it was to be shared with Leibowitz. Yesterday, however, Eldad said that he would feel the loss of his old debating partner, whom he referred to as "Yashi."

"In private conversation he was a good friend," Eldad said.

The late Professor Yeshayahu Leibowitz.

LEIBOWITZ

Speaking of Leibowitz yesterday, Hebrew University Prof. Aviezer Ravitzky described him as an "anti-theological theologian." Leibowitz, he said, made the religious public rethink basic issues, even if they did not agree with him.

Ravitzky noted that Leibowitz had lectured in no less than five faculties at the Hebrew University, on a wide range of subjects. Ravitzky also referred to Leibowitz as an expert on Maimonides.

Labor MK Avraham Burg described Leibowitz as "my moral compass," and said he was the most important person in his spiritual life.

Burg said that he most of his actions were guided by the teachings of Leibowitz, whom he had first met in their neighborhood synagogue in Jerusalem.

Rabbi Yehuda Amichai, the leader of the Meimad movement, said that although Leibowitz had deeply enriched religious thinking, he felt that Leibowitz's referring to IDF soldiers as "Judeo-Nazis" had been a serious mistake.

Former Ashkenazi chief Rabbi Shlomo Goren declined to make any statement about Leibowitz, saying he did not want to speak badly of the dead. Several other right-wing figures responded similarly.

Saudi company to help construct photo-satellite

Jerusalem Post Staff

THE United States has approved the participation of a Saudi company in a project for the manufacture of a photo-satellite, despite the objections of Israel and the CIA.

The Saudi company joined as an equity investor in the consortium of three companies already working on the EYEGLASS satellite. In return for its investment, the company will be provided with satellite services.

The EYEGLASS satellite can view objects as small as one meter.

The US Army and the CIA opposed a Saudi role in the project, but the US Commerce Department supported its participation, finally approving the company's investment.

Saudi satellite battle is another AWACS affair

ANALYSIS

GERALD M. STEINBERG

SAUDI Arabia's efforts to gain access to a highly accurate photo-satellite from the United States may trigger a conflict reminiscent of the 1981 AWACS affair. As in the case of the AWACS, the satellite project involves hundreds of millions of dollars, very sophisticated technology and the potential for major damage to Israel's national security.

The process began in early 1994, when the US government approved a request to license the sale of remote-sensing satellite services and technology. For many years the costs of these systems, such as LANDSAT, grew, while competition from the French SPOT satellite, as well as Russian systems, cut revenues. The US decided to privatize the development and operation of these satellites. Three firms, Litton-Itel, G.D.E., and Orbital Sciences, formed a consortium to build the EYEGLASS satellite.

After beginning project development, this consortium found that the market was very limited. The Saudis decided to buy an equity stake, and the firms that are invoiced, as well as the US Commerce Department, have an intense economic interest in keeping the Saudis in the project.

For Israel, the key issue is the potential strategic impact. With EYEGLASS, objects as small as one meter can be identified. (In comparison, the LANDSAT has a resolution of about 30 square meters.)

Although theoretically designed for civilian purposes, EYEGLASS will pick out and monitor planes parked on a runway, tanks, trucks, missiles, etc. It will also be able to monitor construction projects and traffic into and out of buildings.

This will give the Saudi army, and other Arab military forces that will have access to the data, the ability to assess Israeli strengths and weaknesses, and to plan a precision first strike against bases, plants, and other facilities.

Defenders of the sale claim that the field of view of this satellite can be restricted through electronic "shutter control," but this is quite difficult, given the geography.

For many years, the IDF and Defense Ministry have sought to acquire an orbital capability to monitor activities in Iran and Iraq. The importance of an independent overhead reconnaissance capability was emphasized during the 1991 Gulf War, when Israel realized that the US had almost no information on the Iraqi nuclear weapons program, and had failed to locate mobile SCUD missile launchers. After the war, Defense Minister Moshe Arens revealed that the Ofek program was designed to produce a reconnaissance satellite.

Although two test platforms have been launched successfully, an operational satellite will cost hundreds of millions of dollars, and will require a major technological effort. According to reports, Israeli requests for American assistance and technology, or for cooperation in this area, have all been rebuffed.

The Israeli government can also be expected to note that in making the technology available to the Saudis, the US government is violating pledges not to sell weapons or technology more advanced than that available to Israel. This pledge, which goes back to the era of Nixon and Kissinger, was recently reiterated by President Clinton in meetings with Prime Minister Rabin.

In the AWACS case, the sale was eventually approved in a very narrow vote in the US Senate, but only after a costly fight. Now, in the middle of the Middle East peace process, and with no other foreign policy successes, the Clinton administration cannot afford a similar battle. Unless Israel is convinced that the Saudi role in the EYEGLASS project will not pose a threat to its security, the conflict is likely to escalate.

The writer directs research on security and arms control at the DESA Center for strategic studies at Bar-Ilan University.

Two killed, nine hurt in road accidents

TWO people were killed and nine were injured in traffic accidents around the country yesterday.

Near the Golan Junction, two people were killed in a head-on collision. Shalva Kushner, 63, veered out of her lane for unknown reasons and crashed into a car driven by Dan Vladir. They were both killed instantly.

Eight people traveling in a commercial vehicle were injured yesterday morning when the driver lost control of the car and crashed into a large signpost in the Western Galilee. Four people sustained serious injuries while the rest were lightly hurt. One person was brought to Haifa's Rambam Hospital for treatment, while the others were treated at Nahariya's hospital.

In Eilat, a 16-year-old boy suffered serious head injuries when he was hit by a truck whose driver was learning how to drive and veered out of his lane. Menashe Nir Harazi was thrown a few meters by the impact of the crash. He was first brought to Josephthal Hospital, then flown to Soroka Hospital in Beersheba because of his serious condition. (Itm)

Five soldiers injured in accident on Gaza bypass road

Five IDF soldiers were injured yesterday when their jeep overturned after it was hit by a taxi on the Gaza Strip bypass road while they were on patrol.

The five were brought to Sheba

Hospital at Tel Hashomer where one was listed in serious condition, three in satisfactory condition and one in satisfactory to good condition. All five remain hospitalized.

The unveiling of the tombstone, in loving memory of MAX WEINBERGER ז"ל will take place at Eretz Hachaim Cemetery on Monday, August 22, 1994 at 2 p.m.

For transportation, please call 02-762119.
Doris Weinberger
Weinberger and Katten Families

Administrative detainees riot at Hasharon Prison

RAINE MARCUS

ADMINISTRATIVE detainees at Hasharon Prison attacked a guard yesterday who searched their wing. Prison Service officials said last night.

Prison guards who carried out a routine search of the religious prisoners' wing, where five administrative detainees are, held found a beeper in the possession of Baruch Ben-Yosef.

As punishment, authorities decided to disconnect a public telephone used by the five.

Ben-Yosef and another detainee objected, said authorities, and tried to force their way into a warder's office. The warder blocked the door, and an argument broke out during which one detainee allegedly cursed the warder.

Ben-Yosef had initially told warders that he used the beeper solely to receive messages from his family. But later, a man phoned the device during a visit to the prison.

Prison warden Eli Gabison called police, who questioned those involved in the incident. Authorities will probably press charges against the offenders.

Gazans to receive benefits with wages

Some 25,000 Palestinians from the Gaza Strip who work in Israel, will receive their social benefits as of next month as part of their wages, deposited directly into their bank accounts, rather than by checks, as they had been paid until now, the Labor and Welfare Ministry announced yesterday.

According to the agreement, finally reached yesterday after prolonged debating between the Labor Ministry and the Autonomy authorities, it was decided that the social benefit sums will be deposited through the Bank of Palestine in Gaza.

Every Gazan worker who does not have a bank account will have to go to his nearest bank branch in Gaza and open an account, the ministry's statement said.

'Technology to dominate future battlefield'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Technology and the swift exchange of battlefield information are likely to be the keys to winning future wars, in which a smaller US military will be asked to do more, Pentagon planners say.

One of the chief architects of military strategy says the battlefield of the future will link high-tech eyes and ears — satellites, radar planes and unmanned camera drones — with commanders controlling precision missiles and bombs.

Stopping a well-armed enemy quickly will require commanders to grasp "the dramatic effect of technology, if we can envision where it will take us, to see it in its expanse in the way it could affect our overall ability to do joint war fighting," Adm. William A. Owens told reporters Wednesday.

As vice chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Owens is the nation's second-highest ranking officer and one of the military's top battle scenario planners.

Technology now being developed will enable commanders to monitor in detail a battlefield 200 miles square, aware of virtually everything going on above ground, Owens said.

Improvements in weapons and surveillance technology continue because of, rather than in spite of, military spending cuts.

Smart bombs that can pinpoint targets, single shells that can knock out multiple tanks, and surveillance equipment that can give commanders a clear picture of the battlefield mean that a smaller military can do more, he said.

"We're not quite there yet, frankly," Owens added. "We've come a long way since Desert Storm. Our forces are much more capable."

Owens heads the five-member Joint Requirements Oversight Council, a group of four-star officers from each military service that is overseeing war games and touring the major military commands, looking for ways to improve military coordination among the service branches.

A key focus for Owens and the military leadership is improving communication between battlefield commanders and reconnaissance assets such as U-2 spy planes, satellites and unmanned camera planes.

The Pentagon is also investing hundreds of millions of dollars in improving its array of "smart" munitions.

These include laser-guided glide bombs, shells that contain multiple explosive devices with their own sensors, longer-range artillery, antitank ordnance that blasts downward on the vulnerable tops of tank turrets, and an array of so-called standoff weapons that can hit distant targets while keeping US planes out of enemy range.

Owens said the military is aware that not all battlefields will present the neat, treeless target field encountered in the Gulf War.

A Rwandan refugee transports clean water on his locally-made scooter on the outskirts of Goma.

Gangs add misery to Rwandan refugees

KIBUMBA, Zaire (Reuters) — Gangs of thugs and former soldiers are adding to the misery of hundreds of thousands of Rwandan refugees in the teeming camps of east Zaire, relief workers said yesterday.

"Security is now a major concern in the camps," UN High Commissioner for Refugees spokesman Panos Moutzidis told reporters. "Our staff has been threatened by youths brandishing rocks," said Johanna Grombach, spokeswoman for the International Committee of the Red Cross. "The new, worrying trend is that it's organized."

More than a million Rwandans swamped the Goma area in mid-July, fleeing civil war and ethnic massacres but creating a new disaster area where 33,000 have died of malnutrition, cholera, dysentery and other diseases.

"They are face to face with some of the worst aspects of human nature," says a Belgian doctor of the international medical charity Médecins Sans Frontières at Kibumba camp, 25 kilometers north of Goma.

"Food riots on a major scale could erupt any day," she added.

Food distribution was suspended for the umpteenth time at Kibumba yesterday while UN officials tried to work out a safe system to feed the needy.

On Tuesday, youths with machetes stole 20 tons of food in Kibumba. On Wednesday, former soldiers of Rwanda's defeated hard-line Hutu army threatened UN relief staff with a hand grenade at Mugunga camp.

Moutzidis said aid agencies had no immediate solution to security headaches most UN officials said were predictable in such a concentration of destitute people.

"Zairean authorities are responsible for law and order but Zairean soldiers have been in-involved in killing refugees, in stealing," Moutzidis said.

Two refugees were killed on Monday at Kibumba camp by a group of Zairean soldiers who were trying to steal a car.

Bringing a peacekeeping force in the camps was ruled out so he suggested perhaps refugees should organize their own police — all the more so because the Goma camps may turn into semi-permanent settlements.

In the meantime, former Rwandan soldiers appear to take the law in their own hands. Yesterday at the entrance of the main access track to Mugunga, some were brandishing sticks to control the constant flow of people.

"Soldiers often threaten us verbally to give them food handouts, they certainly are not very polite," said Leopold Tsengumba, a Rwandan refugee helping with distribution at a World Food Program warehouse.

Canadian spy agency probed for neo-Nazi links US orders tighter anti-terrorist air security

OTTAWA (Reuters) — Canada's domestic spy agency will be investigated for links with a white-supremacist group following reports that a paid informant helped set up and run the neo-Nazi organization, officials said this week.

The Toronto Sun newspaper reported Sunday that Grant Bristow, a founder and leading member of the Heritage Front, the country's largest neo-Nazi group, was on the payroll of the Canadian Security Intelligence Service.

Solicitor General Herb Gray told reporters Tuesday the government had asked an independent external review body to investigate the agency's connection with the neo-Nazi group.

"In order to clear the air we want the Security Intelligence Review Committee to look into the matter and make a report," Gray said.

A spokesman for CSIS would not say whether Bristow worked for the spy agency but he said CSIS had not broken any laws. He said the agency never commented on its operations.

The Toronto Sun said Bristow was recruited by CSIS in 1989, six months before the Heritage Front was set up. Members of the group told the newspaper Bristow had provided money for travel and other expenses.

Jewish organizations welcomed the investigation and said they were upset that taxpayers' dollars may have been used to create an antisemitic group.

WASHINGTON (Reuters) — Federal aviation officials disclosed this week that they had ordered US airlines to increase anti-terrorism measures following recent attacks on Jewish interests in several parts of the world.

The Federal Aviation Administration said the order went out for certain airports and flights, but gave no details.

It made the order public when asked about reports an order was issued because of the recent attacks on Jewish interests in Buenos Aires and London and the crash of a Panamanian plane last month blamed by some on a Lebanese suicide bomber.

The FAA said in a statement: "The FAA is in close contact with the intelligence community of the US government and we, through them, are closely monitoring the threat."

"The FAA required the implementation of countermeasures at certain locations and for certain flights as a precaution to ensure the continued safety of air travel."

Aviation Daily said the order was mainly for US airlines serving Israel to tighten their flight security and their security at airports where flights leave for Israel.

A US Air Transport Association official, who said the FAA order was issued this month, said no terrorist plans to target specific airlines or flights had been uncovered.

The FAA periodically issues such orders to airlines as a precautionary measure following overseas attacks even though no specific threats had been made to US interests.

Seized nuclear materials came from Russia

BONN (Reuters) — Smuggled plutonium seized in Germany definitely came from Russia and may have been heading for Third World states with nuclear ambitions, European scientists and German officials said yesterday.

As proof of its origin came in, Russia — which had earlier vehemently denied it was missing any radioactive materials — announced it had launched an investigation to find the source of the atomic contraband.

At the same time, St. Petersburg police reported three men had been caught in Kaliningrad on August 12 just as they were trying to sell a highly radioactive substance for $1 million.

Euroatom, the atomic energy agency that has been testing the four batches of nuclear materials seized in Germany in as many months, said the samples definitely came from Russia.

"There are only three or four places in the former Soviet Union which could have been the place of production," Wilhelm Gmelin, director of Euratom security control, said in Brussels. He named Chelyabinsk, Yekaterinburg and Arzamas, all in Russia.

Gmelin stressed this did not mean the plutonium-239 and enriched uranium had arrived directly from these plants.

These shipments, the first weapons-grade samples to surface in Europe after about 300 hauls of lesser-quality radioactive materials, were seized from middlemen but seemed destined for developing countries eager to build a nuclear bomb, German officials said.

"There are no indications that [the buyers] are terrorists or other people," said Johannes Gerster, a member of the parliamentary control commission that discussed nuclear smuggling with Kohl's aide Bernd Schmidbauer.

"All I can say is that they are states that want to produce atomic weapons," he told ARD television on Wednesday evening. "We're talking about crazy sums of money. Private people can't pay that, countries must be behind it."

The only name mentioned officially so far is Pakistan.

Berlin police said on Wednesday evening they had raided seven flats that day and found evidence plutonium had either just been sent or was to be sent to the South Asian state.

A Pakistan embassy spokesman in Bonn said: "This has come as a complete surprise to us. We have nothing to do with this."

As public concern about uncontrolled atomic arsenals mounted, Bavaria said it wanted to make the life sentence mandatory for anyone caught smuggling nuclear materials.

Bosnian Serbs to seek union with Serbia

SARAJEVO (AP) — In another slap at world opinion, Bosnian Serb leaders announced yesterday that they would formally seek to link their territories with Serbia and Montenegro.

The move appeared timed to increase opposition to an internationally negotiated Bosnian peace plan accepted by the republic's Croats and Muslims but vehemently opposed by the Bosnian Serb leadership.

With most Bosnian Serbs appearing opposed to the peace plan, which would strip them of nearly one-third of the 70 percent of Bosnia they now hold, their leaders have said they would abide by the results of an August 27-28 referendum on its fate.

Yesterday's announcement on the planned union of Serb lands, carried by the Bosnian Serb agency Srna, seemed to be an attempt to churn up even more opposition to the plan.

Srna quoted Momcilo Krajisnik, a key aide to Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic, as saying both Bosnian Serbs and their rebel brethren in Croatia would formally ask Serbia and Montenegro for permission to join them and create "Greater Serbia."

But Krajisnik, who made the comments at a Bosnian Serb assembly in Pale, southwest of Sarajevo, seemed to be speaking mostly for effect.

Algerian quake kills at least 147

ALGIERS (AP) — An earthquake struck northwest Algeria early yesterday, killing at least 147 people and injuring 289, local rescue officials said.

The quake, which hit about 400 kilometers west of Algiers, registered a preliminary magnitude of 5.6, according to the Algerian Center for Astrophysical Research. A quake of such strength can cause widespread structural damage and take a considerable human toll in populated areas. Several aftershocks followed, the strongest of which had a preliminary magnitude of 5.1. Fear of aftershocks drove thousands of people from their homes and spend the night in the street.

Homes built of mud-and-straw brick collapsed with the first shake, and 8,000 to 10,000 people were left without shelter.

Terrorism charges dropped against US death row inmate

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Prosecutors dismissed terrorism charges against a death row inmate who was convicted of murdering his daughter based on evidence uncovered while he was being watched for his pro-Palestinian activism.

Zian Isa, 62, is in poor health with diabetes and unlikely to win an appeal of his 1991 murder conviction, federal prosecutors said Tuesday.

Trying him on terrorism charges would be long, costly and could reveal classified information, they added.

Zia and three co-defendants were charged last year with plotting to kill Jews, blow up the Israeli Embassy in Washington and kill anyone who could expose the plots.

Authorities said all were members of the Abu Nidal terrorist organization.

The three co-defendants pleaded guilty last month to racketeering charges, admitting they smuggled money, bought weapons, recruited members, illegally obtained passports and helped in the planning of terroristic acts.

The only killing carried out was the stabbing of Isa's daughter, Tina, slain in 1989 by Isa and his wife, Maria, for turning her back on Palestinian ways. Maria Isa was also convicted of murder, but her death sentence was overturned on appeal.

FBI agents learned of the slaying when they bugged Isa's apartment while investigating his Palestinian activities.

HOLOCAUST SURVIVORS

Increase your disability pension from Germany. Germany lawyer is again in Tel Aviv (Aug 23-28).

For dates please call my number in Munich:

Tel. 0049-89-82910890

Michael Wittl, Gleichmannstr. 1, 81241 Munich.

The Jewish Agency

Moshav Kadesh Barnea

A project to prepare new immigrants for agricultural work and life on a moshav is being conducted at MOSHAV KADESH BARNEA.

Families of immigrants with children interested in the project can receive further information by calling:

Tel. 07-555763, Adina or
Tel. 07-551317, Itzik

David Miller & Eddie Freudmann invite you to join them for a DE LUXE SUCCOT HOLIDAY

at the 5 star

Sharon Hotel, Herzliya Pituah

Only a limited number of rooms available
Price: 8 nights $795 + VAT includes half board in superior rooms, plus free afternoon coffee & cake. Shorter stays possible.

Details and reservations:
CALL EDDIE, 09-829805, 339171;
or (evenings) 09-614146.

Cubans flood Florida, governor calls emergency

KEY WEST, Florida (AP) — Gov. Lawton Chiles declared an immigration emergency yesterday and asked for federal help coping with the hundreds of Cuban refugees streaming from the island since the 1980 Mariel boatlift.

"There are hundreds of people, perhaps thousands, massing on the shores of Cuba," Chiles said, noting that Cuban leader Fidel Castro is making no effort to stop them from leaving. "The Castro government is clearly weakening. The day of freedom in Cuba is near."

But Chiles said the rising tide of Cuban refugees crossing the Florida Straits threatens to overwhelm the ability of state and local officials to provide housing, health care and other services to the immigrants.

Chiles asked federal authorities to activate their emergency plan for dealing with the massive influx of refugees from the Communist-ruled island 145 kilometers from Key West.

"A true emergency exists for the state of Florida... I am hopeful that we will see some response by the end of the day," the governor said at a late-morning news conference at the US Coast Guard base here.

In Washington, Attorney General Janet Reno warned against being "melodramatic."

Reno told her weekly news conference that "we have been able to manage the increased flow arriving from Cuba during the last several days in an orderly way and without disruption to the community."

The US Coast Guard has rescued record numbers of Cuban refugees over the past three days from a ragtag flotilla of flimsy boats and homemade rafts.

The Coast Guard picked up 537 Cubans on Wednesday, the highest single-day total since Mariel brought 125,000 people to Florida in five months.

On Tuesday, the agency rescued 339 Cubans and on Monday 282.

So far this year, 6,872 Cubans have arrived, compared with 3,656 in 1993.

Cuban journalists who spoke to The Associated Press by phone said refugees were setting off openly from beaches and harbors around Havana with no apparent interference from police.

More Foreign News, Page 12

This announcement appears as a matter of record only

ELTZALTXE

U.S. $274,000,000

2 Year

Interest Rate Swap

in Connection with Financing of

Two Boeing 747-400 Aircraft

Arranged by

Bank Leumi Le-Israel B.M.

In co operation with

The Chase Manhattan Bank, N.A.

bank leumi בנק לאומי

Tel Aviv

July 1994

12

JERUSALEM POST

DAVID RADLER, Chairman, Board of Directors
YEHUDA LEVY, President & Publisher
Founded in 1922 by GERSHON AGRON

DAVID BAR-ILLAN, Executive Editor
JEFF BARAK, Managing Editor
ALEC ISRAEL, Associate Editor, Copy
NEEL COHEN, News & Business Editor
DAVID BRIN, Night Editor
ESTHER HECHT, Features Editor
JOEL REBIBO, Op-ed Editor
THOMAS O'DWYER, Foreign Editor

AVI GOLAN, Vice President, Marketing & Advertising
DAPHNE RAZ, Vice President, Sales & Circulation
PAUL STASZEWSKI, CPA, Vice President, Finance
YOSSI HORN, Vice President, Production
RAY LEWIS, Circulation Manager

EDITORIAL OFFICES AND ADMINISTRATION The Jerusalem Post Building, P.O. Box 81, Ramat Gan, Jerusalem 91000
Telephone 315666. Telex 26121. Fax 389527. ADVERTISING - 315606. 315637-40. Fax 388408. TEL AVIV: 5 Rehov Hamasger.
POB 28398 (61283) Telephone 6390333. Fax 6390277. HAIFA: 19 Nardun, Hader Hacarmel. Telephone 627124. Published daily, except Saturday, in Jerusalem, Israel by The Palestine Post Ltd. Printed by The Jerusalem Post Press in Jerusalem. Registered at the G.P.O. © The Jerusalem Post 1994. Reproduction, or storage in a retrieval system, or any other form, is prohibited without permission. Editors: 1932-1955 GERSHON AGRON. 1955-1974 TED LURIE. 1974-1975 LEA BEN DOR. 1975-1989 ARI RATH and ERWIN FRENKEL. 1990-1992 N. DAVID GROSS

The wrong ban

THE Interior Ministry, nominally one of the portfolios held by Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin but actually still run by the Shas Party, is apparently out to prove that it can be as obdurate, inane and unreasonable as the next ministry. Charging the relatively new Arabic weekly Bayan, published in Jerusalem, with having links to Hamas, the ministry shut it down.

Had the official who made the decision been employed by the PLO, he would have received a bonus for his effort. In fact, there are those who believe that the paper was closed to help the PLO in its struggle for influence with Hamas. The action also made Yasser Arafat's order to stop the distribution of the pro-Jordanian daily Al-Nahar and the magazine Akhbar al-Balad three weeks ago appear reasonable. If democratic Israel can close a newspaper for no apparent reason, it should be acceptable for the PLO to do so.

Nor does the service rendered the PLO end there. As PLO officials have pointed out, had the paper been published by Israeli Arabs in, say, Nazareth, it would not have been banned. The only reason it was closed was that it was published by Palestinians in eastern Jerusalem and distributed there and in the administered territories.

As Palestinian journalist Khaled Amara, a contributor to Bayan, put it, the closing of the paper weakens Israel's claim to eastern Jerusalem. "If the government treats the paper as if it were in occupied territory, then Israel is admitting that part of Jerusalem is indeed occupied territory," he said on Wednesday, as he was demonstrating against the closure.

It is not that the government, acting under the constant threat of terrorism, has no right to close down a newspaper which encourages violence and murder. Duty-bound to safeguard the lives of its citizens and do everything within its power to prevent the activities of terrorist groups, the government can and should resort to this drastic step if it is indeed warranted. It is, after all, the state's ongoing war against terror - as well as its official state of war with Arab countries - which wholly justifies military censorship in Israel.

But Bayan was not charged with a single violation of censorship regulations. It was accused of "identifying with Hamas positions" and including known Hamas figures among its writers - all well within the legal and permissible. What this means is that the weekly, like the Hamas and other "rejectionists," is opposed to the Israel-PLO agreement and the peace process. And while such negative sentiments may be regrettable and disturbing, they cannot be prohibited in a democratic society. The paper never advocated violence nor any other illegal action in opposing the agreement. And it is only such advocacy that the censorship laws are intended to prevent.

That Israel must continue its war against terrorism - whether initiated by Hamas, Fatah or any other terrorist organization - is a given. It is a brutal, nerve-testing war which should be pursued with resolve and determination, regardless of the agreement with the PLO and the peace talks. But it is difficult to see how closing a small weekly for expressing ugly opinions can help Israel in this war. If anything, it can only make Israel appear as insecure and fearful of opposition as the dictatorial rulers around it.

France's nemesis of terrorism

UNLIKE the British and Germans, the French remain robustly pro-intellectual in their approach to politics, never shrinking from boosting prominent writers, artists and philosophers of left and right to the highest posts.

All the more intriguing, then, was the elevation of outspoken "top cop" Charles Pasqua - a man once derisively known to the left as "Trunchepo, Charlie" for his no-nonsense law and order policies - to the Interior Ministry. Despite being set upon by a host of leftists and liberals, Pasqua's recent war on terrorism and Islamic fundamentalism has earned him massive public support. The latest opinion polls show a whopping 71 percent of the population feel that Pasqua and Prime Minister Edouard Balladur's government have the ability to protect them from Islamic terrorism. Fifty-seven percent fully approved of the police sweep across Paris, to flush out extremists masquerading as refugees.

The poll was taken before the French intelligence coup that put Carlos the Jackal behind bars. Pasqua bluntly stated that only he and Balladur knew of the progress of the secret operation and President Mitterrand was content to be "merely informed" that something was afoot.

France's refusal to forget the murder of its two intelligence officers by Carlos in 1975, and his alleged involvement in a street bomb that cost a Paris woman her life, has given the French people confidence that their security is a top priority. It is the sort of confidence that hitherto probably only Israelis possessed. Support for Pasqua's policies sweeps across the left-right divide, a sure sign that common sense, courage and action remain the most admired attributes in a democratic leader.

But the greatest accolade has come not from his own people, but from the mullahs of Iran. On Wednesday, the Iranian media launched a blistering personal attack on Pasqua and the ministers who back him. The Iranians, who said not a word about the recent murder of five French expatriates in Algeria, or the 4,000 deaths resulting from the campaign of their terrorist Islamic allies there, said: "Pasqua has pitched himself against all the world's Moslems. With his imagination, he has put a question mark against one of the great divine religions." What they mean, of course, is the Iranian version of Islam.

French Defense Minister Francois Leotard on Monday bluntly stated that Islamic fundamentalism is as big a danger as Nazism once was. The Iranian statement answered: "Comparing Islam with the Nazi movement is not only offensive, it is also totally inaccurate."

Bravo to Interior Minister Pasqua and his colleagues. The Iranian response is proof positive that they are definitely doing something right.

Does Assad keep his word?

DANIEL PIPES

HAFEZ Assad has such a good reputation for keeping his promises, even opponents acknowledge his probity. No less an authority than the head of IDF Intelligence, Uri Saguy, has asserted that "it and when he signs an agreement, [Assad] will keep his word."

Foreign Minister Shimon Peres concurred: "With the Syrians it is very hard to reach an agreement but the agreement will stand." Odd they should say this, because the Syrian dictator has a long record of breaking his promises.

Assad gained his enviable reputation of trustworthiness by virtue of his commitment to the May 1974 Separation of Forces Agreement with Israel to "scrupulously observe the cease-fire on land, sea and air" and "refrain from all military action." According to Ze'ev Schiff, the doyen of Israeli military correspondents, "both sides have adhered to the Separation of Forces Agreement since it was first reached, and violations have been negligible."

American officials agree. Richard Murphy, the former assistant secretary of Near Eastern Affairs, confirms that the agreement was in fact "scrupulously observed."

But focusing only on that 1974 agreement ignores the many agreements Assad has broken with several governments, including those of Israel, Lebanon and Turkey. And a close look even at the 1974 agreement reveals some serious breaches. Let's take a look at some examples.

The "red line" understanding. In April 1976, Israel acquiesced to Syrian forces entering Lebanon in return for several assurances, dubbed "red lines," brokered by American officials. These unwritten agreements were to circumscribe the Syrian use of force in Lebanon. In their more important provisions, Assad agreed not to deploy in Lebanon aircraft, surface-to-air missiles, or more than one brigade of soldiers.

Damascus breached all three of these provisions. It ferried troops by helicopter and deployed surface-to-air missiles in the Zahle area of Lebanon in 1981. Israelis knew about these offenses. Writing in his private capacity, Itamar Rabinovich (currently ambassador to the US) termed them, respectively, an "infringement" and an "unequivocal violation" of the 1976 agreement. Nor were these merely technical issues; he said the Syrian missiles amounted to "a Lebanon. Of course, they are still there.

Damascus first agreed to leave in October 1978, as part of the Riyadh-Cairo accords. In September 1982, it signed the Fez Declaration which called on the Lebanese and Syrian governments to begin discussions on this subject. In October 1989, to win Lebanese Christian support for a revision of the Lebanese government struc-

The record shows that he does not - except when it is convenient for him serious threat" against Israeli interests.

Assad ignored the prohibition on aircraft a second time, in October 1990, when his air force had an active role in the Syrian conquest of Beirut.

He violated the red-line agreement even more profoundly by sending far more than one brigade into Lebanon; over the years some 10 brigades have regularly been stationed there. In short, Assad sought not just to tip the balance of power in Lebanon but to control the whole country. Yair Evron of Tel Aviv University writes that Damascus thereby "overstepped" and "transgressed" its 1976 understanding.

Worst of all, Assad has on occasion denied the existence of the red-line agreement, and so his very obligations to maintain them. He once told a Lebanese group, "Do not concern yourselves with the 'red line' which the Americans and the Israelis are talking about. It does not exist, [and] in any event I cannot see it."

Agreements to leave Lebanon. On three occasions since 1976, the Syrian authorities concurred with decisions made by other bodies that Syrian troops should leave the Ta'if Accord). Assad accepted a provision that Syrian troops would be redeployed from their positions in Beirut to the Bekaa Valley two years after four conditions had been met. Those conditions were fulfilled in September 1990, but September 1992 came and went without any change. (Indeed, arrive by plane in Beirut and you'll encounter Syrian troops right in the airport.)

PKK anti-Turkish activities. In 1987 and 1992, Damascus signed security protocols with Turkey promising to shut installations used by the PKK, the anti-Turkish group of Kurds. In addition, the Syrians time and again assured Turkish officials that the "PKK" would cause them no more problems. But year after year little changed on the ground.

A base would ostensibly close down, only to reopen quietly somewhere else. In October 1993, a Turkish official revealed that Damascus and the PKK had agreed that "Syrian commanders are leading some PKK terror units."

Operation Accountability. In July 1993, Assad reached an agreement with Secretary of State Christopher whereby he would in the future prevent any forces in southern Lebanon from launching rocket attacks on Israel. Less than a year later, not only did Katyushas rain down on the Galilee, but Damascus sources asserted that "Syria has not agreed with the Israelis to stop the firing of Katyushas on northern Israel," and denied the existence of any deal with Israel.

Golan Heights disengagement. Even Assad's reputation for having fulfilled his 1974 agreement with Israel is undeserved.

While it is true that the agreement ended all violence across the Syrian-Israeli border and made the Golan Heights not just a quiet place but perhaps the safest in the Middle East, that is not the same as saying that Damascus fulfilled all its obligations.

First, Assad reassured Jerusalem of his nonbelligerent intentions by promising that "Syrian civilians will return" to the territory evacuated by Israeli forces. In fact, civilians have not moved into the area and it remains a military zone.

Second, the Syrians in 1992 moved commandos into Kuneitra and heavy artillery elsewhere into the demilitarized zone they had agreed to maintain under the terms of the 1974 agreement. In the "thin-out" strip within 25 kilometers of the border, they illegally placed 21 surface-to-air missiles and eight missile launchers. But these violations received no attention, for Prime Minister Rabin apparently decided (and this is the amazing part) to ignore reports about them by the United Nations observer force.

Assad's 20-year pattern of behavior establishes that he regularly breaks his promises. Typical of a despot, he keeps his word when it's convenient and breaks it when not.

The writer is editor of the Middle East Quarterly, published in Philadelphia, and author of a forthcoming book, Syria Beyond the Peace Process.

When will Israel bury the bully club?

Yael Dayan

I began in subdued tones, a matter of style. "We know whom we're dealing with [the PLO and its chief]. Let them sweat a little. That's all there is."

There was no mention of chemistry or physiology or the values separating the people, not just the leaders.

"They" (those who, by implication, are not like us) are not capable of, and don't even want to, live democratically, efficiently, collecting taxes and maintaining a judicial, economic or health system.

We, of course, abide by High Court rulings, the Declaration of Independence, egalitarian and liberal legislation; we have no corruption or cumbersome bureaucracy. We shall not pass a law limiting imports for reasons of kashrut; we have no agunot (abandoned wives or widows forbidden to re-wed), no persons disqualified for marriage.

We have no white-collar criminals; and administrative procedures, or receiving rights we are entitled to, are simple matters, effected politely and quickly.

But "they" are parasites, starting out with a huge debt, and dependent on donations. We live by the toil of our hands and enjoy economic independence.

The only good thing about the Gazans is that we are rid of them; there is almost a consensus on this.

Those who were disillusioned when their malicious predictions - that there would be a massacre there and Sabra and Shatila would be a picnic compared to Gaza and Khan Yunis - did not materialize, now console themselves, like frustrated prophets, with the news that "they are killing their brothers, mostly collaborators."

No one refers to the health and education situation, the filth, the sewage, the poverty and misery; nor is there self-blame or apology or a clear analysis of exactly what we did about open sewers in Gaza, or the dimensions of unemployment and poverty in Rafiah.

It's as if we weren't there for 27 years, responsible for the good and the bad, for the welfare and security of the residents. As if we allowed them to develop and have relations with the rest of the world, and imposed free, compulsory education, a tax system, and national insurance; enabled the purchase of medical equip-ward from us for their good behavior; that we are the giving side, they the receiving. ("And what have they been giving?" people here ask. And the answer is that, with difficulty, they are shaking off their chains and handcuffs, temporarily and to a limited degree.)

They are ungrateful. It is not clear whether they are "entitled" to National Insurance payments or computer listings in the Population Registry. They are told to "prove they are entitled" to our charity, without any understanding that what they get will be by right.

We've withdrawn from Gaza. But not from the need to be occupiers

Our violations of the agreement are no fewer than theirs; but we totally lack the magnanimity of the victor, the strong, the settled.

There is no symmetry between those shooting and those weeping, between those shot and the weepers. The work we provided for them served the idleness of our economy and its calculations more than it did the Gazans.

Intentionally or by force of inertia we were both military occupiers and oppressors of all initiatives. Gazans were forbidden for years to acquire facsimile machines, out of fear they would be vehicles for incitement.

We behaved like colonialists of the worst kind, and even though we withdrew from Gaza, we have not shaken off these attributes. We hand out grades and force an entire people to face matriculation tests of a kind we never passed, and measure them by a standard not applied to ourselves.

We are an examining board that subjects an entire people to an educational pattern and obstacle course without even indicating what they will find at the end of the tunnel if they pass this humiliating course.

Security is, indeed, our affair; and to maintain it they need the means. It's not our affair who is authorized to sign for that; when we supervise the transfer of funds and decide who signs to eliminate the sewage, it is worth remembering who left the sewers open all those years, and the mosquitoes that bred there.

The arrogance, the feeling of superiority, the lack of values, the ignorance, are our problem. What can be done is to stop tormenting them, pestering them. There's no need to be judgmental; they don't go to our school, are not moving one class ahead or down.

Characteristically, Jerusalem Mayor Olmert says that Nabil Shaath, Yasser Abed Rabbo and Arafat have no faith, are not religious men; that for them prayer on the Temple Mount is a political act, not the act of people who come quietly, modestly, to commune with their Creator. Thus speaks the censor of faith and religion.

This is in complete contrast to Sharon, Shamir, Rabin, Peres and Olmert himself - all their visits to the Western Wall or to a synagogue flow from the desire to commune with their God and from their burning faith, which manifests in their immaculate observance of kashrut and all 613 mitzvot.

And in the West Bank, a moment before the handing over of power, during the IDF's search in the village of Dinba, our soldiers filled a washing machine with flour, and TV sets and other instruments were smashed. A farewell gift, a step toward confidence-building?

Even though we are accustomed to this, the punitive rods must be put away.

The writer is a Labor MK.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

NO BOYCOTT

Sir, - Charging the American Jewish Congress of succumbing to the Arab Boycott (Letters, J.P., August 9) by offering tours to Jordan for Americans in Israel is breathtaking in its perversity. Allow me to elucidate:

In 1991 and 1993 members of AJCongress's Board of Trustees visited Jordan (and Saudi Arabia) at the invitation of each country's monarch, to discuss the peace process. AJCongress's acceptance of each invitation was conditional on both countries' agreement to give entry to AJCongress leaders traveling on their standard American passports containing Israel entry and exit stamps. Their subsequent arrival marked the first travel to either country by ordinary US citizens with passports not purged of evidence of a visit to Israel.

In 1993 - based on our belief that peace was at hand, but long before the Washington Declaration was contemplated - AJCongress first considered offering tours to Jordan. We indicated to the Jordanian Embassy in Washington (and received its unprecedented agreement) our conditions that members of the American Jewish Congress would visit Jordan only if they could travel roundtrip from Israel to Jordan across the Allenby-King Hussein Bridge, and they could travel on their standard, Israel-stamped US passports.

The Washington Declaration signed in Washington by King Hussein and Prime Minister Rabin envisioned "third-country" citizens being immediately permitted to travel openly between the two countries, and Israelis and Jordanians traveling across the border once the formal peace treaty is signed. To accuse the American Jewish Congress of participating in the Arab boycott for complying with the terms of the Washington Declaration is preposterous.

GEOFFREY WEILL,
Director, AJCongress
International Travel Program
New York.

TECHNOLOGICAL LIMITATIONS

Sir, - Supporters of withdrawal from the Golan claim that such a move will not effect the balance of power since the United States will supply Israel with advanced technology which will offset the loss of the Golan.

But even if it were possible to rely on the United States to "deliver the goods," this is still a temporary technological edge in return for permanently relinquishing a topographic advantage.

'ANGELIC' WALDHEIM
Sir, - Israel's government has real gall to protest the Vatican's award to Kurt Waldheim. In recent weeks, the terrorists who planned the Mas'at massacre of schoolchildren in 1974 were smuggled into Gaza and were allowed to leave without being put on trial. Fatima Birnawi, who in October 1967 planted bombs in Jerusalem the-

In order to appreciate the temporary nature of technological supremacy, one need only visit the Air Force Museum. Almost all of the planes shown represented, in their time, the most advanced technology. Today they are useful only as museum pieces.

The Golan cannot be traded for technology which, by its very nature, becomes obsolete with time.

DR. AARON LERNER
Ra'anana.

Waldheim, has recently been appointed Commander of the Palestinian Women's Police force. These are just two examples of the capitulation to terrorists. Kurt Waldheim is an angel by comparison.
MICHAEL WILSCHANSKI
Toronto, Canada.

VISIT TO JORDAN

Sir, - As the wife of a Reform rabbi, deeply committed to the peace process, I was particularly excited to see that the American Jewish Congress had taken the initiative to advertise in The Jerusalem Post that it would sponsor a delegation to Jordan that would depart from Israel.

Indeed, the time has come for Jews to proudly visit the Kingdom of Jordan and to do so as identifying Jews and not as a surreptitious part of a non-Jewish delegation.

Yet, when I called the AJC office in Jerusalem, I was told that no one in the delegation would be allowed to wear a yarmulka, that no provisions had been made for kosher food and that we would not be able to conduct our egalitarian minyan on the premises of the hotel or in any other facility in Jordan.

Is this the kind of identifying Jewish delegation to Jordan that we had hoped for?
(Name and address supplied)
Jerusalem.

SHAATH IN JERUSALEM

Sir, - In your report on August 14 on Mr. Shaath's visit to Jerusalem, it was inaccurately reported that he "had lunch at the Ambassador Hotel" whereas he had lunch at the National Palace Hotel.

FOUAD ABU EL HAJ,
Manager,
Jerusalem. National Palace Hotel

CORRECT WORDING

Sir, - The Golan Settlers Committee close a wrong wording for their campaign to retain the Golan. "Peace with the Golan" is obviously not achievable and therefore sounds unrealistic. The campaign slogan should be: "The Golan is more important than a peace treaty."

DR. JACOB ROSIN
Netanya.

More Letters to the Editor, Page 12

The Palestinian 'White Paper'

SHMUEL KATZ

IN his article jointly written with Amos Kollek, "A pinch of pragmatism goes a long way" (August 5), it was surely foolhardy of Teddy Kollek to recall the relations between the Zionist establishment and the British Mandatory Government in its final years.

He refers, in breathtaking understatement, to the way "we quickly forgave" the British who were "responsible for thousands of Jews dying needlessly during and after World War II... Refugees ships such as the Surma sank... with hundreds of Holocaust survivors on board because the British authorities refused to let them into Palestine. And the Surma was just one case of many."

Indeed it was. Mr. Kollek, however, omits to mention the other areas - widely documented in recent years - of the British government's lethal behavior towards the Jewish People; how it fought every effort and every practical proposal for bringing Jewish men, women and children out of the Nazi hell even before the Holocaust.

He omits to mention altogether the oppressive anti-Jewish regime that reigned in Palestine itself; and that that regime and all the terrible acts against the Jews of Europe were "legitimized" by the British government's infamous White Paper of 1939. That document proclaimed Britain's unabashed plan for "final" betrayal: death of the Jewish State - shutting the gates of Palestine and freezing the Jewish National Home into a minority community in an Arab state.

Mr. Kollek declares that in spite of all its sins "we quickly forgave" the British. But the Zionist establishment in Palestine (the "we" to whom Kollek so obviously refers) did not merely "forgive" the British government. While its policy against Europe's Jews was being pursued in single-minded persistence and its anti-Zionist regime in Eretz Yisrael was engaged in ferocious repression of the Jewish Underground's revolt, the Zionist establishment was busy collaborating in that repression. Teddy Kollek was by his own testimony one of the chief executives of that collaboration.

These surely significant facts are also missing from his article. It is only fair, however, to recall some of the characteristic elements of that period.

Those who collaborated with the British are now doing the same - and worse - with the Arabs

In July 1944, Zionist leaders Chaim Weizmann and Moshe Shertok (Sharett) begged the British government to order the bombing of Auschwitz and of the railway which was bringing thousands of Jews daily from Hungary to the death camp.

After weeks of delay the British government's reply was delivered. It said that such an attack was not feasible. In fact, information published at that time, and amplified by later evidence, showed that Auschwitz was perhaps the only target in that region that was not attacked by the Allies.

That was summer 1944. Four months later, in December, a friendly letter came from Zionist leader Chaim Weizmann to British premier Winston Churchill reporting that "our cooperation with the authorities in stamping out terrorism [that is the IZL and the LHY - S.K.] is proceeding satisfactorily. Five hundred names of suspects have already been supplied by the police as a result of which over 250 have been arrested."

The procedure was for a group of Hagana members to pounce on known or suspected members of the IZL and haul him to the nearest police station. From there he was subsequently transported several thousand miles into British detention camps in East Africa - where he spent years of exile. The liaison officer between the Zionist establishment and the British police who made this possible was, as it happens, Mr. Kollek. This is in fact the history of the "Season" (the hunt for IZL and LHY members by the Hagana on behalf of the British.)

THE CONTINUATION of that history is fascinating. After the end of World War II, in 1945, Zionist leaders realized that they had blundered. They agreed then to join with the IZL and the LHY in a campaign of resistance to the British. This lasted until mid-1946, when the British cracked down on a number of Zionist leaders. They were detained - until they undertook to refrain from further resistance (IZL and LHY continued the struggle till the British were in fact forced to leave Palestine).

It was the Zionist establishment's decision to stop the resistance to the British that led to Moshe Sneh's resignation in disgust from the leadership of the Hagana.

Precisely while his leaders were in detention, Mr. Kollek wrote a letter to the British journal New Statesman and Nation (August 10, 1946), in which he boasted: "In my capacity as liaison officer between the Jewish Agency, which was actively and consistently working to break the terror, and the Palestine authorities," he passed on the information "in the usual way" which led to the finding of two batteries of mortars which, Kollek asserted, had been trained by the IZL on the British headquarters in the King David Hotel, as well as other similar information designed to undermine the Jewish resistance.

There is a motive for Kollek's initiative. Just as "we" quickly forgave the British, so now he demands that we forgive the Arabs. He seems unaware of the full chilling impact of the parallel that he evokes.

The British had their White Paper promising the doom of Zionism, death to the Jewish State by shutting the gates of Palestine to Jewish immigration. The Arabs have their "White Paper" - the Palestinian Covenant which proclaims the destruction of the Jewish State, and indeed, the expulsion of most of the Jews living in it.

The British never budged from their purpose envisaged in the White Paper, but continued to enjoy the "forgiveness" and the collaboration of the Zionist leaders. The Arabs have not budged one inch from the Palestinian Covenant, have continued their daily campaign of murder of Jews (now carried out by Palestinians who call themselves "Hamas") and enjoy the lively collaboration of the Israeli government in implementation of this, the first phase of the dismantlement of Israel.

Their collaboration goes so far as to dissimulate, and lie, and cover up the Arabs' lethal purpose. What indeed could be more forgiving?

The writer has published several books on Zionist and Jewish history.

And now a message from our local cable cabal

MARSHALL McLuhan

HILLEL THALMAN

peered over the lectern and said to me, "You're going to see big changes in Israeli society."

A safe bet any time. But the year was 1979 and I'd asked McLuhan about the significance of changing over from black-and-white TV to color.

Color TV, he proceeded to explain, is a deeper, more passive immersion. And McLuhan again was right. After all, he's the man who pointed out more than 20 years ago, "The Israelis can never remember and the Arabs can never forget."

The black-and-white TV picture is made of lines. You're outside the image, which dances at you like Kim Basinger behind that famous venetian blind. Color TV, on the other hand, is a pool of colored dots like those bins of foam balls that make have for kids to wallow in. The image engulfs you. It's structureless. At the esthetic forefront of color TV, the MTV music videos abandon linear logic, and another McLuhan aphorism bears remembering: "Faced with information overload, we have no alternative but pattern recognition."

Music videos are based on visual rhymes rather than on the logical unfolding of incidents or information. Visual rhyme - pattern recognition - is increasingly replacing logic in Israel's public sphere as the quantity or cussedness of information becomes unmanageable. Things are planned not to work right but to look right; where solutions are needed, we get imitations. Years ago, it was just Jewish philanthropists transporting slum kids to Ramat Hasharon for tennis lessons, gaining satisfaction from plugging deprived kids into a visible imitation of bourgeois lifestyle. Now it's whole governments reacting to deep problems between peoples by setting up a Rabin-Clinton-Husseini festival to visually imitate the pattern of the Rabin-Clinton-Arafat festival, which imitated the pattern of the Begin-Carter-Sadat festival, which not incidentally was Israel TV's first big color story.

But why do we seem to be losing our social conscience along with our personal intelligence? Why has the wealth all rolled suddenly over to one side of Israeli society like loose

Happiness lies just beyond the reach of the poor; at the perfume counter, the furniture store, the travel agency potatoes in a truck that speeds on curves? Is it that by immersing ourselves in entertainment to drown out the information overload, we have obtained so much individual, personal stimulation that we no longer notice other people?

THERE ARE three basic courses of action, all inefficient, when poor people can't afford essentials: You can make the poor people richer, make the essentials cheaper, or make the rich people richer in hopes that the money will reach the poor.

In Israel, making the rich people richer doesn't work because the extra money gets spent on foreign goods and services, not on what the Israeli poor produce. Making the essentials cheaper isn't efficient, we've been told, because too much goes to waste. Jordanian livestock is used to get fed on smuggled leaves of subsidized Israeli bread.

But if you give the money directly to the poor people, they may waste it on things they don't really need.

Someone is telling us that what the poor do really need is cable television. MK Meir Sheerit has proposed that cable companies should run advertising and should devote half their ad income to subsidizing cable subscriptions for poor people. Not food, not housing, not transportation, not school supplies, not even improvements in broadcast TV, but cable TV.

So that the immigrants among them can switch from the struggle of understanding Hebrew to the comfort of Russian. So that their kids can switch from educational TV to cartoons. So that instead of getting sleep they can watch Israeli cable compete with Luxembourg in late-night porn.

Is this another case of mistaking an imitation for a solution? Does someone, trained on pattern-recognition rather than on thinking, suppose that by giving cable TV to people who can't normally afford it we can give them the lifestyle of people who can? Or is cable a minor vice that's perceived as a right, like coffee at the workplace or cigarettes in prison?

Or could it be, worst of all, that a profiteering cabal is less interested in bringing cable to the poor via advertising than in bringing advertising to the poor via cable? If so, then the next big changes in Israeli society will be unattractive ones, as the poor are further immersed in the message that happiness and dignity dwell just beyond their reach at the perfume counter, the furniture store and the travel agency.

The writer is a Tel Aviv-based freelancer.

Political courage of their convictions

YOSEF GOELL

IN 1956, John F. Kennedy, then a junior senator from Massachusetts, published Profiles in Courage, about a handful of American politicians who at crucial points in American history showed great political courage in doing the right thing - regardless of the risk to their careers and lives.

Kennedy's list of courageous politicians included well-known names - like president John Quincy Adams, and senators Daniel Webster and Sam Houston - and some virtually forgotten men, like Kansas senator Edmund G. Ross, whose single vote saved Andrew Johnson from impeachment in 1868.

I was reminded of this book on a tour this week to some of the settlements in the Jordan Rift Valley. The tour was organized by a Labor Party bloc affiliated with the Third Way, the new movement which backs the peace process but opposes ceding the Golan, the Jordan Rift Valley, or any parts of the Greater Jerusalem region.

The tour convinced me all the more that Israel must retain as wide a swath as possible of the Rift Valley in any final settlement with the Palestinians; partly for obvious security reasons, but also to prevent a PLO-dominated Palestinian autonomy or sovereignty from insinuating its guerrilla forces into Jordan when that kingdom becomes involved in a bloody struggle for the succession to the ailing King Hussein.

The tour also reminded me of the cynical neglect on the part of both Labor and Likud governments of the past 27 years which is responsible for the presence of a paltry 2,800 Israelis in the entire Rift Valley, which with the exception of Jericho is nearly devoid of any Arab inhabitants.

Similar cynical neglect by both Labor and Likud governments was also responsible for holding back the settlement drive on the Golan and for the virtual abandonment of the 15,000 Israeli settlers in that crucial security region.

As on previous trips organized by Third Way supporters, this one was headed by Economics Minister Shimon Shetret and attended by several Labor MKs, including Knesset finance committee chairman Gedalya Gal, Knesset absorption committee chairman Emanuel Zisman and Prof. Yoram Lass. The previous tour to the Golan featured Avigdor Kahalani, head of the Knesset Golan lobby, which includes MKs from a number of parties. At the founding meeting of the Third Way several months ago, 18 Labor MKs drawal from the Golan. It was also reported from the talks with the Jordanians on border and water issues that while demanding Israeli territorial concessions in the Arava and south of Lake Kinneret, Jordan was adamantly opposed to any final demarcation of the border with Israel along the Rift Valley - which had announced their support for its aims.

Third Way MKs can stop Rabin from making dangerous concessions. All they need is character

At the Rift Valley Regional Council this week, I heard a new nuance in the speeches by Shetret and some of the Labor MKs who repeated their sharp attacks on the (unnamed) Labor doves in the cabinet and Knesset who are prepared, according to their hawkish colleagues, to give up everything and pull Israel back on all fronts to the June 1967 borders. Previously, they had spoken of the need to proceed with a major political and educational campaign among the public in preparation for a possible referendum on the Golan, to which Prime Minister Rabin is publicly committed.

On Tuesday, the Third Way hawkish MKs chose a different approach. They demanded that any decision on territorial concessions on any of the fronts be subject to approval by a 70-vote majority in the Knesset.

IT MAY be that the Labor hawks are being moved by a greater sense of urgency. On the same day, (dovish-Labor) Minister of Tourism Uzi Baram, declared that his ministry would suspend all further investments in the development of tourism in the Golan, in light of the developing diplomatic situation with Syria. IDF Chief of Staff Ehud Barak was in Washington for talks with US defense chiefs on the military implications of any Israeli withdrawal from the Golan.

There is not the slightest chance of winning Labor Party approval for submitting the ratification of any further territorial concessions to an entrenched Knesset majority. But there is no need for such legislation: the Labor hawks in the Knesset have the power to stop all such concessions. What they lack so far is the courage of their convictions.

If they notify Prime Minister Rabin - even privately - that not only will they "not raise their hand in support of such concessions" in a Knesset vote, as Kahalani has already declared, but that they will "raise their hand against" any such proposal, concessions would become politically impossible.

Without the support of the Third Way Labor MKs, the government coalition would be very far from even a simple majority, even with the backing of the five "blocking majority" Arab party votes and the four or five of a bribed Shas.

The Labor hawks would not even be coming out against their own party, for they are absolutely correct when they claim that their position against such concessions is enshrined in the official Labor platform to the last elections. What they need is a realistic reading of their own power in their party - which in many spheres is in the process of breaking down - and a reasonable degree of political courage.

In his preface to Kennedy's book, historian Allan Nevins wrote: "Moral courage is great and admirable in itself; but it must be pointed out that it almost never appears except as part of that greater entity called character."

"A man without character may give fitful exhibitions of courage... but no man without character is consistently courageous, just as no man of real character is lacking in consistent courage. In short, moral courage is allied with the other traits which make up character: honesty, deep seriousness, a firm sense of principle, candor, resolution."

In his own summation on "the meaning of courage," Kennedy quotes John Quincy Adams's father, president John Adams, that, "It is not true, in fact, that any people ever existed who love the public better than themselves." On which JFK elaborates: "If this be true, what then caused the statesmen [who are the subject of his book] to act as they did? It was not because they 'loved the public better than themselves.' On the contrary, it was precisely because they did love themselves; because each one's need to maintain his own respect for himself was more important to him than his popularity with others; because his desire to win or maintain a reputation for integrity and courage was stronger than his desire to maintain his office; because his conscience, his personal standard of ethics, his integrity or morality [were] stronger than the pressures of public disapproval; because his faith that his course was the best one, and would ultimately be vindicated, outweighed his fear of public reprisal."

The writer, a veteran journalist, comments on public affairs.

y club?

it supports a certain educational program...
Major Officer...
Sharon...
This is in complete...
And in the West Bank...
Even though we... must be put away.

WISH A
HAG SAME'AH
TO THE ELDERLY!
24.8.94 - 31.8.94

Details at Supersol &
Hyperpool

Hadassah Medical Organization

To improve communications and service to the public, we are commissioning a Modern Telephone Switchboard at Hadassah Mt. Scopus on Tuesday, Aug. 23, at 2 p.m.

New numbers:

Main Switchboard	02-844111
Appointments	02-844944
Private medical service and personal treatment service	02-844044
Internal extensions (no charge)	02-844xxx

HADASSAH MEANS HEALTH

EDDIE'S AUTUMN OFFERS

RETURN OF THE LONDON THEATER TOUR

Enjoy 9 wonderful days in London - 5 superb shows - 2 tours of London - * personally led by Eddie. *

DATES: NOVEMBER 1-9

COST: $1175 plus taxes - bed & breakfast

Phone now for details of Kasher Christmas Kenya Tour and February Kasher Tour of South Africa.

FAR EAST & CHINA (KOSHER) TOUR

DATES: OCTOBER 18 TO NOVEMBER 13

Join Eddie's annual de luxe tour to Hong Kong, China, Singapore and Thailand. * Escorted by David Miller *

COST: $6200 per person in double room, plus taxes.

NOTICE TO TOURISTS

All these tours may be booked in Israel by non-residents.

INTERNATIONAL TRAVEL LTD.
6 Hameyasdim Street, Netanya Tel. 09-339171, 829805 Fax. 09-829802

TOURISTS! VISITORS! JERUSALEMITES!

Visiting Israel? Going abroad? Looking for a gift or two? Hunting for a bargain?

Then make a beeline for the Summer Happening at The Jerusalem Post downtown parking lot at 10 Harav Kook

There are 30 stalls packed with bargains. Judaica, wood toys, stained glass, silk, ceramics, jewelry, video cassettes, paperbacks, kids' books, albums and more, much much more.

Come to The Post's Crafts and Book sale
Friday, August 26
From 9:30 a.m. to 2:00 p.m. ENTRANCE FREE - SEE YOU THERE!

EURO DOLLAR
RENT-A-CAR
For reservations:
03-5781616
02-235467

THE JERUSALEM POST

BUSINESS & FINANCE

Don't miss!
Abba Eban and Teddy Kollek on alternate Fridays
Only in
THE JERUSALEM POST

FRIDAY, AUGUST 19, 1994

Preparing for Sunday trading

COMMENT

NEIL COHEN

WHAT is going to happen when trading opens on the Tel Aviv Stock Exchange on Sunday, and what should we do?

In a perfect world, the market would fall about two percent. Yes, TWO PERCENT, assuming that when it closed on Tuesday it was correctly valued. If the average stock market rises 10% on average each year, from 100 to 110, investors will lose 10% of that gain, their investment rising only to 109. To adjust to give them the same return the market would need to fall to 99, i.e., 1%.

I have generously thrown in a whole per cent more to account for the additional risk premium investors should logically demand to compensate them for their inability to offset losses against gains, which will result in their paying an effective tax rate higher than 10%.

This takes no account of the benefits to the economy from the reform package.

Now of course, markets rarely conform to mathematical theory. As of yesterday evening, the banks were reporting relative calm, rather than the wave of selling orders previously predicted. One source estimated the selling orders from all the banks together totaled about NIS 100 million, which is not terribly much.

However, this figure does not take account of the portfolio managers, who constitute a significant force in the market. And customers still have today and the first hours of Sunday morning to place their bets.

The reports said that the limits placed were in the region of 10-12% for the Maof and Mishanin stocks - i.e., selling orders at 10%-12% below Tuesday's closing prices - and 17% to 18% for the Karam stocks.

So what to do? Unless you really need to get out, either because you don't sleep well at night or because you need the money, I don't think you have a choice but to sweat it out. The greater the chance of a real meltdown.

Wages and Benefits

IN case you had forgotten in all the frenzy, July's consumer price index was published on Monday, and it wasn't very good.

But there are some signs that some very sacred cows may yet be slaughtered, paving the way for psychological changes in the economy that bode more good than ill, although their impact on the economy - should they in fact happen - will not be felt for some time.

The wages of senior army officers were published last week: A lieutenant-colonel makes NIS 12,500 a month gross and a colonel NIS 14,000. These figures do not include tax-free use of a car and other benefits, as well as a budgetary pension after 20 years or so of service.

Everyone recognizes that high-quality people need to be attracted to army careers. But there must be a limit to any burden placed on the economy. That this issue is being debated in the open can only be a good thing.

The same goes for "budgetary pensions" which are pensions financed not out of employer or employee contributions but out of a budget of some sort (defense, Histadrut, state).

As the US public sector has learned, ballooning budgetary payments are becoming increasingly difficult to sustain, particularly when people can retire on a budget of some sort (defense, Histadrut, state).

We're Telcom Global and we've got a simple and safe formula for investing money.

Announcing a get-rich idea that's also a get-rich safe idea

We simply track over a hundred telecommunications stocks. We analyze past performance, future potential and stature in the marketplace. We narrow this list down to the safest and most promising 30 companies and then we simply buy when the stock is low and our certainty of its recovery is high. We buy when there's more room for a stock to go up than down. In fact, we've been accurate enough to realize an annual average of 15% profit for our investors. To invest in secure telecommunications stocks, call us today.

After all, how often have you heard of a telephone company going out of business?

TELCOM GLOBAL
We make your money work as hard as you do.
Tel. 09-570881 Fax: 09-583645
A division of the OLCR Group

Pioneer International Ltd

South African Economic Statistics

	Prices 17.8.94	Prices 18.8.94	% Change
Exchange rates:
(buy) Financial rand	3.586	3.611	0.68%
(buy) Money market (RAA)	10.95%	10.95%	0.00%
Interest rates:
(Ry)* Ecom 2008	14.37%	14.10%	1.91%
Ecom 2020	15.23%	14.95%	1.92%
RSA 150	14.18%	13.97%	1.55%
UAL Max Income	14.40%	14.42%	-0.14%
Prices UTL:
(buy) OM Investors	14.40%	14.42%	-0.14%
Ecom 168	14.40%	14.42%	-0.14%
Guardbank	14.40%	14.42%	-0.14%
UAL G12	14.40%	14.42%	-0.14%
Max Income	14.40%	14.42%	-0.14%
Shares:
(close) Do Beers	109.50	119.25	-8.18%
Val Reef	390.00	405.00	-3.70%
Anglo American	251.50	254.00	-0.98%
Barlows	32.00	33.50	-4.48%
SA Brews	87.75	88.50	-0.85%
Sasol	30.50	33.25	-8.37%
Tiger Oats	43.25	45.00	-3.89%
Iscon	4.03	4.18	-3.59%
JSE Actuaries Overall	5.763	5.823	-1.03%

COMMENTS: Rand Merchant Bank economist Rudolf Gouw said, Government could not solve the situation by increasing taxes because SA's corporate taxes were among the highest in the world, and it could not borrow more because it was already crowding out the private sector. It also did not have the resources to stimulate the economy. Government's only options were to spend less and privatize state assets. Although privatization alone would not solve the problem, it would make a significant difference especially if the proceeds were used to reduce government debt.

UAL Maximum Income Fund launched 9 August 1993
* Enjoy sound professional management by market leaders - UAL (Nedcor group)
* The UAL Maximum Income Fund returns income four times per annum.
* Income reinvested to non-residents is tax free.
* The Pioneer International Ltd. service includes full detailed reporting.
For further information of how to invest in the UAL Maximum Income Fund, contact Pioneer at 03-5851375

Three suspected stock manipulators freed on bail

RAINE MARCUS

THREE portfolio managers suspected of acting as stock manipulators were released on NIS 100,000 bail by the Tel Aviv Magistrate's Court yesterday.

They were arrested after an undercover Securities Authority investigator posed as a company manager's assistant and taped the three trying to persuade him to manipulate stocks.

Haifa residents Yehuda Buchnik, 33, Erez Zohar, 29, and Ze'ev Shir, 42, owners of the Pisgat Hachon investment company, are suspected of stock fraud, luring others into committing a crime, and conspiracy. They allegedly described themselves as a "money-making machine" which could help companies make large profits.

Securities Authority investigator Michael Nevo-Barak said in court that Shir and Buchnik tried to solicit the manager of a public company which trades on the Tel Aviv stock exchange to artificially manipulate shares. The two explained to the manager that his company warrants were about to expire, meaning that exercising the warrants would not be worthwhile unless they were artificially manipulated before they expired. Company managers would reap profits amounting to millions of shekels as a result of the operation, they said. Buchnik and Shir allegedly said that since they held most of the company's free-floating stock, they were in a position to artificially raise prices.

The company manager turned down their offer, for which they requested payment of a few million shekels, said Nevo-Barak.

The manager informed the Securities Authority of the offer, and an investigator posing as the manager's representative was sent to meet them.

Buchnik, Zohar and Shir presented him with their proposal: the company would send immediate activity reports to the stock exchange, then the manager would buy 150,000 nominal value shares to further reduce floating stock and to signal to the public that investing in the company was a viable proposition.

The three would then artificially raise shares - most of which were purchased by them and the company manager - by transferring them from one of their bank accounts to another bank account in one of their names.

The securities authority representative taped the discussions, including the suspects' demands for money for their service. The three also allegedly offered the "representative" a receipt for monies paid, for "consultation services."

The three allegedly told the "representative" they had already similarly helped other companies.

Border produce market proposed

RACHEL NEIMAN

THE Agriculture Ministry has presented Jordanian representatives to the peace talks with a proposal to establish an $82.4 million produce market at one of the planned Israel-Jordan border crossings.

Agriculture Ministry Director Yonatan Basi said the Beit She'an area would be given priority as the location for the project, one of several proposals presented to the Jordanians for joint agricultural projects. Beit She'an is halfway between Haifa in Israel and Irbid in Jordan.

Jordan regularly imports some $700m. in agricultural products per year, principally fresh fruits and vegetables. Basi said these could be provided by Israel.

Meetings between the Israeli and Jordanian agriculture ministers will take place within the framework of the peace talks at the Dead Sea's Moriah Hotel.

Israel has further suggested the establishment of a training farm for demonstration of Israeli-developed agricultural methods and technologies. The estimated cost of establishing the facility is $10m.

Also on the table are joint projects in soil erosion management, waste water irrigation, flood control, veterinary activity, and environmental protection projects. The estimated cost of the joint projects is $100m.

The Manufacturer's Association has suggested that trade stations be established alongside Israel-Jordan border crossings in order to encourage joint economic activity. The proposed stations would be outfitted with exhibition space, a database and information network, and a distribution and transport center including duty areas and other services.

A list of 16 possible joint projects, in the areas of industry, hydro-energy and agriculture, as well as a technological education center, have been presented by the association to the relevant government bodies.

Drop in car's value after mishap must be compensated

THE drop in a car's value following its involvement in an accident is a form of direct damage, and insurance companies are required to compensate car owners for it based on the wording of comprehensive insurance policies in effect until July 1993, the Supreme Court ruled yesterday.

Supreme Court President Meir Shamgar and Justices Elyahu Mazza and Dalia Dornier rejected an appeal by the Phoenix Insurance Company against the Tel Aviv District Court's decision ordering them to pay for the drop in value of Aharon Moriano's car, who was also injured in the accident.

Following that ruling, the company changed the wording of its policies to state that the company would not cover "resultant damage, including a drop in the value of the car for purely commercial reasons, which have no connection to the fact that the car was not completely repaired."

The justices criticized the insurance companies "who usually get most of the benefits in our cases" and noted that the change in the insurance policy was a retreat from the norm of equality before the law because of one sector's interests, and suggested the company rethink the idea.

The justices noted that in matters of public interest, advance notice should be given about conditions and allow the public to make its objections known in writing in public forums and in other ways.

They added that as regards insurance policies, the insured should be able to state their objections, which were probably not presented to the finance minister before the change in the policy was made.

Moriano, represented by lawyers David Sasson and Ilan Moriano, had a Phoenix property damage policy for his car. The Tel Aviv Magistrate's Court rejected his claim, but it was accepted in Tel Aviv District Court on appeal. Phoenix then appealed to the Supreme Court.

The justices rejected the company's claim that all that was involved was a psychological drop in value. They ruled that a drop in value because of an accident was no more "psychological" than a drop in value if the vehicle was not fully repaired.

The court ruled that the drop in value was direct damage, covered by the policy as in its previous wording, but added that the insured party had to produce proof of just how much damage was caused in order to collect. (Tim)

Clal Trade profits up 15% to NIS 4.7m.

COMPANY RESULTS

RACHEL NEIMAN

CLAL TRADE yesterday reported a 15.5 percent increase in net profits for the second quarter of 1994 to NIS 4.7 million, up from NIS 4.1m. last year, on revenues of NIS 185.7m. as compared with NIS 124.9m. in the same period last year.

The improvement was attributed mainly to increased sales of computers, international trade, retailing and the recent acquisition of Malan computers, whose results were included for the first time in the second quarter.

The New Tel Aviv Central Bus Station has reported second quarter net losses of NIS 4m. as compared to a net loss of NIS 6,000 in the same period last year. Revenues on the facility, which opened transportation services to public in one year ago, were NIS 6.7m.

Urban Industries has experienced a 66% drop in net profits to NIS 1.5m. as compared with NIS 2.7m. on revenues of NIS 38.5m. as compared with NIS 43m. in the second quarter of 1993. Earnings per share were halved to NIS 0.07.

Elec Industries has announced second quarter net profits of NIS 8.2m. as compared with NIS 6.6m., on revenues of NIS 85.9m. as compared with NIS 92m. in the same period in 1993. Quarterly earnings per share were NIS 1.12 as compared with NIS 0.92 last year.

Maman has reported a net loss for the second quarter of 1994 of NIS 1.7m. as compared with a net gain of NIS 1.3m. in the same period last year. Revenues were NIS 36.2m., 12% higher than the NIS 32.2m. registered in the parallel period in 1993.

Clal Subsidiary ABN (Asteri Brit v. Nefesh), formerly Assuta, reported a net loss of NIS 137,000 as compared to a net gain of NIS 254,000 on revenues of 709,000 for the second quarter of 1994.

The company, which owns the Assuta Hospital in central Tel Aviv, was acquired by Clal in June of this year.

Azorim has reported 1994 second quarter net profits of NIS 4.5 million as compared with NIS 5.9m. in the same period last year, on revenues of NIS 127.4m. as compared with NIS 102.8m. Earnings per share fell to NIS 0.39 from NIS 0.54.

Jaf-ora has announced quarterly net profits of NIS 3.2m. as compared with NIS 2.8m. on revenues of NIS 32.5m. as compared with NIS 29.6m. in the same period in 1993. Earnings per share held steady at NIS 0.11.

Bezek inaugurates ISDN, full service available in '95

JUDY SIEGEL

COMBINED transmission of audio, video and data over a single phone line - the new Integrated Services Digital Network - has been inaugurated on a small scale and will become fully available by the beginning of next year.

Bezek yesterday held a demonstration of ISDN at Tel Aviv's Binat company, one of the first customers for this advanced telecommunications service. ISDN allows customers to speak over the phone (with high-quality sound equivalent to that of a compact disc), watch a "live" video image and send data or fax transmissions, simultaneously and at high speed.

The charge for international use of ISDN is $2 a minute to any location and at any time of the day. Charges for ISDN inside Israel will be the same as a regular phone call.

ISRAEL MONEY MARKETS

Patash (foreign currency deposit rates) (18.8.94)
Currency (deposit for)	3 MONTHS	6 MONTHS	12 MONTHS
U.S. dollar ($50,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($100,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($200,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($500,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($1,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($2,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($5,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($10,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($20,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($50,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($100,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($200,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($500,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($1,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($2,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($5,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($10,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($20,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($50,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($100,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($200,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($500,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($1,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($2,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($5,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($10,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($20,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($50,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($100,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($200,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($500,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($1,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($2,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($5,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($10,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($20,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($50,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($100,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($200,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($500,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($1,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($2,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($5,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($10,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($20,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($50,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($100,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($200,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($500,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($1,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($2,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($5,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($10,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($20,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($50,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($100,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($200,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($500,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($1,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($2,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($5,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($10,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($20,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($50,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($100,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($200,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($500,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($1,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($2,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($5,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($10,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($20,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($50,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($100,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($200,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($500,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($1,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($2,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($5,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($10,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($20,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($50,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($100,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($200,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($500,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($1,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($2,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($5,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($10,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($20,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($50,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($100,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($200,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($500,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($1,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($2,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($5,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($10,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($20,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($50,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($100,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($200,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($500,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($1,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($2,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($5,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($10,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($20,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($50,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($100,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($200,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($500,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($1,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($2,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($5,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($10,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($20,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($50,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($100,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($200,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($500,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($1,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($2,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($5,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($10,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($20,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($50,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($100,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($200,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($500,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($1,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($2,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($5,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($10,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($20,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($50,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($100,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($200,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($500,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($1,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($2,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($5,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($10,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($20,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($50,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000)	4.25	4.00	3.874
U.S. dollar ($100,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000

ISRAEL'S #1 MOVER FOR OVER 40 YEARS.

B&M INTERNATIONAL MOVERS

B&M named 1992 International Packers and Shippers of the Year in Israel

- EXPERT PACKERS - Office, household effects & electronic equipment.
- WEIGHT SALINGS - Tools, parts of the world.
- FIRST CLASS AGENTS - Serving B&M clients in 96 countries.

03-5467147 02-639004

BAUMER & MOEL
Old Port Tel Aviv, Bldg 11
7 Ramban St. Rehavia
Jerusalem.

V.G. VAYER GROUP LTD.

PACKING & SHIPPING BY V.G.

ISRAEL'S FINEST SINCE 1948

Tel Aviv: 03-6810273/5, 6838335, 6829933

- Personal effects
- Fine Arts/Antiques
- Electronic Equipment
- Our own Warehouses
- Customs Clearance
- Door to Door Service - Insured - Worldwide

THE JERUSALEM POST QUALITY CLASSIFIEDS

Ads accepted at offices The Jerusalem Post (see masthead), and all recognized advertising agencies.

Mail this coupon to us with payment enclosed. (minimum 10 words)

COUPON

Special 10% OFF

NAME _____ ADDRESS _____

CITY _____ PHONE _____ CREDIT CARD _____ NO. _____

EXPIRY DATE _____ ID NO. _____ SIGNATURE _____

MAIL TO: ADS COUPON SPECIAL, P.O. Box 61, Jerusalem 91000

OMEGA OVERSEAS CO.

International Household Removers

DOOR TO DOOR WORLDWIDE

- Free storage
- All risk insurance
- Export packing and crating

WE CARRY WITH CARE

Tel. 03-6819562 03-6819563

USA: N.Y. 1 (718) 937 9797
L.A. 1 (213) 264 2644
Miami 1 (305) 477 4077
U.K.: London 815 913 434

GLOBUS INTERNATIONAL MOVERS

FREE ESTIMATES

Toll free: 177-022-7272
Tel. 03-9613148 10 lines

- PERSONAL EFFECTS
- ANTIQUES AND FINE ART
- COMMERCIAL & HI-TECH
- EXPERT PACKING & CRATING
- ALL RISK MARINE INSURANCE
- DOOR-TO-DOOR SERVICE
- ALL IMPORT SERVICES

Phone numbers of our US, Canadian and European offices:
New York (718) 917 2003
L.A. (714) 957 1202
Miami (305) 477 2310
Toronto (416) 670 2310
Amsterdam (31) 325 7850
London (081) 905 9978
Johannesburg, S.A. (021) 11-7862576

RATES

PRICES ARE AS FOLLOWS - All rates include VAT:

Single Weekday - NIS 67.75 for 10 words (minimum), each additional word NIS 5.77
FRIDAY AND HOLIDAY EVE - NIS 126.70 for 10 words (minimum); each additional word NIS 12.67
MONDAY, WEDNESDAY AND FRIDAY (Package) - NIS 190.71, each additional word NIS 18.07
WEEK RATE (6 insertions) - NIS 246.70; each additional word NIS 24.67
FOUR FRIDAYS NIS 318.41 for 10 words (minimum); each additional word - NIS 31.84
MONTHLY (24 insertions) NIS 451.40 10 words (minimum); each additional word - NIS 45.14

DEADLINES: office: Jerusalem - weekdays - 12 noon the day before publication; for Friday and Sunday - 6 p.m. on Thursday.
Tel Aviv and Haifa - weekdays - 12 noon, 2 days before publication for Friday and Sunday - 4 p.m. Thursday in Tel Aviv and 12 noon Thursday in Haifa.

GENERAL DWELLINGS SALES

EXQUISITE SPACIOUS DUPLEX PENTHOUSE. Magnificent panoramic view of Elat and Akaba. Tel. 02-932911.

WHERE TO STAY

BED & BREAKFAST in Jerusalem - short term, long term, furnished, breakfast, central, family rooms, comfortable lounge. Tel. 02-5252757.

ELIAT - Cottage/Vacation flat. 825 dollar (minimum two persons) Tel. 07-332911

INN PLACES LTD. affordable home bed & breakfast, self-catering, country-style, choice locations. Tel/Fax 09-578204, P.O.B. 577, Herzliya.

BUSINESS OFFERS

INVESTMENT

INVESTORS NEEDED for antirust coal mine in Peru. For information: Fax 5114-41277, Arle.

COLLECTIONS

ANTIQUES

AUCTION TUESDAY 23 AUG. 94 at 8 pm at Gallery "NOFAR" 52 Nehalem Benjamin, Tel Aviv - Paintings, porcelain, rugs, silverware. Preview same day from 1 pm. otherwise.

SERVICES

RENOVATING

ZEEV RECOATING at baths in your home, countrywide, guaranteed. Tel. 04-789655, 08-848622, 02-832822.

PERSONALS

WIDOW, 57, living in Germany, is looking for a German or English-speaking partner. P.O. Box 28386, Tel Aviv 61283.

PLEASEANT, INTELLIGENT LADY (48/52), divorced, seeking an interesting, sensitive, book-loving man for friendship (48-58). P.O.B. 6957, Haifa, 31068, 04-365075.

SIDNEY RILEY/GEORGE ROSENBLUM. British historian would be glad to hear from anyone in Israel who knew him in 1920's, 1960's (possibly in Haifa). Please call 0044-81-548-3390, or write to BB 16782 P.O. Box 91 Jerusalem 91000

CULTURED YOUNG MAN, 37, well rounded seeks partner for life with similar qualities, roommate for a well arranged apartment in Ramat Aviv optional. Tel. 050-236916.

MATRIMONIAL

NO-FEE MATCHMAKING for disabled, barren. Tel. 02-237807 from the afternoon. Yiddish/Hebrew speaking.

HIGHLY INTELLIGENT, SENSITIVE, HANDSOME but could lose 10 pounds, highly successful entrepreneur, shomer Shabbat, pragmatic, philosophical but not too airy, seeking compatible mate 25-30, with traditional family values and priorities. Reply to: 208 E. 51 St., Box 326, New York, N.Y. 10022, USA.

Jerusalem Institution Requires PRESS ASSISTANT to review daily press, write press releases, monitor official statements, and organize seminars and conferences.

Must have fluent written and spoken English and Arabic; Hebrew also desirable. Knowledge of West Bank institutions, university degree, two years professional experience in academia or university administration essential.

Responses to be sent to:
L.P., Box 290, Jerusalem, no later than September 2, 1994

GLOBUS INTERNATIONAL

SHIPPING ALL OVER THE WORLD

Shipping of household goods is our specialty. Call for FREE estimates. Toll free: 177-022-8300 Office: Haifa, 1, Palmer Gate, Tel. 04-673762 N.Y. office 576 - 5th Ave., Suite 1103 Tel. 212-221-5060

UNITED SHIPPING SEA & AIR INT'L LTD.

Packing, insurance & freight all over the world

VEHICLES

PASSPORT

SALE: DIAPHYS APPLAUSE, 1992, 4-dr, 5-sp, excellent condition, 30,000 km. Tel. 02-820706.

OPPORTUNITY! Elegant BMW 320i, a/c, sunroof, power steering, only $6,500! Call 03-5242304.

JERUSALEM DWELLINGS

OPPORTUNITY! Elegant BMW 320i, a/c, sunroof, power steering, only $6,500! Call 03-5242304.

LERNER REALTY

The Realtors in the Giv'at Who Speak Your Language

If you would like to live in Givat Shalom, Beit Shemesh, Lerner Realty is your address. Drop in, and get ALL the info you need.

LERNER REALTY

12 Rehov Hakefetz Givat Shalom, Beit Shemesh Tel. 02-913153, Tel. 02-917232 Fax. 02-918676

RENTALS

TALBIEH, luxurious, 5 rooms, suitable for residence/office, long-term/seasonal. Tel. 03-634171 (NS).

OLD KATAMON, 3, FURNISHED, ground floor, kosher kitchen, Oct. - Dec. 15. Tel. 02-631196.

FOR TOURIST, 3.5, Beit Hakerem, August 25-September 31, $1,200. Tel. 02-512267.

BAYIT VEGAN, 4, fully furnished, kosher, spacious, parking, for one year. Tel. 02-418066 (NS).

JEWISH QUARTER, unique, large apartment, for holidays or year. Tel. 02-514616.

BAKA, 5, immediate, Sukka balcony, view, unfurnished, closets, storage, $1300. Tel. 02-248041, 02-248046.

TOURISTS: CHARMING, 2-BEDROOM, centrally located, Baka, through Sept. 02-263364.

TALPOT, 8 1/2 rooms (3 1/2 bedrooms), kitchen, terrace, garden, fully furnished, furnished, Tel. 02-733222, NS.

DAVID'S VILLAGE (Mamilla), 3.5, spacious, garden, view of Old City, luxurious, completely furnished, $1,800, Anglo-Saxon (Maiden) Tel. 02-251161.

DAVID'S VILLAGE (Mamilla), 3.5, spacious, garden, view of Old City, luxurious, completely furnished, $1,800, Anglo-Saxon (Maiden) Tel. 02-251161.

OLD KATAMON, 4, unfurnished, third floor, 2 bedrooms, renovated, $700, Anglo-Saxon (Maiden) Tel. 02-251161.

OLD TALPOT, 4, second floor, double convenience, clean, storeroom, kitchen, renovated, $700, Anglo-Saxon (Maiden) Tel. 02-251161.

TSAMERET HABIRA, 3, private entrance, view, stairs, terrace, view, $750, Anglo-Saxon (Maiden) Tel. 02-251161.

OLD KATAMON, 4, FULLY FURNISHED, 1 year, immediate, Broker, Tel. 02-833247.

SHAPEI CHESBOD/REHAVA, 4, furnished, rooms, fully modernized, central heating, Oct. - June 30th. 516-2298940, 02-691014.

REHAVA (MOLCO), 4, 4 GARDEN, exclusive & equipped, Sept. 3 - Sept. 16. Av. Zoran, Tel. 02-612233.

GERMAN COLONY, 4 rooms, 2 stories & beautiful porch, $1,000, no agents. Tel. 636699 (NS).

BEIT HAKEREM, LUXURIOUS COTTAGE, garden, $1250; luxury apartments, 4-5 rooms in Beit Hakerem, $800-900. Nacari Plus Tel. 02-514112.

NEAR HAAS FROMENADE, immediate, September, October, fully equipped/furnished, no stage, private entrance. 02-257315, 610657.

GERMAN COLONY, 4+ gallery with beautiful garden, fully furnished, immediate, long term. Keys at Ambassador Tel. 02-618101.

KRYAT WOLFSON, 5, 10th floor, view of Knesset, from October. Tel. 03-5610111, Roli.

Start a New Career Technical Writing

Fall Registration
Call 03-6394591

YEDA School of Business & Technology

PRIVATE SECRETARY

Director of Joint U.S.-Israel Foundation seeks full time experienced American secretary with excellent knowledge of Microsoft Word for Windows and/or Lotus Amipro and bookkeeping skills. Correspondence with Washington. (Car an advantage). Good pay. To begin immediately! Please call Sarah for an interview: 02-618057 evenings (N.S.)

ERIC COHEN BOOKS requires ADMINISTRATIVE SECRETARY for interesting position Tel. (09) 441645

The Mashabim regional primary school in Kibbutz Mashabei Sadeh requires an English teacher for grades 4-8 Telephone: 07-565309 (work) 07-562425 (home)

canadel INVESTMENTS & DEVELOPMENT LTD.

Requires COMPTROLLER

- Young, energetic accountant
- Proven experience, preferably in real estate
- Fluent English

Please apply in writing, enclosing C.V., to Canadel, 49 Ramban St., Ramatana 43601.

Import-Export Manager

Expert with wide experience and many connections in the Far East, the USA and Europe, basic Hebrew, full command of English, Spanish and German, OFFERS HIS PROFESSIONAL SERVICES as employee or external advisor.

Tel. 03-6130748, P.O.B. 38203, Tel Aviv 61381

CHALLENGING OFFICE POSITION HI-TECH ELECTRONICS INT'L COMPANY

P.O. Box 1215, Kiryat Bialik Tel. 04-761114

FOCUS MANPOWER INC.

- Experienced Hebrew-English Secretary, typing, pleasant, professional, atmosphere.
- For High-Tech Electronics company, English and English Hebrew typists, good conditions for suitable.

Tel. 03-7510130 Fax. 03-7510180

habitat rentals

Y.Moshe 2.5, ground floor, CHARMING 8800 Rehavia 3, furnished, patio, pool, fr. $880. Abs for 3-4 mos, furnished, very cozy first floor, quiet, balcony, 1 year $900. Armona 4, in new building, modern kitchen 2 bathrm, bright, balcony parking $1000. 2 Shariel 5, beautiful 3 bedrooms $1000. Rehavia Duplex 4, new, terrace $1100. Cottage near Canyon Malcha 1 room, big garden, private heating, 3 years $1100. Rehavia, apartment and view, furnished & unfurnished, duplex view from $1300. Armona 4, box DUPLEX apartment, 2nd floor, marble floor, beautiful terrace $1500. B.Hakerem 4 mos luxury apartment $1800. For all the above please contact FIONA tel: 02-611222

TECHNION Israel Institute of Technology

English Secretary (Full Time Position)

Qualifications:

- Fluent in English, preferably mother tongue.
- Good working knowledge of Hebrew.
- Knowledge and experience in word processing.
- Experience in general office work, including independent correspondence.
- Initiative and flexibility.

Candidates should apply in writing by August 28, 1994, attaching CV, to the Manpower Division, Technion, Technion City, Haifa 32000, quoting position number ND/127

AACI 450,000 Satisfied Members

KUPAT HOLIM LEUMIT VACANCIES

For work in operating theaters in central Israel Anesthetists

To monitor hospitalization at hospitals in central and southern Israel

Registered Nurses

with at least 5 years' experience in Israel hospitals

For work in central Israel

Operating Theater Nurses

Please apply to the Medical Dept., Tel. 03-6970355/6

For the Jerusalem X-Ray Dept.

X-Ray Technician

Please call 02-254173/4.

For Ashdod Clinic

Registered Nurses

for work organized in split shifts

Please call 08-841832.

PERSONALS

WIDOW, 57, living in Germany, is looking for a German or English-speaking partner. P.O. Box 28386, Tel Aviv 61283.

PLEASEANT, INTELLIGENT LADY (48/52), divorced, seeking an interesting, sensitive, book-loving man for friendship (48-58). P.O.B. 6957, Haifa, 31068, 04-365075.

SIDNEY RILEY/GEORGE ROSENBLUM. British historian would be glad to hear from anyone in Israel who knew him in 1920's, 1960's (possibly in Haifa). Please call 0044-81-548-3390, or write to BB 16782 P.O. Box 91 Jerusalem 91000

CULTURED YOUNG MAN, 37, well rounded seeks partner for life with similar qualities, roommate for a well arranged apartment in Ramat Aviv optional. Tel. 050-236916.

MATRIMONIAL

NO-FEE MATCHMAKING for disabled, barren. Tel. 02-237807 from the afternoon. Yiddish/Hebrew speaking.

HIGHLY INTELLIGENT, SENSITIVE, HANDSOME but could lose 10 pounds, highly successful entrepreneur, shomer Shabbat, pragmatic, philosophical but not too airy, seeking compatible mate 25-30, with traditional family values and priorities. Reply to: 208 E. 51 St., Box 326, New York, N.Y. 10022, USA.

Cultural Institution in Jerusalem Requires AN INFORMATION SYSTEMS SPECIALIST/SECRETARY to manage computer network, office systems and assist with conferences and seminars.

Must have computer hardware and software training, excellent secretarial and interpersonal skills.

Fluent written and spoken English and Arabic required; Hebrew highly desirable. At least one year professional experience, excellent recommendations required.

Responses to be sent to:
L.P., Box 290, Jerusalem, no later than September 2, 1994

canadel INVESTMENTS & DEVELOPMENT LTD.

Requires COMPTROLLER

- Young, energetic accountant
- Proven experience, preferably in real estate
- Fluent English

Please apply in writing, enclosing C.V., to Canadel, 49 Ramban St., Ramatana 43601.

habitat rentals

Y.Moshe 2.5, ground floor, CHARMING 8800 Rehavia 3, furnished, patio, pool, fr. $880. Abs for 3-4 mos, furnished, very cozy first floor, quiet, balcony, 1 year $900. Armona 4, in new building, modern kitchen 2 bathrm, bright, balcony parking $1000. 2 Shariel 5, beautiful 3 bedrooms $1000. Rehavia Duplex 4, new, terrace $1100. Cottage near Canyon Malcha 1 room, big garden, private heating, 3 years $1100. Rehavia, apartment and view, furnished & unfurnished, duplex view from $1300. Armona 4, box DUPLEX apartment, 2nd floor, marble floor, beautiful terrace $1500. B.Hakerem 4 mos luxury apartment $1800. For all the above please contact FIONA tel: 02-611222

If You have Breast Implants...

Protect your rights. Recent evidence indicates that some American-manufactured breast implants may be defective. If you have received a breast implant before June 1, 1993, the implant manufacturers may owe you compensation.

Write to us today

Gertler, Gertler & Vincent
Attorney at Law

c/o Jerusalem Post, Box 81, Romema, Jerusalem 91000, for B5 536

or call: USA (504) 581-6411 or Fax: (504) 581-6568 between 6 p.m. and 10 p.m. Israel time

KUPAT HOLIM LEUMIT VACANCIES

For work in operating theaters in central Israel Anesthetists

To monitor hospitalization at hospitals in central and southern Israel

Registered Nurses

with at least 5 years' experience in Israel hospitals

For work in central Israel

Operating Theater Nurses

Please apply to the Medical Dept., Tel. 03-6970355/6

For the Jerusalem X-Ray Dept.

X-Ray Technician

Please call 02-254173/4.

For Ashdod Clinic

Registered Nurses

for work organized in split shifts

Please call 08-841832.

PERSONALS

WIDOW, 57, living in Germany, is looking for a German or English-speaking partner. P.O. Box 28386, Tel Aviv 61283.

PLEASEANT, INTELLIGENT LADY (48/52), divorced, seeking an interesting, sensitive, book-loving man for friendship (48-58). P.O.B. 6957, Haifa, 31068, 04-365075.

SIDNEY RILEY/GEORGE ROSENBLUM. British historian would be glad to hear from anyone in Israel who knew him in 1920's, 1960's (possibly in Haifa). Please call 0044-81-548-3390, or write to BB 16782 P.O. Box 91 Jerusalem 91000

CULTURED YOUNG MAN, 37, well rounded seeks partner for life with similar qualities, roommate for a well arranged apartment in Ramat Aviv optional. Tel. 050-236916.

MATRIMONIAL

NO-FEE MATCHMAKING for disabled, barren. Tel. 02-237807 from the afternoon. Yiddish/Hebrew speaking.

HIGHLY INTELLIGENT, SENSITIVE, HANDSOME but could lose 10 pounds, highly successful entrepreneur, shomer Shabbat, pragmatic, philosophical but not too airy, seeking compatible mate 25-30, with traditional family values and priorities. Reply to: 208 E. 51 St., Box 326, New York, N.Y. 10022, USA.

DAHAF TEL-AVIV HEAD OFFICE 8 Beit Hashoeva Lane (94 Allenby Corner) Tel. 03-5601001

DAHAF TEL-AVIV DIZENGOFF 116 Dizengoff St. Tel. 03-5239952 (Open 24 hours a day)

DAHAF TEL-AVIV ALLENBY 123 Allenby St. Tel. 03-5604433 (Kikar Ha'moshavot)

HAIFA 5 Herzl St. Hader Ha'carmel Tel. 04-676666

JERUSALEM 43 Jaffa St. Tel. 02-256335/6

DAHAPHONE Ads by phone service Tel. 03-5601001

AND IN ANY OF THE OTHER 50 DAHAF AGENCIES THROUGHOUT THE COUNTRY

offers free professional service for all categories of classified ads at regular newspaper rates no extra charge!

2 more cases opened against the Jackal

PARIS (AP) — Two more cases will be reopened to try Carlos the Jackal for terrorist attacks on France's train system in the 1980s, Justice Minister Pierre Mehtaigier said yesterday.

Carlos, one of the world's most-wanted terrorists on the run, was arrested Tuesday for a 1982 bombing just off the Champs Elysees that killed one person and injured 63.

The cases expected to bring new charges against the 44-year-old Venezuelan concern the March 1982 bombing of a Toulouse-Paris express train that killed five people, and New Year's Eve 1983 bomb attacks on Marseille's main train station which killed four people and on another express train that killed two.

Carlos' controversial attorney also found himself facing more accusations around the time of those attacks, acting as a middleman between the Venezuelan and the French government.

Lawyer Jacques Verges was an "amissary" of Carlos to the French government in 1982, when he was defending Magdalena Kopp — who later married Carlos — and Bruno Breguet, former senior officials were quoted as saying.

Kopp and Breguet had been arrested in Paris with a carful of explosives.

Verges contacted Roland Kessou, an adviser to then interior minister Gaston Defferre, passing on the message from Carlos that "it was not in France's interest to keep the two."

Kessou was quoted as saying in the newspaper Le Monde.

Carlos, now 44, had sent a letter to Defferre in late February 1982 threatening violence if Kopp and Breguet weren't released in 30 days.

On March 29 came the deadly Paris-Toulouse train attack.

The prosecution's demands were then watered down, to three years for Breguet and two years for Kopp. They nevertheless received five and four years, respectively, before being released after serving three years.

On Wednesday, Le Monde quoted Stasi documents as calling Verges an "operational member" of Carlos' subversive organization, with the mission of bribing Breguet and Kopp's way out of prison.

Verges has dismissed the Stasi documents as "disinformation," but the claims raised speculation that Verges may have been a Carlos collaborator, and the Socialist government at the time had cut a deal with a terrorist at large.

Verges had also said he never met Carlos until this Tuesday, the day after Carlos' arrest was announced amid great fanfare in Paris.

In addition to the cases reopened Thursday, Carlos is also expected to be retried for the 1975 shooting deaths of two counterintelligence agents and an informer when they came to his Paris apartment to investigate attacks on Israeli jetliners. He had been sentenced in absentia in 1992 to life in prison, but under French law must be tried again.

Mandela: Truth commission to uncover apartheid crimes

CAPE TOWN (AP) — With plans to improve the lives of impoverished blacks in place, President Nelson Mandela said yesterday that he would push ahead with a truth commission to uncover the crimes of apartheid.

Marking his first 100 days in office, Mandela's comments on a truth commission threatened to draw renewed opposition from right-wing whites who would have to disclose their involvement in crimes before being considered for amnesty.

Former President F.W. de Klerk, now a deputy president in Mandela's Cabinet, cast cold water on the 100-day milestone, saying his National Party had considered withdrawing from the coalition government over a political dispute with Mandela's African National Congress.

De Klerk also said he had objections to Mandela's plans for a truth commission, but refused to elaborate.

Conceding that his plans had generated "some apprehension," Mandela said he had decided to go ahead in the interest of national healing.

"What this issue raises is how we deal with a past that contained gross violation of human rights — a past which threatens to live with us as a festering sore," South Africa's first black president told parliament.

The commission would act not as a court or tribunal, he said, but would bring to light past misdeeds in the course of administering a constitutionally required amnesty program and paying compensation to victims or their survivors.

The survivors of black activists killed by security forces have objected to amnesty for those who fought to maintain the discriminatory system; Mandela may hope to placate them by ensuring they are somehow compensated for their loss.

Elias Canetti, Nobel laureate in literature, dead at 89

ZURICH (AP) — Elias Canetti, the reclusive writer and fugitive from Nazism who won the 1981 Nobel Prize in literature, has died, a relative said yesterday. He was 89.

Canetti, a Bulgarian-born British citizen who wrote in German, died Sunday, said the relative, who asked not to be identified. The cause of death was not disclosed.

Canetti was buried Wednesday beside Irish author James Joyce, Zurich Mayor Josef Estermann said. Canetti had expressed the wish to be buried in Zurich, a city he fell in love with during childhood.

Canetti went into seclusion after being named winner of the Nobel Prize "for writings marked by a broad outlook, a wealth of ideas and artistic power."

The Swedish Academy, which administers the prize, likened Canetti to Feodor Dostoevski and European writers of the early 20th century whom he admired, including Franz Kafka.

Canetti began writing dramas and novels in the early 1930s, but developed a wide following among German readers only in 1960 with the publication of the first volume of his major work, Masse und Macht (Crowds and Power).

In a rare meeting with reporters in 1981, he noted that a theme common to his writings was "the importance of crowds in modern life, the terrifying importance of power which is in danger of destroying the whole earth."

Canetti won the Nobel Prize at a time when the Swedish Academy was using the prize to draw attention to local masters who were unknown to a worldwide audience.

Canetti was born on July 25, 1905, in Rostock, Bulgaria.

In 1911 he moved with his parents to Manchester, England. On the death of his father two years later he moved to Vienna, where he attended school before continuing his education in Zurich and in Frankfurt, Germany. He returned to Vienna to earn a doctorate in chemistry.

Facing the Nazi takeover of Austria, Canetti, of Spanish-Jewish descent, left Austria in 1938 and went to Paris and then London, where he worked as freelance writer and was granted a British passport.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

TRAFFIC ACCIDENTS

Sir, — Your editorial of August 2, "Speed kills," claims that Israel has the second worst traffic fatality record in the developed world.

According to the Ministry of Transport publication Traffic Collisions in Israel 1993, you are very, very wrong.

Israel's traffic fatality rate was 9.3 per 100,000 residents in 1993. For England, the comparable rate was 10.0, for Switzerland it was 14.0, for France it was 16.4 and for the United States it was 17.3. Among those countries' rates published by the ministry, only Sweden at 7.0 and Japan at 8.6 per 100,000 residents had lower rates than Israel.

Jerusalem.

MISPLACED KIBBUTZ

Sir, — I read with interest your article on the current emotions of the Arava farmers ("Desert farmers: torn between ideology and survival," J.P., August 5), facing a tense period of uncertainty regarding the future of their land and water supply.

I feel that when discussing a subject so sensitive and potentially devastating to the parties involved, an utmost effort should be made to get the facts right. The map that was printed not only totally misplaced the moshavim mentioned, but also failed to note the existence of Kibbutz Yehel, north of Kibbutz Lotan. The present situation is sufficiently confusing, and needs no further confusion added by factual misrepresentation by the press.

YONATAN COHEN,
Economic Manager
Kibbutz Yehel.

ENGLISH PRONUNCIATION

Sir, — An American Jew, a doctor in Albany, New York, a good friend of Israel, has no other worries about Israel right now, which goes through maybe the most crucial times in its existence, than Shimon Peres's pronunciation.

He seems to forget that Peres is not a secretary in the American government — he is an Israeli in the Israeli government.

What a poor comparison to David Levy who is a Moroccan and speaks probably a good French. When he was foreign minister, he did not know English at all. Of course he needed a translator — how else?

Peres speaks a perfect and fluent English and brings his message through clearly wherever he speaks. Personally, I seldom agree with what he says, but one has to be objective.

PEPE WEISS
Tel Aviv.

Vacancy

Modern, food production organization needs.
Process Engineer with fluent English.
Please apply to P.O.B. 13342, Tel Aviv, attaching curriculum vitae.
— Discretion Assured —

SITUATIONS VACANT ADVERTISEMENTS

Equal Opportunity in Employment Law, 1988
The law forbids discrimination in the advertising and filling of job vacancies, on grounds of sex, or marital or parental status, except where this is dictated by the nature of the work.
All job advertisements in The Jerusalem Post should be regarded as complying with the provisions of the law.

FOR PRIVATE SALE: Herzliya Pituah, beautiful, well-located house, $850,000. Tel. 03-5616161.

RA'ANANA, separate + luxurious cottage,

$500,000, most prestigious neighborhood. Private party, 03-912155, (NS)

HOLIDAY APTS.

RA'ANANA - rooms for tourists on daily basis, kitchen + bathroom, minimum one week: $20 single, $25 couple, $30 two rooms. Tel. 03-545491.

SITS. VAC.

CUSTOMER SERVICE/experienced secretary for AT&T representative company. Tel. 03-54389, Netanyahu.

HOUSEHOLD HELP

au pair, for twins, in October, good conditions. Ramat Poleg. Tel. 03-560161.

RAMAT HASHARON, Philippine needed for housework, with experience and recommendations. Tel. 03-540354.

LIVE-IN AU PAIR, for baby, Herzliya Pituah, experience + references. Tel. 03-524274, 03-524242.

LIVE-IN WOMAN for general household duties, some Hebrew preferable. Tel. 03-524258.

RAMAT HASHARON, FILIPINA, live-in, for cleaning, cooking, housework + child. Tel. 03-5400394.

AU PAIR for care of two children + house cleaning. Tel. 03-573043.

HOUSEKEEPER + CARE OF 2 children. Live-in, separate house. Best Yarnay. Tel. 03-563491.

EXCELLENT LIVE-IN AU PAIR, very high salary, separate accommodations. Tel. 03-524258.

RESPONSIBLE + DEDICATED METAPELET, household work, live-in possible. Tel. 03-567884.

GENERAL

NETANYA Part-time, over 45, married, non-smoker. Tel. 03-523833/330370.

PURCHASE/SALE

LEAVING - MUST SELL household furniture + valuable gold + diamond jewelry. Tel. 03-672325.

HAIFA & NORTH

DWELLINGS

DOMICILE Laurie Bisberg 35 St. Hansel, Haifa Tel. 04-511080, Tel/Fax. 04-537643

Better Than New Near central Ramat, spacious cottage with balcony and garden: $270,000

On Shoham, 5 1/2 rooms, balcony, patio, all on one level: $310,000

SALES

CARMEL, Eilat, lovely cottage, 4 rooms, view, garden balcony. Tel. 04-247504

SAFED, ONE HOUSE, garden, roof, artist's colony, bargain. Tel. 03-935338.

HOLIDAY APTS.

VACATION at HAVAT HAHARON, in Zichron, all seasons including holidays. Tel. 03-386518.

SITS. VAC.

CARPENTRY CUSTOM CABINET SHOP, Carmel, seeks expert cabinet maker, management projects. Tel. 04-985763 - day, 04-902374 - even.

PURCHASE/SALE

FOR SALE YAMAHA PIANO U.S. new, bargain, 18 1/2, 500. Tel. 04-591846.

ABROAD

DWELLINGS

RENTALS

QUEENS, NY: the best Jewish neighborhood, close to synagogue, with option to buy (as a result of return to Israel). Tel. 718-3804820, 03-914892.

SALES

QUEENS, N.Y., luxury studio + terrace, pool, gym, doorman, indoor parking. $78,000. Tel. 03-552812, Fax. 03-557277.

Optometrist Practice for sale in Herzliya.

Excellent opportunity. Owner travelling abroad. Tel. 03-6055047

MALIN ADVERTISING

We Accept ALL kinds of Ads for THE JERUSALEM POST 19 King George St., Jerusalem

TEL: 02-254456 FAX: 02-254457

VISA • ISRACARD •

RA'ANANA, separate + luxurious cottage,

$500,000, most prestigious neighborhood. Private party, 03-912155, (NS)

HOLIDAY APTS.

RA'ANANA - rooms for tourists on daily basis, kitchen + bathroom, minimum one week: $20 single, $25 couple, $30 two rooms. Tel. 03-545491.

SITS. VAC.

CUSTOMER SERVICE/experienced secretary for AT&T representative company. Tel. 03-54389, Netanyahu.

HOUSEHOLD HELP

au pair, for twins, in October, good conditions. Ramat Poleg. Tel. 03-560161.

RAMAT HASHARON, Philippine needed for housework, with experience and recommendations. Tel. 03-540354.

LIVE-IN AU PAIR, for baby, Herzliya Pituah, experience + references. Tel. 03-524274, 03-524242.

LIVE-IN WOMAN for general household duties, some Hebrew preferable. Tel. 03-524258.

RAMAT HASHARON, FILIPINA, live-in, for cleaning, cooking, housework + child. Tel. 03-5400394.

AU PAIR for care of two children + house cleaning. Tel. 03-573043.

HOUSEKEEPER + CARE OF 2 children. Live-in, separate house. Best Yarnay. Tel. 03-563491.

EXCELLENT LIVE-IN AU PAIR, very high salary, separate accommodations. Tel. 03-524258.

RESPONSIBLE + DEDICATED METAPELET, household work, live-in possible. Tel. 03-567884.

NETANYA Part-time, over 45, married, non-smoker. Tel. 03-523833/330370.

PURCHASE/SALE LEAVING - MUST SELL household furniture + valuable gold + diamond jewelry. Tel. 03-672325.

HAIFA & NORTH DOMICILE Laurie Bisberg 35 St. Hansel, Haifa Tel. 04-511080, Tel/Fax. 04-537643

Better Than New Near central Ramat, spacious cottage with balcony and garden: $270,000

On Shoham, 5 1/2 rooms, balcony, patio, all on one level: $310,000

SALES CARMEL, Eilat, lovely cottage, 4 rooms, view, garden balcony. Tel. 04-247504

SAFED, ONE HOUSE, garden, roof, artist's colony, bargain. Tel. 03-935338.

HOLIDAY APTS. VACATION at HAVAT HAHARON, in Zichron, all seasons including holidays. Tel. 03-386518.

SITS. VAC. CARPENTRY CUSTOM CABINET SHOP, Carmel, seeks expert cabinet maker, management projects. Tel. 04-985763 - day, 04-902374 - even.

PURCHASE/SALE FOR SALE YAMAHA PIANO U.S. new, bargain, 18 1/2, 500. Tel. 04-591846.

ABROAD DWELLINGS RENTALS QUEENS, NY: the best Jewish neighborhood, close to synagogue, with option to buy (as a result of return to Israel). Tel. 718-3804820, 03-914892.

SALES QUEENS, N.Y., luxury studio + terrace, pool, gym, doorman, indoor parking. $78,000. Tel. 03-552812, Fax. 03-557277.

Optometrist Practice for sale in Herzliya. Excellent opportunity. Owner travelling abroad. Tel. 03-6055047

MALIN ADVERTISING We Accept ALL kinds of Ads for THE JERUSALEM POST 19 King George St., Jerusalem

TEL: 02-254456 FAX: 02-254457

VISA • ISRACARD •

RA'ANANA, separate + luxurious cottage, $500,000, most prestigious neighborhood. Private party, 03-912155, (NS)

HOLIDAY APTS. RA'ANANA - rooms for tourists on daily basis, kitchen + bathroom, minimum one week: $20 single, $25 couple, $30 two rooms. Tel. 03-545491.

SITS. VAC. CUSTOMER SERVICE/experienced secretary for AT&T representative company. Tel. 03-54389, Netanyahu.

HOUSEHOLD HELP au pair, for twins, in October, good conditions. Ramat Poleg. Tel. 03-560161.

RAMAT HASHARON, Philippine needed for housework, with experience and recommendations. Tel. 03-540354.

LIVE-IN AU PAIR, for baby, Herzliya Pituah, experience + references. Tel. 03-524274, 03-524242.

LIVE-IN WOMAN for general household duties, some Hebrew preferable. Tel. 03-524258.

RAMAT HASHARON, FILIPINA, live-in, for cleaning, cooking, housework + child. Tel. 03-5400394.

AU PAIR for care of two children + house cleaning. Tel. 03-573043.

HOUSEKEEPER + CARE OF 2 children. Live-in, separate house. Best Yarnay. Tel. 03-563491.

EXCELLENT LIVE-IN AU PAIR, very high salary, separate accommodations. Tel. 03-524258.

RESPONSIBLE + DEDICATED METAPELET, household work, live-in possible. Tel. 03-567884.

NETANYA Part-time, over 45, married, non-smoker. Tel. 03-523833/330370.

PURCHASE/SALE LEAVING - MUST SELL household furniture + valuable gold + diamond jewelry. Tel. 03-672325.

HAIFA & NORTH DOMICILE Laurie Bisberg 35 St. Hansel, Haifa Tel. 04-511080, Tel/Fax. 04-537643

Better Than New Near central Ramat, spacious cottage with balcony and garden: $270,000

On Shoham, 5 1/2 rooms, balcony, patio, all on one level: $310,000

SALES CARMEL, Eilat, lovely cottage, 4 rooms, view, garden balcony. Tel. 04-247504

SAFED, ONE HOUSE, garden, roof, artist's colony, bargain. Tel. 03-935338.

HOLIDAY APTS. VACATION at HAVAT HAHARON, in Zichron, all seasons including holidays. Tel. 03-386518.

SITS. VAC. CARPENTRY CUSTOM CABINET SHOP, Carmel, seeks expert cabinet maker, management projects. Tel. 04-985763 - day, 04-902374 - even.

PURCHASE/SALE FOR SALE YAMAHA PIANO U.S. new, bargain, 18 1/2, 500. Tel. 04-591846.

ABROAD DWELLINGS RENTALS QUEENS, NY: the best Jewish neighborhood, close to synagogue, with option to buy (as a result of return to Israel). Tel. 718-3804820, 03-914892.

SALES QUEENS, N.Y., luxury studio + terrace, pool, gym, doorman, indoor parking. $78,000. Tel. 03-552812, Fax. 03-557277.

Optometrist Practice for sale in Herzliya. Excellent opportunity. Owner travelling abroad. Tel. 03-6055047

MALIN ADVERTISING We Accept ALL kinds of Ads for THE JERUSALEM POST 19 King George St., Jerusalem

TEL: 02-254456 FAX: 02-254457

VISA • ISRACARD •

RA'ANANA, separate + luxurious cottage, $500,000, most prestigious neighborhood. Private party, 03-912155, (NS)

HOLIDAY APTS. RA'ANANA - rooms for tourists on daily basis, kitchen + bathroom, minimum one week: $20 single, $25 couple, $30 two rooms. Tel. 03-545491.

SITS. VAC. CUSTOMER SERVICE/experienced secretary for AT&T representative company. Tel. 03-54389, Netanyahu.

HOUSEHOLD HELP au pair, for twins, in October, good conditions. Ramat Poleg. Tel. 03-560161.

RAMAT HASHARON, Philippine needed for housework, with experience and recommendations. Tel. 03-540354.

LIVE-IN AU PAIR, for baby, Herzliya Pituah, experience + references. Tel. 03-524274, 03-524242.

LIVE-IN WOMAN for general household duties, some Hebrew preferable. Tel. 03-524258.

RAMAT HASHARON, FILIPINA, live-in, for cleaning, cooking, housework + child. Tel. 03-5400394.

AU PAIR for care of two children + house cleaning. Tel. 03-573043.

HOUSEKEEPER + CARE OF 2 children. Live-in, separate house. Best Yarnay. Tel. 03-563491.

EXCELLENT LIVE-IN AU PAIR, very high salary, separate accommodations. Tel. 03-524258.

RESPONSIBLE + DEDICATED METAPELET, household work, live-in possible. Tel. 03-567884.

NETANYA Part-time, over 45, married, non-smoker. Tel. 03-523833/330370.

PURCHASE/SALE LEAVING - MUST SELL household furniture + valuable gold + diamond jewelry. Tel. 03-672325.

HAIFA & NORTH DOMICILE Laurie Bisberg 35 St. Hansel, Haifa Tel. 04-511080, Tel/Fax. 04-537643

Better Than New Near central Ramat, spacious cottage with balcony and garden: $270,000

On Shoham, 5 1/2 rooms, balcony, patio, all on one level: $310,000

SALES CARMEL, Eilat, lovely cottage, 4 rooms, view, garden balcony. Tel. 04-247504

SAFED, ONE HOUSE, garden, roof, artist's colony, bargain. Tel. 03-935338.

HOLIDAY APTS. VACATION at HAVAT HAHARON, in Zichron, all seasons including holidays. Tel. 03-386518.

SITS. VAC. CARPENTRY CUSTOM CABINET SHOP, Carmel, seeks expert cabinet maker, management projects. Tel. 04-985763 - day, 04-902374 - even.

PURCHASE/SALE FOR SALE YAMAHA PIANO U.S. new, bargain, 18 1/2, 500. Tel. 04-591846.

ABROAD DWELLINGS RENTALS QUEENS, NY: the best Jewish neighborhood, close to synagogue, with option to buy (as a result of return to Israel). Tel. 718-3804820, 03-914892.

SALES QUEENS, N.Y., luxury studio + terrace, pool, gym, doorman, indoor parking. $78,000. Tel. 03-552812, Fax. 03-557277.

Optometrist Practice for sale in Herzliya. Excellent opportunity. Owner travelling abroad. Tel. 03-6055047

MALIN ADVERTISING We Accept ALL kinds of Ads for THE JERUSALEM POST 19 King George St., Jerusalem

Debate over foreign players tempers start to Premier League

LONDON (AP) — On the heels of the World Cup, the excitement accompanying the start of another Premier League soccer season has been tempered by a new debate over the state of the English game.

On the surface, there's a lot to get excited about. Manchester United's group of international all-stars, who missed England's first-ever treble by just one game last season, will be aiming for a third straight league title and a second consecutive Football Association Cup crown.

The post-World Cup signing period proved a bonanza for several English teams, notably troubled Tottenham. The Spurs signed German superstar Jürgen Klinsmann to help ball the team out of a 6-point starting deficit in the standings — part of a sanctions package imposed by the FA on the club for past financial irregularities.

But England is still smarting from its failure to qualify for the World Cup. Players and coaches have laid much of the blame on the long domestic season, which leaves young stars suffering burnout and older ones more injury-prone.

This week, however, the head of the players' union, Gordon Taylor, fingered a new culprit — cheap foreign imports.

Taylor warned that big-money transfers — such as Chris Sutton's British record £5 million move from Norwich to Blackburn — were inflating the market, forcing less wealthy clubs to look abroad for cheaper options.

"You don't want people coming in who are no better than the people here, just cheaper," Taylor said. "Not so long ago we were teaching the Americans how to play. Now I've got work permits for them piling up on my desk."

One of those work permits belongs to Cobi Jones, the dreadlocked US World Cup midfielder signed by Coventry for £300,000. The team has been waiting for four weeks for the paperwork to come through, and now it appears Jones will still be cooling his heels in the United States when Coventry opens at home against Wimbledon tomorrow.

"I don't know why Taylor's taken that stand," said US striker Roy Wegerle, who is expected to line up with Jones at Coventry. "Foreign players are good for this league. There's some foreign talents here that are good for the pedigree of this league."

While Jones' application is still pending, another American hopeful, goalkeeper Brad Friedel, has been turned down by the government on advice from Taylor. Friedel was purchased by Newcastle, but Taylor said the Magpies already had two top-notch goalkeepers and he didn't see a need for a third, Newcastle is appealing.

Of the more than 100 foreigners from some 37 countries expected to play in England this season, none will be watched more than Klinsmann.

Purchased from Monaco for £2m, Klinsmann was brought in by Spurs' Argentine manager Ossie Ardiles along with another foreign player, Romania's Ilie Dumitrescu, to reinforce the team's uphill climb to avoid relegation. Tottenham opens tomorrow with a road game at Sheffield Wednesday.

Wegerle reflected the commonplace view that Manchester United and Blackburn, first and second place last season, will again be the teams to beat.

"They have the biggest depth to choose from and that's what usually wins championship races," Wegerle said. Arsenal, boosted by the signing of £1.75m. midfielder Stefan Schwarz, should again be a serious challenger. The Gunners were fourth last year, even though it seemed like Wright — 30 goals out of a total team of 67 — was the only one scoring.

The bookmaker Ladbrokes has United at 5-4, with Blackburn 4-1 and Arsenal 5-1. The Reds open at home to Queens Park Rangers, with Blackburn at Southampton and Arsenal hosting Manchester City.

Elsewhere tomorrow, it's Chelsea vs. Norwich, Crystal Palace vs. Liverpool, Everton vs. Aston Villa, Ipswich vs. Nottingham Forest and West Ham vs. Leeds.

Leicester, promoted from Division One along with Palace and Forest, hosts Newcastle on Sunday.

In Division One, early leader Oldham visits Port Vale and manager Bryan Robson's Middlesbrough plays at Southend tomorrow. Wolverhampton, led by former England manager Graham Taylor, visits Notts County on Sunday.

In Scotland, the big game pits six-time defending champion Rangers against Partick. Both were winners in their opening matches last Saturday.

McMillan's unbeaten 91 saves South Africa from disaster

LONDON (Reuters) — South African all-rounder Brian McMillan hit a defiant, unbeaten 91 as England's pace bowlers led by debutant Joey Benjamin battled for supremacy on the opening day of the third and final Test yesterday.

McMillan, whose century stand with wicketkeeper Dave Richardson was at the core of South Africa's 326 for eight, held on as England sought to end their innings before the close at The Oval with Benjamin and Phil DeFreitas taking three late wickets in the final session.

Benjamin, who took four for 42 in 17 overs in his first day of Test cricket, grabbed the crucial wicket of Richardson, caught by wicketkeeper Steve Rhodes when he was on 58.

The score then was 260. The South African pair had been together since the previous wicket at 136 had completed the fall of the touring side's top five batsmen.

South Africa's position had been worsened when Jonty Rhodes was struck on the head and forced to retire hurt after he had scored only eight runs. He was later given the all clear after a hospital brain scan but was to remain in hospital overnight for additional observation.

Rhodes, who suffers from reflex epilepsy which can be triggered by a blow to the head, was hit near the ear by a Devon Malcolm delivery.

He suffered a concussion, but a team spokesman said he would be able to rejoin the team today.

The day ended with the match finely balanced and McMillan on the verge of a maiden Test century as England seek to save the series with a victory following South Africa's triumph at Lord's in the first test.

The second Test was drawn. Before their fightback South Africa, who won the toss and chose to bat, looked likely to be blown away by the four-pronged pace attack of Benjamin, Malcolm, DeFreitas, who took three wickets for 90, and Darren Gough.

DeFreitas took first blood, having Gary Kirsten caught behind in his second over for just two runs with a ball cleverly angled across the left-hander.

Kirsten's half-brother Peter, who hit a superb century in the second test at Headingley, was next to go, bowled by Malcolm with a rapid inswinger for 16.

Hansie Cronje staged a minor recovery with captain Kepler Wessels before being trapped lbw by Benjamin for 38.

The final delivery before hunch completed a morning of misery for South Africa when the recalled Daryll Cullinan edged DeFreitas to give Rhodes his second catch.

Wessels survived a couple of near catches before going for 45, lbw to Benjamin.

McMillan and Richardson then played South Africa out of trouble before Benjamin's two late wickets in quick succession, his dismissal of Richardson being followed six runs later by Craig Matthews, caught at slip by Graham Hick for a duck.

DeFreitas rounded off the day's haul when he had Fanie de Villiers caught by Alec Stewart for 14 with the South African total at 301.

Alan Donald is unbeaten on 11 with McMillan and Rhodes could still come back to add to his eight runs.

HOWZAT — England bowler Phil DeFreitas celebrates after dismissing South African opener Gary Kirsten with his 12th delivery of the day in the final Test at The Oval. (Reuters)

Smashnova upsets Rubin in Canadian Open

MONTREAL (Reuters) — Israel's Anna Smashnova beat 15th-seeded Chanda Rubin 6-1, 6-2 on Wednesday and advanced to the third round at the $750,000 Canadian Open.

Top seed Steffi Graf fought through back problems to defeat Naoko Sawamatsu of Japan 6-1, 2-6, 6-2 to advance to the quarter-finals.

Graf received two on-court treatments from the tour trainer for her lower back problem in the third set of her third-round match.

Montreal-born Mary Pierce of France beat Rachel McQuillan of Australia 6-3, 6-2 to win her first tour match since the French Open and delight the local fans.

Other seeded players advancing were third seed Kimiko Date of Japan, seventh seed Amanda Coetzer of South Africa and ninth seeded Lori McNeil of the United States.

Pierce played four matches at the Federation Cup in July but had not played a tour match since losing to Arantxa Sanchez Vicario of Spain in the final of the French Open on June 5.

Pierce, ranked No. 5, is a big crowd favorite at Jarry Tennis Stadium because she was born in Montreal in 1975. She left Canada when she was five months old.

McNeil, ranked 17th, moved into the third round with a 2-6 win over France's Alexia Dechambe-Balleret.

Muscle spasms in the left hip forced the 31st-ranked Dechambe-Balleret to retire with the score 2-6, 6-3, 1-0 in the American's favor.

In other matches, Elena Likhovseva of Kazakhstan defeated 12th-seeded Iva Majoli of Croatia 6-4, 6-4 and Nathalie Baudone of Italy beat 13th-seeded Nathalie Tauziat of France 6-4, 6-3.

SPORTS BRIEFS

Henefeld out for month with broken hand

Maccabi Tel Aviv suffered a blow on Wednesday when Nadav Henefeld broke his hand in an exhibition game against France's Antibes. Henefeld will miss the season's opener on September 1 and is expected to be out for about a month. Maccabi won the game, 87-85.

Timberwolves fire Lowe as head coach

The Minnesota Timberwolves fired head coach Sidney Lowe, who directed them to a 20-62 record and a fifth-place finish in the Midwest Division last season. Only the Dallas Mavericks (13-69) had fewer wins than the Timberwolves. No successor has been named.

Two die in Seattle Kingdoms accident

Two people were killed Wednesday night in a construction crane accident at the Kingdom, a Seattle Fire Department spokeswoman said. The Kingdom has been closed since July 19 for renovation after four ceiling tiles fell. All 40,000 tiles have been removed and King County officers are in the process of replacing them with an alternative ceiling treatment.

Disabled Debate Turns Games Unfriendly

The Commonwealth Games, known as the "Friendly Games," lost some of its warmth Wednesday when the head of the Australian team said the inclusion of disabled athletes was "an embarrassment." Arthur Tunstall was roundly criticized by organizers, disabled athletes and even his own countrymen after his remarks were reported on the day before the Games were officially opened by Queen Elizabeth II. "It's got to be an embarrassment because people are going out of their way to assist them and the able people are a little bit embarrassed to have them around," Tunstall told the media.

English County Championships results

Close of play scores on the first day of four-day English County Championship cricket matches yesterday:

At Scarborough: Yorkshire 304-9 in 103 overs (B.Parker 62, P.Hartley 61, D.Byas 57) v Warwickshire.

At Derby: Kent 387-8 in 105 overs (S.Marsh 88, T.Ward 86, A.Ealham 64, D.Cork 5-79) v Derbyshire.

At Kidderminster: Nottinghamshire 278-7 in 98.3 overs (T.Robinson 67) v Worcestershire.

At Weston-Super-Mare: Somerset 226 in 82.2 overs (M.Lathwell 61, M.Holt 4-87). Essex 5-2 in six overs.

At Southampton: Surrey 150 in 65.1 overs (A.Brown 78, S.Udal 5-26). Hampshire 164-1 in 41 (P.Terry 84 not out, G.White 57 not out).

At Harncliffe: Glamorgan 206 in 46.5 overs (S.Brown 6-68). Durham 155-4 in 45 overs (J.Morris 57, J.Langley 52).

At Old Trafford: Lancashire 172 in 59.3 overs. Gloucestershire 139-2 in 47 overs (M.Windward 80 not out).

At Northampton: Middlesex 340-5 in 88.3 overs (J.Carr 132 not out, M.Roseberry 72) v Northamptonshire.

At Leicester: Leicestershire 192 in 66 overs. Sussex 57-1 in 17.1.

English League, Scottish League cups

Results of first round, first-leg English League Cup: Brighton 2, Wycombe 1; Bristol Rovers 1, Port Vale 3; Darlington 2, Barnsley 2; Exeter 2, Swansea 2; Portsmouth 2, Cambridge United 0; Preston 1, Stockport 1 (at Bury).

Results of second round Scottish League Cup: Aberdeen 1, Stranraer 0; Arbroath 1, Rangers 6; Dundee 3, Caledonian Thistle 0; Dumfries 4, Meadowbank 1; Hamilton 5, Clyde 0; Kilmarnock 4, East Fife 1; Queen Of South 0, Hibernian 3; Ross County 0, Raith 5; Stirling 0, St. Johnstone 2.

King barred from working with NJ casinos

Boxing promoter Don King, indicted last month on nine counts of wire fraud, was barred Wednesday from doing business with New Jersey casinos. King didn't appear before the state Casino Control Commission meeting at which regulators suspended his license to provide non-gambling services to casinos.

The federal indictment stemmed from a scheduled 1991 bout between Julio Cesar Chavez and Harold Brazier. The fight was canceled because Chavez cut his nose before the fight.

Christie wins 100 meters

ZURICH (AP) — Linford Christie of Britain beat a top lineup of American sprinters to take the men's 100-meter dash in a rain-soaked Weltklasse Grand Prix track meet Wednesday.

Americans won the top three places in the men's 400 meters, however, with Derek Mills in first at 44.93 seconds, Quincy Watts at 45.03 and Steve Lewis at 45.12.

The weather played havoc with some of the events and dashed hopes of setting world records in competition among leading world athletes.

The men's pole vault had to be called off.

The women's long jump was won by Inessa Kravets of Ukraine with 7.09 meters.

Steve Smith of Britain won the high jump at 2.28 meters. Javier Sotomayor of Cuba, world record holder at 2.45 meters, failed to place.

Michael Johnson of the US won the 200 meters in 20.33 seconds after fighting a strong head wind.

"There are those people who said I'm too old," said Christie, the 34-year-old Olympic champion, after finishing the 100 in 10.05 seconds under a steady drizzle. "I'm old, but I'm not cold."

Jon Drummond of the US, who had boasted he would break the world record at Zurich, was second in 10.15, and Olapade Adeniken of Nigeria was third in 10.22.

THAT WINNING FEELING — Linford Christie waves after his 100-meter victory in Zurich. (AP)

Leroy Burrell, who set the world mark of 9.85 at Lausanne, Switzerland, landed only a month ago, finished a poor seventh at 10.39 after struggling in his first heat. Dennis Mitchell, this season's most consistent runner with five times under 10 seconds, was fourth in 10.23.

The only top American missing from the star-studded race was Carl Lewis, who has often taunted Christie as avoiding a showdown with him. Lewis bowed out from the Zurich meet Monday because he is recovering from a stomach infection.

World record holder Noureddine Morceli of Algeria won the men's 5,000 meters in 13 minutes 3.85 seconds.

Derrick Adkins of the US slipped Samuel Mateo of Zambia at the wire to take the men's 400-meter hurdles, and Irina Privalova of Russia pounded through a downpour to snatch a photo finish victory from archrival Gena Torrence of the US in the women's 200 meters.

Adkins clocked a disappointing 47.90 at the prestigious men's event. Venuste Niyongabo of Burundi took the men's 1,500 meters in a driving rain with a time of 3 minutes, 36.15 seconds.

Olympic and world champion Andrey Abduvaliyev of Tajikistan turned in the second best result of the year in the hammer throw with a toss of 83.24 meters, bettering European champion Vasily Stodrenko of Russia with 82.02 meters and Igor Astapovich of Belarus with 80.5 meters.

Congress, fans attempt to pressure end to baseball strike

WASHINGTON (AP) — Baseball fans would help settle future Major League Baseball disputes under legislation introduced Wednesday in the US Senate.

The bill, sponsored by Senator Dennis DeConcini, would establish a five-member major league baseball commission consisting of three fans selected by the president, one player and one owner.

It would have the power to impose binding arbitration to settle disagreements between players and owners and regulate expansion, ticket prices, stadium financing, television revenues, marketing and merchandising.

Over the course of the six-day-old strike, 74 games have been canceled. With no negotiations scheduled between union and management representatives, the work stoppage will likely become today's baseball's second-longest in terms of canceled games, behind the 50-day strike in 1981 which wiped out 712.

The Montreal Expos became the first club to announce layoffs during the baseball strike. The club said Wednesday that 35 employees were put on vacation this week and they will be laid off when their vacations end after the strike's second week.

In another attempt to pressure baseball to end its strike, an organization of sports aficionados and a consumer group began a petition drive Wednesday.

Sports Fans United and the Consumer Federation of America said they expect to gather "thousands and thousands" of names on paper petitions and through a computer network service urging Congress to step in and end the strike.

The petitions ask Congress to repeal the antitrust exemption granted to professional baseball.

The players' union ordered the strike to pressure management to give up plans to impose a salary cap, which owners contend is needed for the sports financial viability. The players maintain they are caught in the middle of a dispute over revenue sharing between owners of clubs in large and small markets.

Sergio Tacchini

ITALY

AVAILABLE AT:
* SAKAL SPORT DUTY FREE SHOP, BEN-GURION AIR PORT
* EXCLUSIVE TENNIS & SPORT STORES

IMPORT/DISTRIBUTION: RACHEL ZOLNITEL. TEL. 03-494527

Only on weekdays can you enjoy these unique features in

THE JERUSALEM POST

ON SUNDAYS:

● "Perspective Weekly" brings you America's best comics, cartoons & columns.
● Ephraim Kishon, the greatest international "best seller" in Israel's history, is back in The Jerusalem Post with a rollicking column.
● Israel's leading physicians answer your health questions. Judy Siegel brings you the latest on new treatments and new technology.

ON MONDAYS:

● You get the New York Times's comprehensive, eight-page news review.
● And the "law report." Asher Felix Landau's unique review of court cases in the news.

ON TUESDAYS:

● The Arts and Entertainment pages feature Doris Szwed's internationally acclaimed dance reviews; Naomi Doukai's drama critiques; concert roundups by Benjamin Bar-Am and Ury Epstein; Tower Records' Top 15; new audio releases by Tzvi Agassi.

ON WEDNESDAYS:

● The Middle East page, brings you an Arab news digest, articles on and by Israel's neighbors.

ON THURSDAYS:

● The Post's "agony aunt" Ruth Blum answers readers' questions.
● Intelligence experts Uri Dan and Dornika Eisenberg give you inside stories of international intrigue.

Wiretapping suspect's lawyer questioned

RAINE MARCUS

MOTTI KATZ, defense lawyer of accused wiretapper Rafi Friedman, was questioned under caution for the second time yesterday by national crimes squad detectives.

Yediot Aharonot security officer Haim Rosenberg was also questioned under caution, apparently about cash transactions between private investigator David Spector and Yediot. It was also the second time Rosenberg was summoned for questioning.

Spector, who complained to police that Ma'ariv publisher Ofer Nimrodi had offered him money, using lawyer Katz as an intermediary, to frame Yediot by uncovering or fabricating information that the Yediot was involved in illegal wiretapping, was called to give evidence yesterday.

Nimrodi, who was questioned by detectives two weeks ago in connection with illegal wiretapping and his possible connection with private investigators Friedman and his partner Ya'acov Tsur, said at the time that Yediot had paid Spector NIS 1.25 million to spy on Ma'ariv.

The Tel Aviv weekly, Ha'ir, owned by Amos Shoken, published a front page story today claiming that Katz was paid by Nimrodi to represent in court Friedman and Tsur, accused of tapping hundreds of phones and mobile phones belonging to politicians, businessmen and senior media employees and managers.

Friedman and Tsur have refused to tell police who commissioned the wide-scale wiretapping.

Renovations and Painting

Touti Brothers

General construction, electrical, plumbing and carpentry, carpet installation, professional cleaning and floor polishing.

Responsible, reliable and dependable.

Reasonable rates, free estimate

Telephone, 02-513613, 02-518053.

CALL HOME FREE

DISCOUNT INTERNATIONAL TELEPHONE CALLS

MOBILEPHONE RENTING & SELLING

JERUSALEM: 2 LUTET ST. TEL. 02-251-008

TEL-AVIV: 15 FREEDMAN ST. TEL. 03-522-4424

'Fairer not to deduct losses from TASE tax'

EVELYN GORDON

ALLOWING stock market losses to be offset against earnings when calculating the new capital gains tax would create more unfairness than it would solve. Treasury officials said yesterday.

"As we all know, there is no absolute justice in any tax," said Income Tax Commissioner Doron Levy, speaking at a Tel Aviv press conference.

Levy said that since there is no universal filing requirement in Israel – and neither the government nor the public is interested in starting one – the only way to permit the offsetting of losses would be a voluntary filing system, where anyone wanting to offset his losses could choose to file a tax return.

However, said State Revenues Director Yoram Gabbai, this system would discriminate against small investors.

Currently, he explained, the 10% tax on profits, with no offsetting, works out to an average effective tax rate of some 15%-18%. To achieve the same revenues with offsetting, the tax would have to be much higher.

For someone who files tax returns anyway, such as a self-employed person, or for someone who invests a large sum in the stock market, it would be worthwhile to file a return and offset losses. But the small, salaried investor would not want to bother – so he would wind up paying a much higher rate, thereby subsidizing the large investors.

"In my opinion, this would drive salaried workers out of the stock market," he said.

Meir Shavit, head of the Treasury's capital markets division, added that even a voluntary reporting system would greatly increase the amount of filing, at a time when most countries are trying to move away from this system.

"The tax authorities don't want to deal with another 30,000 files a year," he said.

While solutions might exist to all these problems, Levy said, they certainly could not have been found in the short time and with the small number of staffers devoted to the problem for reasons of secrecy. For the same reason, there are still a number of details that need to be worked out before legislation is submitted, he added.

Levy said the Treasury had also considered the imposition of a turnover tax – a tax on every stock transaction – which is the simplest of all to collect, but rejected the idea because it would discourage investing. Capital gains taxes, however, exist in most countries, and have not been found to discourage market activity, Gabbai noted.

There is no economic reason for the announcement of the new tax to shake up the market, Gabbai added. On the contrary, he said, it might add stability to the market, because there will no longer be a plunge every few months due to the latest rumor of imminent stock market taxation.

Gabbai said the major justification for the stock market tax was to correct the historic injustice whereby workers paid tax on their income but market players did not. Shavit said it was also meant to correct the "historic distortion" whereby some types of investment – such as interest on certain savings plans – were taxed, while income from stocks and bonds was not. Bonds will also be subject to the new tax.

The main Israeli stocks traded on Wall Street fell last night following Wednesday's rebounds. Elscint dropped 10.6%, Tadiran 4.5%, Teva 2.4% and Scitex 1.3% in lively trading.

Investors continued to wait anxiously for the Tel Aviv Stock Exchange to reopen on Sunday, following Tuesday's dramatic announcement by the finance minister of a tax on stock market gains.

A source at one of the leading banks said sell orders had been lighter than expected yesterday, and he estimated total sell orders for all the banks at about NIS 100 million.

Detectives release sketches of hit man sought in Tel Aviv shooting

RAINE MARCUS

DETECTIVES hunting for the murderer of underworld figure Amnon Bahashian, 50, shot dead on August 10 by a hit man, have issued four sketches of the suspect, and are asking for the public's help in identifying the killer.

Anyone who may recognize the man in the sketches or can help trace the killer should phone Superintendent Rahamim Cohen at 03-545449/50.

The man police are looking for is tall, slim, suntanned and in his late twenties or early thirties.

The sketches are based on eyewitnesses who saw the gunman walk up to Bahashian in his Tel Aviv restaurant, pump three bullets into his head and then coolly walk away.

The murder occurred at around 11:35 p.m. at Shwama Shaul on the corner of the city's busy Dizengoff/Tbn Givrol intersection.

Police have set up a special squad led by Cohen to investigate the murders of underworld figures Bahashian, Yehzekiel Aslan and Meir Sultan. The modus operandi in all three cases bear startling similarities: Aslan was gunned down at around midnight as he was leaving a restaurant 18 months ago, while Sultan was shot dead in his pool hall around two months ago, both by a man wearing a baseball cap and dark glasses.

In the past the three also had business ties. In recent years they owned legitimate businesses which police believe were bought with laundered money obtained from illegal enterprises.

Bahashian, who lived for many years in the US, was wanted there on attempted murder charges. He was known to the FBI as one of the leaders of the Israeli mafia.

One source yesterday still stuck by a theory that a hired killer was commissioned from abroad to carry out the murders, and then left

One of the police sketches of the murder suspect

Israel shortly afterwards.

"We checked all airports and ports immediately after Bahashian's murder, but we didn't know who we were looking for – it could be one of thousands of travelers," said a detective.

The activities of Yehiel Biton, 51, of Tel Aviv, were first exposed on Wednesday night by Channel Two's "Kolbodek" program. After watching filmed evidence implicating the man whose duty it was to list gets, national fraud squad detectives arrested him.

Biton was filmed receiving NIS 500 from Rami Cohen to speed up his papers.

Cohen had said that since he was about to travel abroad, he needed his get quickly. In fact, said police, Cohen received his get the same day he started divorce proceedings, which usually take months.

Police told the court that Biton was not officially authorized by the rabbinical court to authorize gets, but was merely employed to list them.

Police found a list of other names, believed to be others who gave Biton bribes.

His defense lawyer said that his client believed he was carrying out a mitzva and accepted money as a tip for his services.

But police said that although the investigation against Biton was complete, they needed more time to question additional rabbinical court personnel, and to prevent the suspect from contacting them or disrupting their inquiries.

Police found a list of other names, believed to be others who gave Biton bribes.

His defense lawyer said that his client believed he was carrying out a mitzva and accepted money as a tip for his services.

But police said that although the investigation against Biton was complete, they needed more time to question additional rabbinical court personnel, and to prevent the suspect from contacting them or disrupting their inquiries.

Police found a list of other names, believed to be others who gave Biton bribes.

His defense lawyer said that his client believed he was carrying out a mitzva and accepted money as a tip for his services.

But police said that although the investigation against Biton was complete, they needed more time to question additional rabbinical court personnel, and to prevent the suspect from contacting them or disrupting their inquiries.

Police found a list of other names, believed to be others who gave Biton bribes.

His defense lawyer said that his client believed he was carrying out a mitzva and accepted money as a tip for his services.

But police said that although the investigation against Biton was complete, they needed more time to question additional rabbinical court personnel, and to prevent the suspect from contacting them or disrupting their inquiries.

Police found a list of other names, believed to be others who gave Biton bribes.

His defense lawyer said that his client believed he was carrying out a mitzva and accepted money as a tip for his services.

But police said that although the investigation against Biton was complete, they needed more time to question additional rabbinical court personnel, and to prevent the suspect from contacting them or disrupting their inquiries.

Police found a list of other names, believed to be others who gave Biton bribes.

Shohat tells 'Post': IDF wages are too high

NEIL COHEN and ALON PINKAS

WAGES in the IDF are too high. Finance Minister Avraham Shohat said in an interview with the Jerusalem Post yesterday.

Shohat rejected out of hand allegations by defense sources that the Treasury is waging a propaganda war against the defense establishment as it wrangles over the defense budget for the coming year. "It's just not true," Shohat said of the accusations, "but a large chunk of [the defense] budget goes to salaries and improved conditions. I think [wages in the army] are too high and need to be adjusted to the rest of the economy."

The army is resentful and combative concerning recurrent Treasury allegations that high salaries are the reason why the defense budget will not be increased.

"The people in the Treasury are saying that a career army officer should be ashamed to earn a decent living and serve just for ideological reasons. This is manipulative propaganda which is also an inaccurate representation of facts," a senior army officer said last night.

In the military, salaries for staff and non-combat officers in the ranks ranging from captain to colonel are either comparable to or less than an equivalent job or position in the civilian sector, the officer emphasized.

A non-field staff captain makes NIS 2,981. A company commander stationed in Lebanon makes NIS 4,800. The difference is "added field hazards." A colonel with a university degree and responsibility for 1,000 soldiers and officers makes NIS 12,916 gross.

Moreover, the army contends that an increasingly lucrative civilian market makes it difficult for the military to prevent a dangerous brain drain, especially in the professional and highly technological areas of expertise in the air force, the navy and the intelligence branch.

Full interview with Shohat, Page B1

Rabbinical Court employee remanded on bribery charges

RAINE MARCUS

AN EMPLOYEE of the Tel Aviv Rabbinical Court, suspected of receiving cash bribes in return for providing gets to people waiting for a divorce, was remanded for five days by Tel Aviv Magistrate's Court yesterday.

The activities of Yehiel Biton, 51, of Tel Aviv, were first exposed on Wednesday night by Channel Two's "Kolbodek" program. After watching filmed evidence implicating the man whose duty it was to list gets, national fraud squad detectives arrested him.

Biton was filmed receiving NIS 500 from Rami Cohen to speed up his papers.

Cohen had said that since he was about to travel abroad, he needed his get quickly. In fact, said police, Cohen received his get the same day he started divorce proceedings, which usually take months.

Police told the court that Biton was not officially authorized by the rabbinical court to authorize gets, but was merely employed to list them.

Police found a list of other names, believed to be others who gave Biton bribes.

His defense lawyer said that his client believed he was carrying out a mitzva and accepted money as a tip for his services.

But police said that although the investigation against Biton was complete, they needed more time to question additional rabbinical court personnel, and to prevent the suspect from contacting them or disrupting their inquiries.

Police found a list of other names, believed to be others who gave Biton bribes.

His defense lawyer said that his client believed he was carrying out a mitzva and accepted money as a tip for his services.

But police said that although the investigation against Biton was complete, they needed more time to question additional rabbinical court personnel, and to prevent the suspect from contacting them or disrupting their inquiries.

Police found a list of other names, believed to be others who gave Biton bribes.

His defense lawyer said that his client believed he was carrying out a mitzva and accepted money as a tip for his services.

But police said that although the investigation against Biton was complete, they needed more time to question additional rabbinical court personnel, and to prevent the suspect from contacting them or disrupting their inquiries.

Police found a list of other names, believed to be others who gave Biton bribes.

His defense lawyer said that his client believed he was carrying out a mitzva and accepted money as a tip for his services.

But police said that although the investigation against Biton was complete, they needed more time to question additional rabbinical court personnel, and to prevent the suspect from contacting them or disrupting their inquiries.

Police found a list of other names, believed to be others who gave Biton bribes.

His defense lawyer said that his client believed he was carrying out a mitzva and accepted money as a tip for his services.

But police said that although the investigation against Biton was complete, they needed more time to question additional rabbinical court personnel, and to prevent the suspect from contacting them or disrupting their inquiries.

Supreme Court accepts appeal against releasing alleged wiretappers on bail

THE Supreme Court yesterday accepted the state's appeal against the release on bail of suspected wiretappers Hani Mazaki and Ya'acov Eshel and ordered them held until the completion of legal proceedings against them.

Justices Shlomo Levin, Ya'acov Kedmi and Dalia Dornier will give the reasons for their decision at a later date.

Both the Tel Aviv Magistrate's Court and the Tel Aviv District Court had previously ruled that Mazaki and Eshel did not constitute enough of a danger to the public to justify their remand until the end of proceedings.

In yesterday's hearing, Nava Ben-Dor, representing the state, said the wiretapping incidents should be regarded as the equivalent of a break-in.

She said the two continued to ply their trade even after being warned against further wiretapping by a court, and after they expressed remorse for earlier offenses and promised the court they would not commit them again.

Ben-Dor said wiretapping had become "a national plague," with 56 indictments for the crime presented in the first half of this year.

The lawyers for Eshel and Mazaki argued that the crimes could not be compared to break-ins, and said they posed no threat to the public.

However, Levin asked them how the court could believe the promises the two had made to stop the wiretapping if they had broken such promises in the past.

Eshel and Mazaki had committed additional wiretapping offenses even as they were being tried for an earlier offense, the bugging of Yediot Aharonot journalist Mordechai Gilat in an attempt to discover his sources for a series of articles on former interior minister Aryeh Deri. Both were convicted in that case and are under suspended sentences.

They are currently being charged with several counts of wiretapping and conspiracy, relating to investigations ordered by jealous spouses, businessmen, and others.

District Court Judge Nathan Amit had released the two suspects on condition that they give up their profession entirely, and that the lawyers present proof of this, including proof that their offices have been shut down, to the court within 30 days. (Itim)

Amitai files petition in Deri case

CITIZENS for Good Government (Amitai) yesterday asked the High Court of Justice to order Attorney-General Michael Ben-Yair to explain why he has not filed an indictment against MK Aryeh Deri for allegedly illegally distributing public funds when he was interior minister.

The group claimed in its petition that Ben-Yair had failed to order a hearing over suspicion that Deri had transferred government funds to organizations associated with Shas via the local authorities. The local authorities, the petition said, acted as a channel for the funds. (Itim)

SPECIAL OFFER

Summer in Sinai !!!

with Neot Hakikar

- ★ 4 Day Sinai Safari $ 190.-
- ★ 6 Day Trek, The High Range Circuit $ 245.-
- ★ Action Vacation in Sinai (2 day tour + 3 nights in hotel) From $ 206.-
- ★ Vacation in Sinai (3 nights) From $ 90.-

For more details, please contact one of our offices.

NEOT HAKIKAR TOURING CO.

Tel Aviv: 78, Ben Yehuda St. Tel. 03-5228161
Jerusalem: 5, Shimonzion Hamalcha St. Tel. 02-635262
Eilat: Amiel Khan Center. Tel. 07-3304256

REGULAR TOURS, HOTELS, PACKAGE DEAL.

SEASON'S SPECIAL

ISRAEL Rent a Car from $29 unlimited Special Limousine Service. Jeep Safari / Hiking Tours / Hotels - Special Deal.

JORDAN Amman - Petra - Akaba - Special tour.

EGYPT Exclusive-Daily-Midnight express bus to Cairo Nile Cruise - Special Deal. Cairo, Luxor, Aswan, Abu Simbel, Hurghada - regular tour.

SINAI Hotels, Diving Safari.

ALL TOURIST SERVICES AVAILABLE TO SYRIA, LEBANON, SAUDI ARABIA AND GULF STATES

For all information call us: MAZADA TOURS

TEL AVIV: 141 BEN GURION ST. TEL: 03-5444444, FAX: 03-5441122
JERUSALEM: 4 KING DAVID ST. TEL: 02-3577777, FAX: 02-3554444
HAIFA: 1 KHAJAT ST. TEL: 04-8244440, FAX: 04-8244444

STEIMATZKY NOW

JUST ARRIVED INTERNATIONAL BESTSELLERS

IN PAPERBACK

WAR AND ANTIWAR	SURVIVAL AT THE DAWN OF THE 21ST CENTURY	DANIEL STEEL	32.00
THE HOPE	HERMAN WOOLK	34.00	PRICE NIS
NIGHTMARES & DREAMSCAPES	STEPHEN KING	33.00	PRICE NIS

STEIMATZKY MEANS BOOKS

Summer Feast at
The American Colony Hotel
Thursday night - pasta delights + poolside buffet
Friday night - poolside barbecue at
Sat. Buffet - at "Arabesque"
To reserve - Tel. 285171, 282421.
Nablus Road, East Jerusalem
(near Road No. 1)
Managed by the Swiss Gauer Group

FRIDAY, AUGUST 19, 1994

A package of social justice and fiscal prudence

The growing need to restructure taxation prompted Finance Minister Avraham Shohat to formulate reforms announced earlier this week, Neil Cohen reports

THE government's dramatic liberalization plan announced on Tuesday had been in the works for months, and was only awaiting the appropriate time for presentation, according to Finance Minister Avraham Shohat.

"There's no time that would have been good for the stock exchange, but it's the middle of the term, we've just presented the budget, we'd finalized the liberalization package with the Bank of Israel, [and] so we decided to present the whole package in one go," Shohat said.

"Ten days ago I went to the prime minister and then we went into high gear," he said. "We kept the decision under wraps so well that when we announced it everyone at the press conference was really shocked - I saw it on their faces - and I'm glad it turned out that way."

The major impetus for reversing previous decisions not to tax stock market gains was the growing need to reduce purchase taxes and the cost of labor, Shohat said.

"There was no logic that other things be taxed and not the stock exchange, and the reductions had to be financed somehow and this was a convenient way to do so," he said.

While obviously concerned about the rise in inflation, Shohat said that neither the package in general nor taxing stock market gains in particular was connected to Monday's disappointingly high consumer price index, the fourth in a row.

"Even if the CPI had been low, we still would have gone ahead with the plan," he said. "The package isn't meant to cut inflation. I don't think these decisions will have an immediate impact on inflation, but they will help, since some of the elements will reduce prices and thus moderate inflation."

Shohat said he is working on a plan aimed at reducing inflation. He sees the culprit in the struggle not only as escalating housing prices, but also in the public sector wage agreements signed in the last few months.

"Public sector wages in certain sectors are above what we'd like," he said. "But you have to remember that the agreements were signed for four years, and the major impact is in the first two."

There is not much Shohat can do about agreements already signed, but he does have plans to try to mitigate their effects.

"On Sunday I intend to present a plan to the cabinet to cut several hundred million shekels from the public sector wage bill," he said. "There won't be any firings, we just won't replace people who retire or leave. Most of this attrition will be on the administrative side."

Shohat is still hopeful that he can hold the line on the defense budget, although he does not appear to be getting unreserved support from the prime minister, who is, of course, also the defense minister.

"The chief of staff demanded that the defense budget grow to match the growth in GDP," Shohat said. "I presented my position in the cabinet that it remain the same in real terms. The prime minister took note with the seriousness the issue deserves."

Shohat denies recent defense establishment allegations that the Treasury is waging a war of words against them.

But Shohat does not hide his criticisms of them. "A large chunk of the budget goes to salaries and improved conditions," he said. "Wages in the army are relatively high compared to the rest of the public sector. In fact, I think they're too high, and they need to be adjusted to the rest of the economy."

Shohat is conscious of some of the problems of the structure of the stock market tax proposal, particularly investors' inability to offset losses against gains.

"But we decided, for technical reasons, that this was the easiest way to go," he said. "A transaction tax would also have been unfair, and offset would have made collection of the tax very complicated, requiring everyone who invests in the stock market to file a tax return. We'll just have to see how it goes."

Shohat played down the banks' complaints about being burdened with administering collection of the tax.

"I would have been surprised if they hadn't complained," but they won't be expected to pick up the tab, he said. "There will be negotiations between the Income Tax Authority and the banks, and they will be remunerated accordingly."

But when asked about the problem of December 31, 1994 being the base date for calculating profits, Shohat seemed less aware of the issue.

The Tel Aviv Stock Exchange before (top), and after (middle) Tuesday's announcement of economic reforms by Bank of Israel Governor Jacob Frenkel (left) and Finance Minister Avraham Shohat.

Someone who bought at a high price which has fallen sharply by the base date and which rises somewhat subsequently will be taxed on a losing position.

He said he would look into correcting any possible inequality that might result from this.

In other issues, Shohat said he is concerned about the various crises facing the economy - Kupat Holim, the defense industries and the kibbutzim.

But he effectively ruled out drastic action. "You are faced with the decision of whether to allow the whole thing to unravel or to try to create some kind of financial arrangement which will preserve something."

Despite the crises and challenges the economy faces, Shohat is optimistic. "The economy is growing," he said, noting that is what is needed most in the upcoming year.

"Exports are up, investment is up. Unemployment is down. We're spending more money on education, infrastructure."

Frenkel: Gains tax is part of greater 'structural policy'

The Bank of Israel governor finds grounds to commend - and condemn - this week's economic moves, Neil Cohen reports

JACOB Frenkel is adamant that Tuesday's shock decision to tax capital gains on the Stock Exchange had nothing to do with the worsening inflation crisis. "Any time is as good as another," he says.

The Bank of Israel governor denies that the timing of the announcement was in any way related to the previous day's disappointing consumer price index.

"Concrete preparations by the professionals in the Treasury were carried out in a systematic way over quite a period of time," he says.

Frenkel is equally adamant that when the prime minister spoke out so vehemently against taxing the stock exchange a month and a half ago, Rabin had no idea that Tuesday's developments were in the wind.

The professional staff [of the Treasury] examined various possibilities for quite a while," but the decision was made by the political echelon only in the last few days.

Frenkel ascribes the timing of the announcement to a "growing recognition that there is a need to lower taxes currently levied on activities hampered by the tax burden - especially on the business sector. Everyone understands that economic growth and investment cannot get the appropriate boost from a rising tax burden of the type we have had."

"We have for some time called for a reduction in the tax burden together with a continuous reduction in the budget deficit. The government has adopted the budget deficit [proposal], but the reduction in taxes embodied in the budget was too small for my taste, and therefore it was essential to seek a mechanism to broaden the tax base."

Frenkel is anxious that the plan to tax stock-market gains be seen as only one part of a package that he terms "structural policies," which, he says, "by their nature bear fruit - as far as the economy is concerned - only in the longer term by reducing distortions. They increase the flexibility of the economic system, especially in a period when it undergoes so many other changes that may require the reallocation of resources."

"Some of the measures may mitigate some costs, but I would put them in the [same] category as measures to increase trade liberalization. We still have to implement macroeconomic policies to stabilize inflation. The package is no substitute for solutions to, and does not aim to deal with, macroeconomic problems [like inflation]."

While Frenkel is careful to defend the government's timing and credibility regarding the plan, he does not mince words on the government's efforts to fight inflation.

He calls the public-sector wage agreements "disastrous."

"We have inflation and it's not just housing prices. The wage agreements that have been negotiated in the public sector have definitely been excessive. They reflect a much higher real wage for the coming three years than [has been the case] for many years in the past; [the wage agreements] have burdened the economy for three years to come..."

Furthermore, the government should do all it can to reduce the number of employees in the public sector. [This] will increase the supply of labor to the private sector [putting downward pressure on wages and] keeping costs down."

Frenkel indirectly attacks another of the government's weak spots. "We still have a lot of monopolies. No compromise should even be considered on trade liberalization. Any compromise will seriously erode credibility; the government should use the momentum the people see to increase competition in the marketplace."

Frenkel points to the impact that even the threat of competition to the cellular phone monopoly has had on prices.

If there is a hint of impatience with the slowness of economic reform and progress, Frenkel concedes it well. "Economic principles that are now consensus among senior politicians - like cutting taxes while at the same time reducing the budget deficit - were not restrictions that politicians would have imposed on themselves a few years ago. So I'm very pleased that they are now taken for granted..."

The governor is also patient about the foreign currency reforms, which took a cautious step forward on Tuesday. He refuses to speculate when the country will move to a freely convertible currency; he won't even commit himself to a target before the end of the decade.

But he is satisfied that "the trajectory we have been following for a while [progressive small steps liberalizing foreign currency regulations] is still in place."

"The [timetable] will not depend on when how many years pass, but rather on how fast we can bring down inflation to the levels prevalent among our trading partners."

This may mean that the recent bout of inflation has slowed the process down.

UNITED NATIONS NATIONS UNIES

The United Nations invites qualified companies to submit expressions of interest in receiving requests for proposals for:

THE PROVISION OF DRY, CHILLED AND FROZEN FOODSTUFFS to its peace keeping missions:

UNIFIL in Lebanon; UNDOF in Golan Heights; and UNFICYP in Cyprus.

Expression of interest shall include:

(A) company profile; (B) experience in the provision of food supplies together with a list of previously completed and current contracts, volume and value of each contract, and a list of bona fide clients; and (C) company's financial statement and certified audit thereof.

Interested companies may submit such expression of interest and documents mentioned herein either by facsimile transmission or courier service to reach the following address not later than 1500 hours on Thursday 25 August 1994.

Chief Administrative Officer
UNIFIL
P.O. Box 75, Nahariya 22100, Israel
Fax number: 04-825228
or call Tel. 04-825544, ext. 5297/5410

Maccabi members don't have to wait for the doctor!

Doctors Tele - Directory
03-5177111

Sun., Thurs., 8:00-19:00. Fri., 8:00-12:00 Call, and you'll be referred to the nearest available doctor.

MACCABI

BIBLE LANDS MUSEUM JERUSALEM presents a series of SATURDAY NIGHT CONCERTS

Saturday, August 20th, 1994, at 9:15 p.m.

THE ROYAL TRIO

a Unique Ensemble playing Vivaldi, Bach, Mozart and others

Museum opens at 8:30 p.m. Concert begins at 9:15 p.m.

WINE AND CHEESE ON THE HOUSE

Admission NIS 25, NIS 20 - Museum members, olim, students, soldiers and seniors

Benefits The Jerusalem Post Funds

Next week: Sing a Song for Peace, Songs by Yair Rosenblum, 27.8.94, 9:15 p.m.

BIBLE LANDS MUSEUM JERUSALEM
25 Granot St., Jerusalem, Tel. 611066

LET US SHARE YOUR DREAM!

BEAUTIFUL CUSTOM LOG HOMES - STARTING AT $135,000

NEW IN ISRAEL

50 YEAR WARRANTY

Nobody Knows Log Homes like we do!

With a combined experience of over 100 years, "1867 Confederation Log Homes" has perfected the balance between traditional design, modern manufacturing and construction techniques.

- First class Canadian craftsmanship and quality
- Fast, efficient construction
- Also second floors, extensions, commercial buildings and summer resorts.

Tel. 02-439195
050-210074

11 Ha-Meyassdim St., Beit Hakerem, Jerusalem.
Sun.-Thurs. 9 a.m.-4 p.m., Fri., till 12 noon.

Rosh HaShana 5754 Special

Full Board $79

- Synagogue
- Kosher LeMehadrin, Shmitta L'Chumra
- Outstanding Holiday Meals
- Short Walking Distance to the Kotel & Great Synagogue
- Elegant Rooms, Low Floors

Price is per person per night in a double room, for Israelis only, minimum 3 nights

Special prices for children in parent's room. Three payments with credit card.

King Solomon Hotel
32 King David St., Jerusalem
Tel. 02-695 555, Fax 02-241 774

A depressed Arafat looks to democracy to lift his spirits

Three months after the establishment of the autonomous areas, many Palestinians believe that success depends on transforming Arafat into a democrat, Jon Immanuel reports

PALESTINIAN politics three months after the establishment of self-rule in Gaza and Jericho is based on 3-D: Depression, Democracy and Donors.

Depression describes PLO Chairman Arafat's frequent expressions of pessimism. Democracy is the frequently used description of the order Palestinians say they want. Donors are the foreign governments whom Arafat considers political meekers because they place conditions on the use of their money. Arafat appeared depressed at a meeting with Israeli peace activists on August 2, after Israel signed the Washington Declaration with Jordan, as he had in an interview with Vanity Fair magazine on February 24. In both cases, some of his visitors, who had seen him in 1982 during some of his worst days under siege in Lebanon, said they had never known him in such a mood.

In many ways Arafat feels more under siege now than he was then. As Arafat pointed out on August 2, Rabin has only his own internal opposition to contend with. "I have an internal opposition, an Arab opposition and an Islamic opposition," not to mention an international community which he perceives as more pro-Israeli than pro-Palestinian.

Rather than regarding self-rule in Gaza as a foothold to Palestinian statehood, he says he fears it is a trap from which "there is no turning back," in effect justifying the opponents of the peace process.

Democracy, which Palestinians express with great fervor, is another problem for Arafat. Although various groups interpret the word differently, on one point they agree - Arafat cannot rule as an absolute dictator. Which brings us back to his depression. It is clear to him now that he enjoyed a greater feeling of power in Tunis than he does in Gaza.

Arafat's main nod towards democracy to date has been his decision to permit demonstrations by the opposition. His depression is magnified by the realization that the conditions suggest to him that they are trying to influence internal Palestinian political affairs.

The good news is there are signs Arafat is mellowing - not only in bending to donor demands, but in understanding how democracy may work for him.

Take the An-Nahar affair. Without much thought, Arafat ordered 900 copies of the newspaper confiscated on July 28 at the Erez checkpoint because it expressed one-sided approval of the Washington Declaration.

Arafat had the papers stacked up neatly in the storeroom next to his office in the Palestinian Broadcasting Corporation building.

Few Palestinians are willing to support this blatant silencing of a newspaper, but none can accuse Arafat publicly.

On the other hand, they see it as a turning point in his reeducation. They say his intention was not to silence the press, but to make a political point to Jordan.

"Closing An-Nahar was a political message to Jordan using the wrong address," said Mahdi Abdel-Hadi, director of PASSIA, the Palestinian Academic Society for the Study of International Affairs which is one of at least five research centers trying to establish the ground rules for future Palestinian democracy. "An-Nahar was the first thing that came to hand," he says.

Closing a newspaper to strike at a third party does not make the move any more acceptable. Ministers in the Palestinian Authority have slowly been trying to explain to him that, though responsibility for policy is his alone, silencing a newspaper is not the way to hit at Jordan.

This is what Planning Minister Nabil Shaath apparently meant when he made the strange statement that the action against An-Nahar was "a political issue, not one of free-expression."

THESE ARE early days yet, and there is still no basic law which spells out clearly Arafat's powers and limitations. It is not even clear how such a law limiting his powers can be ratified except by a freely elected Palestinian Council.

Problems keep coming up. In July, Arafat responded to popular opinion by deciding to reinstate Police Col. Mounther Ershad, whom he had fired for taking the law into his own hands and diverting a water canal in Jericho from private to public use.

In Jericho, merchants supported Ershad by closing their shops in protest against Arafat's move.

Ershad's actions were reasonable considering the scarcity of water in Jericho; but in reinstating him Arafat countermanded an order by his own justice minister, Fehil Abu-Medina, who said "soldiers should not be judges."

Abu-Medina wanted the courts to rule on the issue.

Elections are scheduled for December 15, and Arafat is committed to them, mainly to ensure a personal mandate.

From Israel's point of view, the main purpose of the elections is to establish an administrative council, to exercise control over health, education, social welfare, tourism and tax collection.

But the framers of a Palestinian constitution want to persuade Arafat, whose place at the top is assured, that limits on his own authority by a legislature demonstrating real muscle in affirming Palestinian independence of Israeli laws, will give him more prestige than being the sole authority in an autonomous homeland where Israeli laws ultimately remain in force.

Palestinians have not forgotten Arafat's notice in Al-Quds on May 24 in which he announced the abolition of all Israeli military regulations in effect since 1967. Under the terms of the Cairo agreement, only a convened administrative council can take such a step with Israel's consent.

With all the talk about democracy following the closure of An-Nahar, it is not surprising that in his first interview with a local newspaper since returning to Gaza, Arafat dwelt on democracy at length.

The interview appeared in the 're-opened Al-Awda weekly, which Israel closed in 1988 and is owned by Arafat's mother-in-law Raymondah Tawil. He told this reporter two weeks ago that he closed An-Nahar because "it violated Palestinian law." But at this point only Jordanian, Egyptian and Israeli laws exist.

Public sits ringside at IDF budget fight

The Treasury is decrying a bloated bureaucracy; the military is stressing deterrence. Both are making their pitches to voters, Alon Pinkas writes

THE Defense and Finance ministries have, until this week, held a low-key, uncharacteristically mellow discussion on military allocations to be included in the budget. The annual state budget is to be finalized in October.

Actually, the civilized tone noted by observers is passing, as the big issues - the peace process and long-range threats - come to the fore. The fight will be moved from the cabinet and the Knesset, and into the arena of public opinion.

This is all part of a ritual, of which verbal feuding and innuendos are but an integral part. The debate's temperature starting rising as senior army officers on Wednesday called the Treasury's tactics misleading propaganda, and economic writers echoed the vehement anti-defense broadsides of their sources.

This debate is taking place against a background of constant healthy growth. Major economic indicators point to further development, as the return on immigration begins to show in the next two years and abundant foreign and local investment follow privatization.

The IDF in the last year alone has acquired $2 billion worth of state-of-the-art F-15 jets - to be delivered by 1997 - and added to its arsenal Apache and Blackhawk attack helicopters. It just received the first of its advanced SAAR-5 missile boats, and by 1996-97 will get tailor-made Dolphin-class submarines from Germany.

The Armored Corps is being equipped with Merkava III battle tanks, and the Merkava IV, undoubtedly the best tank ever made, is well into production despite a downsized production line. The Artillery Corps just purchased and will receive the MLRS rocket system.

So why are the two sides arguing? Because the two trends are incompatible in the long run.

As the debate accelerates, the Finance Ministry will manipulate indicators and threaten that the severe economic burden of military spending will impede growth.

The Defense Ministry and the IDF will provide their customary doomday scenarios of an ill-trained army perilously close to "red lines" in ammunition, flight hours, weapons systems acquisitions and maintenance. The Treasury will respond by saying that 38 percent of the defense budget goes to salaries for an inflated bureaucracy that does not contribute to the economy.

Defense will ask for compensation for redeployment derived from the Oslo and Cairo accords, higher cost of routine security on the Lebanese border and the fight against terrorism. The current budget will suffice, Finance will say. National security will be compromised. Defense will argue.

Both are right, which is what the budget process is all about.

The defense establishment will find it more difficult than ever to sell a budget increase to a critical public that is all too familiar with military waste and that is witnessing the peace process. Moreover, for the last three years, the annual intelligence assessment has emphasized a diminished short- and medium-range threat; the country's strategic position has never been as favorable.

The 1994 budget stands at NIS 20.24 billion. Of this, 67% is in shekels, 30% is the annual US military grant of $1.8b., of which $475 million are convertible to shekels. The rest must be spent in the US. Another 3% in foreign currency is for daily operations and expenditures. Since 1982, the defense establishment says its buying power has dropped by 19.4%. The IDF is also quick to stress that the US aid is really less than that in real terms, as a result of inflation in the US and the decline of the shekel against the dollar.

However, the US assists with another component of the budget: free weapons systems. The total value of these presents is estimated at over $2.1b. It consists of 24 Apache attack helicopters, 10 Blackhawk attack/cargo helicopters, two F-16A/B squadrons from US drawdown of European stockpiles, and two, possibly three, Dolphin-class submarines built and financed by Germany as "compensation" for the Gulf war.

In addition, the US prepositioning in Israel of equipment, weapons systems and ammunition is of financial and military value.

Excluding the freebies and the prepositioning, the defense budget constitutes 11.2% of the Gross Domestic Product (in 1993 GDP), down from a record high of 30% in 1976, when the IDF was in the process of rebuilding following the Yom Kippur War.

Local expenditures make up 8% of the 11.2% total. For 1995, the Defense Ministry is demanding an increase of NIS 500 million and $50 million in cash-flow, plus a gradual increase of NIS 250 million in 1996 and 1997. Failure to meet these ends, the army says, will cause further erosion of our military deterrent.

The army's failure to back down from its demands, says the Finance Ministry, would allow the entrenched defense establishment to avoid ever downsizing, even in an era of peace.

At this point in the debate, the Treasury injects, through the media, this populist argument: "If your budget is 38% salaries - and much of it is tied up in pensions to officers who left the IDF when they were just over 40 and are making over NIS 12,000 a month - how can you expect an increase? You need to build up forces? So impose cuts elsewhere in your budget."

To this, the army reacts vociferously and resentfully. Salaries in the military, for staff and noncombat officers in the ranks captain to colonel, are either comparable or less than equivalent jobs in civilian sectors. A staff captain makes NIS 2,981. A company commander stationed in Lebanon makes NIS 4,800. The difference is "added field hazards."

A colonel with a university degree and over 1,000 people under his command, makes NIS 12,916 gross. That, the army says, is less than the pay of a deputy hospital director.

Moreover, the lucrative private market makes it difficult for the military to prevent a brain drain, especially in professional and technological fields.

The public consensus in favor of security remains solid, but voters are more knowledgeable and critical than before. They know all too well that the defense establishment is fat, cumbersome, wasteful and reluctant to take painful efficiency measures.

The defense budget may be increased in 1995 in a predictable compromise, given that the prime minister is also the defense minister. But, this time, it will be the hardest sell ever.

TRAVELING TO LONDON? STOP!

LOOK NO FURTHER

BEST PRICES
BEST AIRLINE
BEST SERVICE
CALL NOW!

* 5 FLIGHTS A WEEK *
Sagil Tours, 72 Ben Yehuda St.
Tel. 03-5224006 Tel Aviv

JERUSALEM MUNICIPALITY

Torah Culture Dept.

Ohr Chaya

N'shei Chabad Yerushalayim - English Division announces the commencement of English Torah Lectures to be held at Ohr Chaya, Rechov Yaffo 132 (corner of Giv'at Dinovits 6, behind semi-circle of buses across from Machne-Yehuda Market)

ELUL: A TIME TO GREET THE KING

Chassidic Insights into Teshuva

* Tuesday, 23 August 1994, א' אלול תשנ"ד
The Significance of א' אלול (Birthday of the Baal Shem-Tov and the After Rebbe o.b.m.)

Rabbi Aharon Eliezer Ceitlin

Mashpia, Director of Early Childhood Education, Tzfat

* Tuesday, 30 August 1994, ב' אלול תשנ"ד

Preparing Ourselves to Crown the King

Rabbi Mordechai Stern

Rav. Hac-Nof - Givat Shani

5NIS • Time: 8:15 p.m. • Light Refreshments
Hasbara Department

When enemies made peace - a night to remember

A hitherto secret video recording preserves the initialing of the Oslo agreement one year ago, David Makovsky reports

At 2 a.m. on August 20, 1993, shrouded in secrecy, Israeli and PLO officials initiated the Oslo accord.

The venue was the official guest house at 44 Parkview, where Foreign Minister Shimon Peres was staying.

A video of the historic moment was made for posterity by Norwegian security officials. Its existence was kept secret until recently.

Watching the video, one senses the nervousness and even the awe of the participants at that extraordinary event, which, unbeknownst to many of their colleagues, had been authorized by Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin and PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat.

The ceremony took place in an ornate room under a golden chandelier; there was a desk at the center of the room and participants sat on red sofas on the side. Palestinian and Israeli delegates, filed in to shake hands with Norwegian foreign minister Johan Jorgen Holst and Peres.

Peres, meeting a PLO official for the first time, appeared uncharacteristically stiff and reserved as he shook hands with PLO delegation head Ahmed Qreia (known as Abu Ala).

The desk used by Abu Ala and Foreign Ministry Director-General Uri Savir to initial the accord, and then by PLO aide Hassan Asfour and Foreign Ministry legal adviser Joel Singer to initial the accompanying minutes, was brought especially for the occasion.

It was the same desk Norwegian leader Christen Michelson used in 1905 when he severed his country's union with Sweden, which had dominated it. Aware of Israeli sensitivities, the Norwegians obtained permission from Peres to use the desk.

Those in attendance at the 30-minute ceremony, apart from those already mentioned, were: Norwegian academic Terje Larsen and his wife, diplomat Mona Juul, who devoted their lives over eight months to maintaining the "Oslo channel"; Marianne Heiberg, Holst's wife who did research on Palestinian economic conditions in Gaza; Prof. Yair Hirschfeld and Dr. Ron Pundak, Israeli academics who began the Oslo talks; Mohammed Abu-Koush, a Palestinian delegate to Oslo; Avi Gil, Peres's top personal aide who was one of the small Israeli team in Jerusalem that was monitoring and planning strategy for Oslo; and Geir Pedersen, a friend of Larsen's. This is what some of the participants said that night:

Holst: "History is in the making. In the flow of history, sometimes we register turning points. Turning points must be created. You here tonight, it seems to me, have created a very important turning point."

"In order to create history, you have to have a sense of history. Making history means making possible that which is necessary. This is what you have done tonight. You have lived through years of confrontation, now you are entering an era of cooperation...."

"The Middle East has, to so many of us, seemed like a powder keg. Now I think it will turn into a laboratory for the creation [of] a viable, peaceful order...."

"I know that it is impossible to capture by means of words what all this means. I think that we all sense that not only is this important, but it is more important than most of the things that we have had the chance to experience...."

"We are always there if you need our services. But the task is yours and the work has to be yours...."

Abu Ala (years welling up in his eyes): "I cried twice this week. The first time was when we talked by phone [the previous night in Stockholm], and at 5 o'clock we finished everything. We were six persons: Abu Azzam [Arafat], Abu Mazen [Mahmoud Abbas], Yasser [Abd Rabbu], Abu Khaled, me and Hassan [Asfour]."

"After we finished, really we cried. We congratulated each other. We said now we have to start the big battle for development, for construction, for cooperation. This is the new history...."

"Your excellency, Mr. Peres, welcome. It is a great honor. I have keenly followed your declarations, statements and writings that [have] confirmed to all the Palestinian people your care to achieve just, permanent and comprehensive peace. In the name of the Palestinian people and its leader Yasser Arafat, I would like to welcome you and congratulate you on your 70th birthday...."

"Today, we have started a new journey towards a new future, in a world whose final form has not yet been shaped and which is open to all sorts of change. The future that we look at won't materialize unless we both together overcome the fears of the past and learn from the past the lessons for our future."

"Cooperation and enmity don't coexist. Cooperation must be based on equity, not domination. It is one of the keys of trust...."

"We have been parties to conflict. Now we are parties to peace.... We can say now that the battle of peace has started today.... It must be won by both of us."

Savir: "To the Palestinian delegation, let me say, if I may, we discovered you in Oslo, far away from the region whose future we are negotiating. We were introduced as enemies. We came with goodwill... yet with a few prejudices. We found men of truth, courage and depth. Abu Ala, Hassan Asfour, Mohammed Koush, you are the neighbors we wish to live with, side by side."

"Ministers, friends, this day is marked, hopefully, by man changing history. We owe this agreement to the leadership and courage of a few who dare to challenge the illusory comfort of political routine. You have challenged those who are paralyzed by the burden of the past or by the hypothesis of the present."

"You have indicated with open eyes new, yet unknown, directions, as your sight is set on the good of men and women. Therefore, we can embark today on a new journey: hoping, working and praying to put an end to suspicion, an end to violence, an end to hate, an end to fear, an end to pain, an end to suffering."

"All this overnight, over this night, has become the common enemy of Israelis and Palestinian people alike."

"It is indeed a new dawn for two peoples plagued by historical tragedies. The Jewish people suffered two millennia of exile and persecution to find a safe haven in its historical homeland, but encountered uninvited violent rejection."

"The Palestinian people, often caught tragically in the midst of a wider conflict, never able to express the freedom they seek and deserve. The meeting of two tragic histories created the bitter conflict on a small land, drenched by historical memory...."

"We Israelis have no desire to dominate the lives and fate of the Palestinians. With this agreement, we are not just fulfilling a political interest, but also a moral predicament for our people."

"We would like our meeting ground to become a moral high ground for peace, democracy and economic prosperity."

David Makovsky, diplomatic correspondent of The Jerusalem Post, has just completed a study on Israeli decision-making in Oslo for the Washington Institute for Near East Policy, which will be published as a book by Westview Press.

Priorities for the new academic year

Education Minister Amnon Rubinstein tells Batsheva Tsur that higher teachers' pay should lead to better education

THE good news for parents in the coming academic year is that all elementary classes will be in session until at least 1 p.m. every day except Friday. Those schools in front-line settlements and disadvantaged neighborhoods will be open until 2 p.m.

The bad news is that parents will continue paying for all the extras, including school books, trips and guards.

"I would love to see real free education," says Education Minister Amnon Rubinstein. "I wish we could pay for everything, including hot meals for the pupils. We enlarged the education budget very substantially, in real terms, by 25 percent over three years. But we decided to use it for national priorities."

There are four priorities. First and foremost, the money has gone to substantially improve teachers' pay, Rubinstein says. Better pay attracts better teachers and they are getting a 25% increase over three years.

Then comes an increase in elementary school hours, "which were savagely cut by previous governments." These will be extended by an average of one hour per day from the start of classes. By next year, all elementary pupils will study at least 35 hours per week, Rubinstein says.

Legislation is to be presented which would allow each locality to decide whether to go over to a five-day week; the number of classroom hours per week would remain the same regardless.

"We also have a vast and ambitious plan to make Israeli schools the best equipped for computer studies in the world, coupled with a new emphasis on mathematics, science and technology," he says. The plan is based on the recommendations of the advisory committee headed by Weizmann Institute president Prof. Haim Harari. The plan will be implemented by 1998, the minister says, and will upgrade scholastic achievements substantially.

Insiders say Rubinstein, a former Tel Aviv University Law School dean, is mainly interested in higher education, leaving most of the decisions about primary and secondary schools to his director-general, Shimon Shoshani.

Rubinstein readily admits his pet priority. "Last but not least," he says of the priorities, "and from my point of view perhaps first, we'll have democratized higher education by the end of the century so that about 50% of high-school graduates every year will be able to try their luck at higher education."

To the existing 100,000 students in institutes of higher learning, Rubinstein wishes to add 30,000. This will be done by two "revolutionary" plans: increasing the number of high-school students who get a matriculation (bagrut) certificate by 10% and establishing a network of colleges and polytechnical institutes, many of which will be permitted to charge a nonregulated fee "on condition that they provide scholarships for needy students."

Rubinstein, the interviewee—punctual, erudite, lucid, articulate in both English and Hebrew—seems something of a role model for the type of Israeli he would like to see emerge from the educational system.

His credo is to develop by the end of the century the wealth of human resources at our disposal and to close or shrink ethnic and socio-economic gaps.

"Right now, there is a gaping disproportion between the number of BA graduates from privileged backgrounds—Jews of Ashkenazi origin—and those from Oriental Jewish or non-Jewish backgrounds."

To this end, he envisages a plan called "a passage to bagrut" to give weak students a second chance at matriculation or an additional half-year of special studies before induction in the IDF. Some 2,200 pupils, Jews and Arabs, would benefit from this program this year. More than 7,000 "borderline" pupils would be assigned extra teaching hours and special courses.

Elementary school pupils will be studying an average of one more hour per day compared with last year. (Hassid Grizolky/Israel Sun)

Schools which retain failing students, who would otherwise have dropped out, will be given financial inducement and, in a radical concept, this increment will be divided among the teaching staff. Rubinstein has also addressed a personal letter to all high-school graduates since 1991 who failed one bagrut exam, mainly mathematics, offering them free courses to make up the exams. "I pin great hopes on radically new methods of retraining the weak," he says.

THE OTHERWISE low-key minister raises his voice when questioned about the implementation of the Shenhar report on Jewish studies in state schools, a report which recommends a pluralistic approach.

Rubinstein, who observes certain religious traditions, says: "I distinguish totally between my personal observance and religious coercion. The chief reason why we have difficulty teaching Jewish studies in nonreligious schools is because the pupils equate Judaism with religion, which is automatically equated with religious politics, and that is anathema to anyone eager to preserve Jewish heritage.... Pupils who have opted for state schools reject Orthodoxy. Judaism is too important to be left only to the Orthodox establishment.

"I haven't heard any opposition from Shas," he says in reply to a question, "but have read about it in the media. Of course, the opposition will object. That's the raison d'être of an opposition. I did it too. May they continue to do so for many years."

On the thorny topic of elitism versus universality, Rubinstein admits to transmitting a double message.

"After years of stagnation, decline and cutbacks," he says, "we're now on the march. Israel should aspire to be No. 1 in every field. On the other hand, the school system must be the great leveler, the eraser of ethnic and class differences. This is difficult, and we need great tolerance and humanity."

One factor contributing to the march forward may have been the recent aliyah wave. Despite the obstacles faced by the Russian-speaking olim who underwent a cultural, personal and social transition, Rubinstein gives them top marks. "I want to thank both the teachers and the pupils who have made a tremendous contribution especially in the fields of music, mathematics and physical education, and improved our system by leaps and bounds."

The Ethiopian olim, on the other hand, are facing great difficulties, he says, not only because of the vast gap between their previous society and Israel's but because they are concentrated in a few neighborhoods and insist on going to religious schools in certain communities.

"We have set up a special think-tank with leaders of the Ethiopian community to ameliorate the situation," he says. "We draw solace from the success of the previous wave of Ethiopian immigration."

No interview with Rubinstein is complete without mentioning what he calls "the bagrut cult." He is determined to cut the number of exams which he views as a preparation for the psychometric entrance exams to the universities.

"In England, pupils take two or three A-levels [matriculation exams]. Even in Japan, they do only three matriculation exams, while here we sometimes take more than 10. This paralyzes the last year of high school and introduces almost unendurable tensions." He has set up another committee, to look into the bagrut.

Rubinstein would like the pupils to have pleasant memories of their school days. Instead, he says, "They often leave school frustrated and angry. This is our farewell present to them. It is preposterous."

The cost of 'free' education

FREE education is not what the name implies. Ask the Shechner family, of Jerusalem's middle-class Gilo quarter.

"Our youngest daughter Einav, is starting eighth grade," says Miriam Shechner, an elementary school teacher. Her husband Zvi, is a civil servant. "I reckon we'll spend about NIS 300 per month for her schooling."

The Shechners paid about NIS 400 this week on textbooks, notebooks and writing equipment. Einav's older sister, Reuma, managed to sell some of her used schoolbooks for NIS 60. The NIS 400 services levy covers cultural activities, secretarial services and a school trip; health insurance costs NIS 170.

The Shechners also paid NIS 150 for a school sports shirt, track suit and other sports equipment. Einav, a promising swimmer, is in a NIS 133 training course and replaces her swimsuit every six weeks (NIS 120).

Compared to Reuma's costs, Einav's are low. Last year, was in an extracurricular, NIS 1,500 photography course run by the school. Her parents paid NIS 55 per hour for private math lessons, review books for her matriculation exams, NIS 520 for the exams themselves and NIS 200 for her end-of-school party. And this doesn't include the new clothes for the party," says Miriam, who adds that the two girls cost them more than NIS 6,000 for school in the previous year.

"But we are lucky," she says, "because we have two regular salaries and can go that extra mile."

"Don't even ask me," says Shelly Schwartz of Herzliya, mother of four, three of them school-age.

"With our 15-, nine-, and six-year-olds together, it simply adds up to thousands. The parents' committees have told us to refuse, to pay.... The sums are astronomical." B.T.

MKs: Open the gates of higher education to all interested

Esther Salmovitz and Silvan Shalom have introduced bills that would change the way universities select students, Carl Schrag writes.

ALON Katz, 22, of Jerusalem, is one of 15,000 teenagers and young adults now receiving scores on a test that could determine their future.

Just a month ago they took the 35-hour James University Psychometric Entrance Test (PET). Many had come back for a second—or third or fourth—try at the multiple-choice exam, hoping to raise their scores enough to gain admission to the department of their choice at one of the country's universities.

Katz felt prepared for the exam, but found it wasn't exactly as he expected. "The exam had more questions—but in the same amount of time—as the practice tests in the booklet written by the creators of the PET," he said.

Each university determines which applicants to accept on the basis of PET results and bagrut (high school matriculation) scores. The PET is designed to provide an indicator of potential success in higher education (much like similar university entrance exams in other countries); the bagrut scores are used to measure past achievement.

Individual universities or faculties may weigh the two as they see fit. The Hebrew University recently announced plans to accept students to certain departments in which demand is relatively low on the basis of outstanding bagrut scores alone.

Nonetheless, the standard requirement for admission to university remains bagrut and PET scores.

Critics of the PET say it prevents many worthy candidates from getting into university and into the many colleges that demand the test. MKs Esther Salmovitz (Yitod) and Silvan Shalom (Likud) have been two of the most vocal critics of late. Each has introduced a private member's bill aimed at changing the way students gain admission to university; both would do away with the PET.

Salmovitz calls for opening the universities to anyone with a valid bagrut certificate. Shalom calls for open admissions to first-year studies to anyone who has passed certain bagrut exams. Under his plan, however, only the best performers in the first year would be allowed to continue their studies. The universities would set their own criteria for eligibility for second-year studies.

Proponents of both bills say their only goal is to make sure anyone who can succeed at higher education is given the opportunity to do so. Critics call the proposals populist, and say they would cause an explosion of university enrollments which cannot be accommodated by the existing facilities, teaching staffs and budgets.

Salmovitz dismisses her critics, and says that her sole motivation is pure and simple Zionism. "Many excellent students do not get accepted to Israeli universities," she says, adding that those who are determined to study the subject of their choice and have the financial means, look abroad.

She says 8,000 Israelis are studying abroad today and that many of them will not come home.

BOTH BILLS have passed preliminary readings and have been approved by the Knesset education committee, but that does not excite Dr. Michal Beller, who is director of the National Institute for Testing and Evaluation, which designs and administers the PET.

"If the PET is canceled tomorrow," she asks, "will the number of slots in the Hebrew University Law School increase? No. So you could have a lottery to determine who will be admitted."

"There is a limited number of slots, and demand exceeds it," Beller continues. "My job only has to do with making decisions when demand exceeds supply." She adds that studies show the PET is an accurate predictor of future success in higher education, on a par with the US Scholastic Aptitude Test, for instance.

She dismisses Salmovitz's proposal as unworkable and lacking answers to the problems it would create. If everyone with a bagrut certificate could gain admission to university, she asks, does that mean they all could be admitted to psychology and law studies, if they so desired?

Beller says that Shalom's proposal would create tremendous tension among first-year students nationwide, and points to past experiments in open admission to first-year programs as evidence.

Tel Aviv University had a pre-law program in the 1980s for students who had not been admitted to the law school. The top performers were admitted to law studies the following year. The Hebrew University has maintained a relatively open admissions policy to the Economics Department until now, but only allowed those who performed well in two key classes to continue into the second year.

Both programs have been closed.

Beller heads a team of researchers that has been tracking the correlation between performance of every first-year university student over the past decade and their bagrut and PET scores. She recently released findings based on evaluation of the year-end grades of 93,000 first-year students. The results: The combination of bagrut and PET provide the best indicator of university performance.

"Objectively," she says, she would expect the bagrut scores to be the best indicator, because they are, after all, based on four years of high school studies. Unfortunately, she says, the tests are administered and graded in such a way that they do not provide a cut-and-dried evaluative tool. The PET is much more standardized and thus provides a better indicator.

But some people who respect the predictive quality of the PET are nevertheless looking for ways to lessen its supreme importance in university admissions.

Prof. Mordechai Zippin, who chairs the Hebrew University's central admissions committee, says the recent decision to allow applicants with outstanding bagrut scores to gain admission to certain departments without even taking the PET is part of the university's effort to create an atmosphere in which different schools offer different things to students.

"We believe that each university should have its own criteria," he says. "That was part of the reason we adopted the PET 25 years ago, but then all of the other universities followed us. That's a shame, because each university really ought to have its own guidelines, so that everybody could find his own place."

Knesset education committee chairman Avraham Burg takes a different tack, proposing legislation that would expand the number of degree-granting colleges, enlarging the higher education system and enabling it to accept more students.

"Today, there are not enough slots in the universities," he says. "Even if we accepted everyone, there wouldn't be enough faculty to teach them. I hope that within five or 10 years the colleges will have developed niches, and they will go a long way toward meeting demand."

Until that happens, however, thousands of young people will continue to clutch their No. 2 pencils and fret over the multiple-choice questions that play such a critical role in their lives. And by the time they go to sleep on Sunday, they will all breathe a sigh of relief. For better or for worse, they will settle down to wait up to two months for their scores.

NEW MARTIN GILBERT ATLASES

MARTIN GILBERT THE DENT

ATLAS OF JEWISH HISTORY

From 2000 BCE to the present day, 132 maps trace the world-wide migrations of the Jews from ancient Mesopotamia to modern Israel. Depicts not only the movement of the Jews but also their achievements, trials, tribulations, political structures, trade, culture and societal status. Sidelines accompany each map. Softcover, Dent.

ATLAS OF THE ARAB-ISRAELI CONFLICT

147 maps provide clear, detailed documentation on the Arab-Jewish struggle in the Middle East from the turn of the century as well as showing moves towards peace through negotiation and agreed boundaries. Maps are accompanied by powerful and compelling quotations from those involved on both sides. Softcover, Dent.

JP Price NIS 46.00 ea.
JP Special NIS 85.00 for both

To: Books, The Jerusalem Post, POB 81, Jerusalem 91000
Tel. 02-2441993
Please send me Martin Gilbert's:
□ Atlas of Jewish History □ Atlas of the Arab-Israeli Conflict
Enclosed is my check for NIS 46.00 ea. or NIS 85.00 for both, payable to The Jerusalem Post. Credit card orders accepted by phone.

Name _____
Address _____
City _____ Code _____
Tel. _____

They give the best years of their life

THE ASSOCIATION FOR THE WELLBEING OF ISRAELI SOLDIERS

In training, everyday activities, far from home, under strenuous and dangerous conditions, THE GUARDIANS OF ISRAEL SHOW THEM that you stand firmly behind them by supporting THE ASSOCIATION FOR THE WELLBEING OF ISRAELI SOLDIERS.

THE ONLY CIVILIAN BODY providing for the social, educational and recreation needs of our boys and girls in uniform.

TOGETHER, we can make their years of service less difficult

THE ASSOCIATION FOR THE WELLBEING OF ISRAELI SOLDIERS

OFFICES AND FRIENDS IN ISRAEL & ABROAD:

U.S.A.: Friends of the IDF
• New York - (212) 575-5030
• Los Angeles - (213) 655-9764
• Chicago - (312) 427-3586/718
• Miami - (305) 573-9177

ENGLAND:
London - c/o AJEX - (01) 800-2844
HOLLAND:
Amsterdam - (20) 642-0293

SWITZERLAND:
Zurich - (01) 724-0807

GERMANY:
Munich - (89) 985627

CANADA: The Association for the Soldiers of Israel
• Toronto - (416) 783-9130
• Montreal - (514) 738-2858

58 Pirkeas Street, P.O. Box 21707, Tel Aviv 61217, Israel. Phone (03) 5465135/6, 5465140. Fax: (972) 3-5465145

Jerusalem Municipality Department of Culture Adult Education Section

Min. of Education and Culture Department of Adult Education

The studies year at Jerusalem Municipality's adult education centers will open on Thursday, September 1.

Hebrew Language Ulpanim

The ulpanim are intended mainly for new immigrants, but are open also to the general public: immigrants and veterans, tourists, temporary residents, and residents of East Jerusalem.

Courses are given at various levels: for beginners, intermediates, and for students who know Hebrew and wish to improve their command of the language.

a. Intensive Morning Ulpaniot

1. Beit Ha'am, 11 Bezalet St., Tel. 02-254156/7
2. Y.M.H.A., 105 Herzog, Tel. 02-780442

b. Morning and Evening Ulpaniot

Classes meet two or three times a week, during morning hours. Other courses are given twice a week, in afternoon and evening hours.

1. Moadon Ha'oleh, 9 Alkalai, Tel. 02-633718, which also offers conversation classes, for the improvement of spoken Hebrew.
2. Adult Education Center, 15 Sokolow, Tel. 02-637505 633378.

Registration has opened at the study centers.

Note: Tuition will be paid relative to the number of learning days in September.

Omissions and excuses

EYE ON THE MEDIA
DAVID BAR-ILLAN

THE bombing of the Jewish Center in Buenos Aires was one of the largest and bloodiest terrorist acts in the Americas ever, and the biggest attack on Diaspora Jews since World War II.

That the number of casualties would be staggering was obvious from the start. The large, busy office building was completely destroyed; there was little chance of anyone in there surviving unscathed. Even the first bulletins announced 30 dead.

Moreover, the bombing was obviously related to the Middle East conflict, which occupies an inordinate amount of time and space in the media, and its resemblance to the bombing of the Israeli Embassy two years previously was striking.

Above all, it was quintessential antisemitic terrorism — an indiscriminate slaughter of innocent men, women and children in a Western capital, aimed at Jews as Jews.

Yet the major news media in the West either ignored the bombing completely, or gave it barely a mention. The BBC, which purports to be a "world service," not a parochial, provincial British station, failed to mention it altogether in its most important news programs of the day, the Six O'Clock News and the Nine O'Clock News, both of which devoted considerable time to German restrictions on British beef.

The bombing was briefly mentioned in one or two later news programs, then forgotten. Only the London bombings the following week reminded the BBC of the Buenos Aires incident. BBC-watchers could not help but notice the difference between the treatment of the bombing of Jews and the attention given the Hebron massacre — the act of a lone, crazed gunman — in which 29 Arabs were killed.

For over six weeks, with virtually no letup, the Hebron massacre was played up as one of the decade's major stories. It became a historic milestone, a point of reference. Events were described as occurring before the Hebron massacre or after it; as a result of it, or as a reaction to it.

The American ABC-TV Evening News anchored by Peter Jennings, the network's major news showpiece and the most watched news program in the US, was not much better.

It did not mention the Buenos Aires bombing in the headlines which opened the program that evening, and referred to it only in passing, in three sentences, in a segment which led to another bit of Middle East-related news. It never mentioned it the next night, and devoted five sentences to it on the following night.

The McNeil-Lehrer Report, that pride of public broadcasting in the US, with an ostentatious concern for murdered innocents everywhere, never dealt with the bombing until 10 days later, after the Israeli Embassy in London was bombed. Ted Koppel's Nightline on ABC, another news program with pretensions of seriousness, never touched the subject at all. The New York Times, the world's "paper of record," had an all-but-nonexistent report in one of the back pages the day after the bombing. It managed a short story the next day.

But perhaps even more illuminating are the excuses the various news outfits made for the omission. Eileen Fitt, senior producer of the BBC's Nine O'Clock News, replied to an inquiry by Dr. Schiffman of Cambridge: "We didn't include the story of Monday's bomb blast at a Jewish centre in Argentina purely because of pressure of time."

As you will appreciate, it's impossible to report everything that happens around the world in a 27-minute bulletin. We did include a short item on the first bilateral talks in public between Israel and Jordan which I hope you would agree was significant. We strongly resent any suggestions that we are antisemitic."

Schiffman responded with a letter pointing out that the bombing was not mentioned on following days either, not even in passing.

He suggested that the way the BBC covered the Hebron massacre, the screening of Charles Glass's "documentary" describing how Israel is "driving out Christians from the country," the fact that the network never bothered mentioning the Israeli Hercules planes sent to Rwanda, and such terminology as "occupied territories" applied to Israel but not Arab conquests, made one wonder about the BBC's fairness.

By that time the BBC had received complaints from leading Jewish figures, including Board of Deputies president Eldred Tabachnik.

On August 4, Schiffman received the following from Jonathan Rooper of BBC Television News: "Eileen's letter of 22 July properly reflected our view at that time. In the light of subsequent events, however, we have reviewed the judgments we made when reports of the bomb explosion at the Jewish Community Centre in Buenos Aires first came through; we now accept that it was a mistake that we did not carry a full report at that stage."

It was a straightforward error; we simply failed to appreciate the magnitude of the event. We very much regret this. I can only offer our sincere apologies.

"Turning to the broader comments in your letter, I take your point that the use of the correct terminology is vital in the reporting of Israeli and Arab affairs. We would not pretend that we have always got it right — mistakes are very easy to make in the rush of daily news reporting. I think you would probably also accept that there can be formidable difficulties in finding terms which recognise practical realities and reflect complex political aspects in an appropriate way."

Admission of error being so rare in the media, one should probably appreciate even this small gesture, despite the glaring evasion in the letter's second half of the issues raised by Schiffman.

Other explanations were just as disingenuous. ABC's Nightline wrote in response to a complaint: "As information about these bombings... continues to come to the surface I am sure more focus will be given to the issue. I want to assure you that Nightline has not ignored these events, nor the larger Middle East peace issue, though it may have taken a temporary back seat to the plight of Rwanda's refugees.... Be confident that Nightline has not dropped the ball here."

The topics covered by Nightline in the week following the bombing were Rwanda, the Jupiter meteor, Tour de France, O.J. Simpson, baseball, newly released JFK tapes, and Whitewater. It never touched the Buenos Aires bombings. So much for not dropping the ball.

The excuse of the New York Times was that "Part of the problem is that the news was incremental. The early death toll was far less than what turned out to be the final number of dead. And of course we did not know in the early days that there would be other attacks against other Jewish targets, possibly part of a pattern. Each day, we made that day's decision, but we probably should have stepped back from it all one day with a single, comprehensive article."

What seemed to bother the media most about the incident was that it brought back memories of the kind of anti-Jewish terrorism which was supposed to have vanished in the "New Middle East."

Palestinian terrorism in Gaza can be compared to the underground war in Europe against the Nazis — as the British consul in Jerusalem did during a meeting with a group of British parliamentarians two weeks ago. But the bombing of innocent Diaspora Jews is a little more difficult to rationalize. And what better way to avoid confronting an unpleasant truth than by simply failing to report it?

What the stars tell us about ourselves

CAPITAL TALK

TEDDY KOLLEK with Amos Kollek

WHILE in New York recently on a fundraising trip for the Jerusalem Foundation, I received an unexpected phone call from Paul Newman who said he wanted to come see me.

He didn't say why and I had no idea how he even knew I was in town. I had first met him while he was filming Exodus here in 1960 or '61, and we became friendly.

He later became a patron of the Israel Museum, but I had not seen him or spoken to him in decades, so naturally I was both surprised and pleased to hear from him. We arranged to meet in my hotel room later that day.

When I look back, I actually find it quite amazing how many movie stars, artists, writers, musicians, both Jewish and non-Jewish, have come to Israel and have gotten very involved with it. I'm not sure I know the reason for that.

The percentage of American Jews who have been to Israel is not particularly high, but it seems that almost every show-biz person who's anybody has been here. From Danny Kaye to Frank Sinatra, Barbra Streisand, Marlene Dietrich, Kirk Douglas, Richard Burton and Elizabeth Taylor.

Maybe Israel just excites the imagination of people whose livelihood is involved with creating drama, adventure and fairy tales — stories larger than life. Maybe they have a stronger need for profoundly unusual experiences, for challenge, meaning, roots. I don't know, I'm neither a philosopher nor a shrink. But they have certainly come in droves — writers such as Arthur Koestler, Saul Bellow, James Michener, John Steinbeck, Graham Greene. Musicians like Pablo Casals, Arthur Rubinstein, Isaac Stern, Zubin Mehta and Leonard Bernstein, to name only a few.

I have never given a great deal of thought to the link between Zionism and great international artists, although I have always enjoyed their company and their work. And I have spent time with quite a lot of them, but always for a cause, whether it was attracting tourists to Israel when I was director-general of the Prime Minister's Office or trying to enrich and enliven the cultural life in Jerusalem since I first became mayor.

It's not only artists who are deeply attracted to Israel, but all kinds of people you wouldn't expect. I am very fond of the mayor of Stuttgart, Manfred Rommel. He is considered one of the best mayors in the world, and moreover, has a great sense of humor. He is also the son of the famous general who led the German army in the African desert during World War II, was finally defeated by Montgomery at El-Alamein, and later committed suicide when the conspiracy to kill Hitler was exposed.

I remember our fears as members of Kibbutz Ein Gev during the war that General Rommel and his armies might push all the way to our area; our plans of what we would do in such an event. And now there is this great friendship between his son, the mayor of Stuttgart, and Israel, particularly Jerusalem, 50 years later.

Things take time; but when we step back and take an objective look, not all that much time. Sometimes, when I think of what has happened in the world in the past 50 years, and particularly in the past decade, it is simply mind-boggling, and nothing seems impossible or unbelievable.

I had a busy day in Manhattan with different meetings in my hotel room, and at 5 p.m. Paul Newman showed up, a bit older than I remembered him but still looking great. And I was happy I had asked my son Amos to come along, as Paul has been his idol.

We sat and chatted and it was apparent that he just wanted to hear about Israel and Jerusalem, and what our hopes were for the future, and it was a very pleasant meeting.

About half-an-hour later, we were joined by my next appointment, a businessman from South America whom I was trying to persuade to donate a substantial amount of money to a project in Jerusalem. We all chatted for a while longer and then Paul left, promising that he and his wife Joanne would try to come to Israel soon, and that he might be willing to consider making a film here to mark the 3,000th year since King David made Jerusalem his capital.

After he left, my businessman friend turned to me and said: "What a handsome fellow, who is he?"

As I said, nothing seems unbelievable.

Of heresy and ignorance

VIEW FROM NOV
MOSHE KOHN

MID-ELUL. Summer is nearly over. Schoolchildren and their parents are doing their last-minute buying of textbooks and school equipment.

The High Holy Days are on the horizon: service schedules and cantors' names are publicized; hotels "announce" "specials"; "etrog" merchants advertise their products.

Rosh Hashana begins on Monday evening, September 5, the earliest it will fall in the 20th century.

It is the season for taking stock of our achievements and failures of the outgoing 5754 year and considering what repairs are required in the incoming 5755 year.

The air is filled with the perennial controversy over surveys pointing to the failings of our general (commonly called "secular") state school system.

Those surveys, and many of the sights and sounds in our public places (including our cinema and television screens, theaters, sports arenas and parks), seem to point to an increasing detachment of growing sectors of Israeli Jewish society from our Jewish cultural heritage.

Following are a few examples from my own experience and other sources.

WHEN WE arrived as olim in 1957, a new sabra acquaintance said to me: "Now that you're in Israel, you really should drop your Galut (exile) name, Moshe Cohen, and take a good, modern Hebrew name!"

It took me another year or two to realize that that joke was only half funny; that it was symptomatic of the deracination I mentioned.

A more recent joke. After an intensive discussion about a name for their newborn son, the wife proposes: "Moshe."

The husband: "All right. But I'd have preferred a biblical name."

By "biblical name" Israelis like that don't mean such names as Moshe/Moses, Shimon/Samson, Rivka/Rebecca, Ruth etc., which were commonly given to Jewish children in the despised Diaspora, but Canaanite-style names like Nimrod and Anat, and such names that were rarely if ever given to children in the Diaspora like Uzi, Meirav, etc.

THE FOLLOWING are not jokes:

Some Jews write the Hebrew acronym: "HADRAK," comprising the letters he-dah-shah-gim-mel, on the envelopes of letters they send. It stands for "Herem D'Rabbenu Gershon/Rabbi Gershon's Ban."

Rabbi Gershon ben Yehuda (960-1028), shaper of German Judaism, promulgated some takkanot (halachic regulations), including several bans applicable to Ashkenazi Jewry. One ban, not so well known, is the one on reading a communication not addressed to you without the permission of the addressee, of which "HADRAK" is intended to remind you. (Some say this ban also applies to tuning in on others' telephone and computer conversations.)

His most famous herem, of course, is the one on polygamy. The Beersheba Rabbinical Court dealt with a husband-wife dispute. One of the dayanim (rabbinical judges) sitting on the court referred to that herem in his reasoned judgment.

A Tel Aviv journalist doing a followup story telephoned that rabbi, who mentioned the Herem D'Rabbenu Gershon.

The diligent journalist, wishing to check the matter at the source, asked for Rabbenu Gershon's telephone number.

I ALIGHTED from the bus in Jerusalem's Straus St. behind two girls aged about 10. As I stepped down I heard one girl say:

"It's funny: my father isn't at all religious. Only on Kippur he's a believer." Characteristically, in discussions about observance of traditional Jewish practices, many nonobservant sabras don't say simply that they don't observe, but that they are not "believers."

And a typical Israeli linguistic corruption, by religious Israelis too, is calling the Day of Atonement not by its correct names, "Yom Hakippurim" or "Yom Kippur," but simply as "Kippur," which makes no sense.

Rabbi Gavriel Goldman, the young sabra rabbi of Kfar Adumim, was interviewed about relations in that village between dait'im/religious and hilonim/secularists. He replied: "Here we don't speak of dait'im and hilonim, but of shomer mitzvot [those who observe religious precepts] and shomer yoter mitzvot [those who observe more precepts]."

Goldman's reply is in the spirit of the statement the talmudic sages put in God's mouth: "Let them forsake Me, and let them just learn and observe My teachings" (Yerushalmi Hagiga 1:7; Midrash Tehillim 127 [Buber edition]; Echa Rabba, Peiluta 2; Pesikta Derav Kahana 120b).

The sages are suggesting the virtually heretical idea that God is less concerned about whether we "believe" and very much more concerned that we should learn and do the good both as individuals and as members of the Jewish faith/nation.

ANOTHER TALE of sabra semantics and attitudes: Jerusalem's century-old Yemin Moshe neighborhood, is a small one. Yet if you are not accustomed to the lie of its staircases, lanes and houses, you are liable to get lost — as I did one day recently. After going down the wrong staircase I did not see any of the familiar sites marking the route to my destination. The first two strollers I asked for directions knew even less than I about Yemin Moshe.

Along came a group of teenagers, shepherded by three men with automatic rifles slung over their shoulders.

Judging by their dress, their deep tans and the way they were chatting and carrying themselves, they were from some far-off kibbutz or moshav. And the heads of most of the men (a few wore tombel hats) and the earrings some of the teenage boys sported clearly indicated they were not dait'im.

Since they were coming from the general direction of my destination, I asked one of the adults if he had noticed Peleh Yoetz Street.

No, he hadn't.

Had they stopped at the Beit Yisrael synagogue (one of Yemin Moshe's historic sites, situated on Peleh Yoetz)?

The man drew himself up and declared: "We're hilonim, and we have nothing to do with synagogues."

PROF. ANITA Shapiro, head of the liberal arts faculty at Tel Aviv University, reports the following in the name of some colleagues:

In a Hebrew literature class, a student asked who had translated the Tanach (Jewish Bible) into Hebrew.

Another student asked: "What's this 'Old Testament' and 'New Testament'?" (Ha'aretz, January 4, 1994).

Students at teachers' seminars and teachers doing further training are abysmally ignorant about the Jewish history of the past 200 years, including Zionist history.

Nonreligious schools are doing virtually nothing to foster the affinity of Israelis to the totality of the Jewish people (Dr. Ya'ir Auran, a teacher at the Kibbutz Movement Teachers' Seminary and author of Jewish-Israeli Identity, a study of the attitudes of teacher-trainees in the seminars of all the trends).

YAACOV HAZAN, founder and mentor of the left-wing Zionist Hashomer Hatz: "I movement and one of the Third Aliya mentors of Mapam, was a scion of a rabbinical family and an avowed secularist."

He said: "We came to Eretz Yisrael to breed apikorsim [knowledgeable heretics], but all we've managed to produce is ignoramuses."

MARRIAGE-MINDED
Academic Israeli, 38, 1.75. Seeking intelligent, honest, attractive woman for marriage / friendship. Tel. 03-6916467

SRULIK

The real 'war to end all wars' is within us

SHABBAT SHALOM

SHLOMO RISKIN

"When you come into your neighbor's vineyard, then you can eat as many grapes as you desire to satisfy your hunger, but you shall not put any in your basket." (Deut. 23:25.)

I remember a vignette by Mendele Mokher Seforim about a rich Polish landowner who liked to grab Jews and make them tremble.

Once, very drunk, he pointed his revolver at some unfortunate in his employ and told them to start dancing with the bears he kept for sport. He clapped and the Jews danced.

Suddenly the drunken landowner realized his boots felt too tight. He asked one of the Jews to hold the pistol while he pulled off his boots, concerned that while he bent down his gun might go off.

The moral of the story is that it never occurred to the Jew to turn the tables on the landowner. Mendele's great-grandchildren no longer fear the landowner's gun. But although the People of the Book have learned to live with the sword, they never live by the sword alone.

Questions regarding the ethics of warfare came up early in the history of the nation. Indeed, tohar haneshkek, purity of arms, is a subject studied in just about every high school here, and is constantly discussed in military forums.

The subject harks back to the Bible, and especially to this week's portion, Ki Tetzé. The Torah addresses itself to one of the realities of being a soldier.

Fighting for his life, aware that every moment could be his last, a soldier is subject to all kinds of powerful emotions and desires.

All we have to do is see the many fatherless children American soldiers left behind in Europe, Japan, Korea and Vietnam to understand this grievous fallout of soldiering.

The Torah, acknowledging this reality, surrounds it with a barbed wire fence. When you go to war and take captives, the Torah says, and "you see a beautiful woman and desire her, you may take her as a wife.... [But first] when you bring her home, she must shave her head, and let her fingernails grow. She must remove her captive's garb and remain in your house a full month, bewailing her father and mother. Only then may you be intimate with her and possess her, making her your wife." (Deut. 21:10-13.)

The Torah, in effect, forbids the instant gratification of a warrior's baser instincts.

Having to go through these preparatory steps does much to thwart desire; but if a month passes and she is willing to convert and he still wants to marry her, he is then commanded to marry her.

Should he later change his mind, he is forbidden to sell her or keep her as a servant; he must send her away free.

DURING THE Lebanese War, I joined several other yeshiva deans up North to be near our students in the army. These young men were part of the hesder yeshiva movement, which is unique in Israel and perhaps in the world.

Where else do we find young men combining religious study with army service, spending five years as soldier-scholars instead of the usual three as simple soldiers?

I'll never forget the first question that came up. It was summertime and as far as the eye could see the fields were alive with cherries. The soldiers wanted to know if the Torah permitted them to eat from the fruit of the fields. Until then, none of the hesder boys had taken even one bite, but they wanted to know if they could apply the verse we've quoted above concerning a neighbor's vineyard.

Of course, they knew Rashi's comment that the text refers to a worker coming into a field. But what category did these soldiers fall into?

Since they were not there to uproot the Lebanese, but to put an end to terrorist attacks, could they be included in the category of hungry laborers who had walked into the fields?

We spent the next hour discussing what the Talmud had to say in Bava Metzia 87b.

We checked the relevant rulings of Maimonides in his Laws of Hiring, 12:1, which show that it is clearly the owner's duty to allow laborers to eat from the trees they are working on.

However, as the great Sephardi sage points out, our tradition teaches that this grant applies only to a laborer willingly hired by the landowner. A neighbor cannot merely enter and eat.

Furthermore, on page 92A, in the same tractate, the Talmud asks: How do we know that we do not allow the laborer to put aside grapes or corn for his wife and sons? This law is derived from the passage: "...but you shall not put any into your basket."

In other words, the Torah is not saying that the food a worker may eat becomes part of his wage, a kind of "perk," but rather that the Torah is reflecting the law against muzzling the mouth of an ox while he is threshing, even the "human ox." Taking food home to a third party would therefore not be permitted.

On that summer day, not far from the Lebanese front, it was ruled that according to Jewish law the soldiers could not eat.

The major principle at hand was that we had no claim whatsoever on the Lebanese territory. We were merely protecting settlements in Galilee from enemy Kat'yushas. Hence the soldiers could not be seen as laborers, and could not touch any of the fruit or the flowers.

Sometime later I received an interesting postscript. One of the young men who was among that group of soldiers wrote that some troops in his battalion had come down with a mysterious stomach ailment; the only ones who were spared were those who had not eaten from the fields of cherries....

Perhaps a first step in bringing peace to mankind is the introduction of ethics in war. I was very proud of our soldiers in Lebanon who wouldn't taste the fruit of a field, let alone rob the defenseless, rape women or pillage homes. The Bible commands that we guard our ethical integrity even in the midst of brutal warfare — one of the great challenges of modern Israel. No one is born with ethical self-discipline, and acquiring it is a lifelong battle.

War is a struggle within individuals as well as between individuals. If we master the inner, private struggle, the day will come when we'll never have to fight the public ones, as nation after nation exchanges swords for plowshares.

Shabbat Shalom

SAVE TIME AND ENERGY
call THE JERUSALEM POST direct

Advertising: 02-315608, 02-315637-40

Fax: 02-388408

Editorial: 02-315613

Fax: 02-389527

Subscriptions: 02-315610

Fax: 02-389017

ANGLO-ISRAEL SINGLES
"CAREFUL CAREFUL MATCHING FOR SECULAR, TRADITIONAL & RELIGIOUS OF ALL AGES" RUTH 09-828983
REPRESENTATION: ALL ISRAEL, UK, EUROPE & USA

COMPUTER MATCH
Whether you are looking for friends or for a partner, we can help. For further details, write to: SV ASSOCIATES Ltd. P.O. Box 278, Manchester, England M3 1EW or Tel. 0444-61-639-6342. For a quick and confidential chat with our experienced staff.

Attention Americans!
Videotape Conversion & Copying American ↔ Israel Multi system and all formats. Finest professional equipment. Radio Kol Studio 12 Shemai St. Jlm. 02-231390

Cool new way to take the heat out of cooking

Two local inventors have created Daya-Chef, a machine that frees people from having to slave over a hot stove, Helen Kaye reports

It all started because Yair Dar and his partner Shimon Yahav wanted a fail-safe method of roasting sunflower seeds, the white kind which they like best. "We'd buy the seeds on Friday, and then by the time we sat down on Saturday to crack them, they would be stale," recalls 52-year-old Dar, a mechanical engineer.

Some seven years, 30 versions and about $3 million later, Dar and Yahav have introduced a totally new way of countertop cooking. Trademarked as Daya-Chef, the method is set to retire the phrase "slaving over a hot stove."

Its most revolutionary principle is a pair of easy-to-clip-on helical, stainless-steel stirrers, each equipped with a small, flattened cone-like wheel which also revolves. These stirrers pivot and revolve at a constant rate, with the little wheels ensuring that the food is always in the center of the stainless steel concave "saucpan."

In other words, forget about stirring, beating, whisking, tossing or any other of the food-moving activities that require the cook to stand over the pot.

In fact, the whole setup is definitely a leap towards the 21st century. An electronic keypad control panel allows the user to precisely regulate the cooking time, the temperature and the speed of the stirrers. Another feature of the hot plate is that it will take any flat-bottomed saucpan, so you can cook a steak or fry an egg on it as well.

But Dar, a gentle, cautious and somewhat shy man who will wear a jacket and tie the only when he needs to go abroad for meetings, doesn't like the term inventor. "It gives the idea of sudden inspiration. The idea is the smallest part of the process.... I prefer to talk about development because that's what each new product is the result of. Hours and patient hours of trying this and that, of trial and error until you get what you want."

Dar and draftsman Yahav are the team who in 1986 unveiled the revolutionary Epilady hair remover whose coiled spring action plucks out hairs like thousands of tiny tweezers all working at once. Today, its worldwide sales have totaled over a billion dollars.

The two met in 1973 when Dar decided to specialize in automation and they have been together ever since. Yahav "builds the prototypes and I make the plans," says Dar, who habitually says "we" rather than "I" when speaking of their inventions.

Born and raised in Jerusalem, Dar liked mechanical things from childhood. He earned a degree from the Technion and immediately went to work trying "to find new ways of overcoming technical problems in the manufacturing process."

This meant building machines, especially automated machines. In 1982 Yahav and Dar received the Kaplan Prize for their contribution to the automation of industry.

Their forays into the consumer market come from a wish to make a product for the challenge and the fun of it. One result was Daya-Chef, whose first name is a portmanteau of their last names. Even the choice of a name took a long time.

Shimon Yahav (left) and Yair Dar: First, it was Epilady, now it's Daya-Chef.

"We went through a list of about 800 but had to discard most of them because of future possible legal problems," explains Dar. "I think the name we came up with is catchy," he adds with modest pride.

The system comes complete with a saucpan, stirrers, a stainless-steel basket and an 80-recipe cookbook by cooking expert and author Ruth Sirkis. The book contains recipes for a host of dishes from french fries to chocolate mousse and even delicate sauces, which usually require a double boiler and crossed fingers.

Yahav and Dar used their own money for the R&D but have received government loans to set up the manufacturing line at Solarium, a factory in Hatzor Haglilit in Upper Galilee which is capable of turning out several thousand per month.

At present, Daya-Chef is only for the local market, although negotiations are under way for its export to European countries, "where there's been considerable interest," says Dar.

Cheap it isn't at about NIS 1,200, which is what 12 NIS 99 payments add up to. The system went on sale last week at selected department stores and some 350 have already been sold.

There will probably be new accessories and spinoffs, but Dar is mum on these. Meanwhile, every weekend, "we roast a lot of sunflower seeds," he says.

Selling with sex: A successful formula

Coed Naked, a sportswear line, lures buyers with provocative slogans, Christine Gardner writes

NOBODY is running around in the buff at the Coed Naked sportswear factory, despite the suggestive brand name and the racy sayings on the company's line of T-shirts, caps and other casual wear.

But the skyrocketing success of Coed Sportswear Inc. over the past four years appears to prove that even today, nothing boosts sales like a hint of sex.

In 1990 two young entrepreneurs, Mark Lane and Scott MacHardy, bought Coed Naked's trademark logo and 18 designs for $15,000 from a tiny firm called Rieffer Sportswear of Dover, New Hampshire, where both recent college graduates worked.

Lane and MacHardy, both 27, began working from a makeshift headquarters in a garage and distributing their T-shirts through local shops. Within a year, sales had tripled from $300,000 to nearly $1 million and then jumped again to $2.5m. by 1992 and $7m. last year.

The firm predicts sales of $25m. in the US this year and hopes to expand into Canada, Australia and New Zealand by September.

The clothes combine the logo with sports or other activities and there are 75 variations, like "Coed Naked Lacrosse."

But what does "Coed Naked" mean? Coed in American parlance means a female college student, so does a bare-all women's lacrosse team exist somewhere? Or is it a thinly veiled sexual come-on?

"I try and figure it out all the time," said Lane. "There's no answer," said MacHardy. "It's whatever you want it to be. All we know is, when you put those two words together, it's magic."

Critics including the National Organization for Women are less enthusiastic. They have slammed the logo as sexist and degrading to women and are not amused by phrases on the products like "Coed Naked Law Enforcement."

Up Against the Wall And Spread 'Em."

One phrase has drawn the most rancor, "Coed Naked Fire Fighting - Find 'Em Hot, Leave 'Em Wet," prompting a letter from a woman who said she believed the shirt aggravated college date rape.

"I don't think that's fair," said MacHardy. "There are a lot of things wrong in society and rape is one of them but I don't think my shirt contributes to it. A lot of people say 'you guys will do anything for money' - if we just wanted to make money, instead of making $26 million we could do $126 million if we just did risqué, but we want to be in [upmarket chain store] Jordan Marsh."

Coed's casual clothes - sold in some 40 local shops in 1990 - are now on sale in over 8,000 stores. Most of those stores that carry the line are small independents, though they are available at a few large chains like Jordan Marsh.

MacHardy and Lane contend the logo is harmless. "We're not trying to offend anyone," said Lane. "We're just having fun." At the same time, said MacHardy, "We realize we have something very powerful. Five million people will buy us this year."

Whether or not in response to the complaints, the firm's new line, also geared to sports enthusiasts, will probably be less controversial. Its logo is "Hafa," as in "Hafa [slang for I have to] - Ski." Another line set to appear in September carries no printed messages and can offend nobody - green and beige Madras plaid shorts.

The company now employs 36 people and its offices and factory are housed in an 1,800-square meter 19th-century red brick former mill in southern New Hampshire.

"Things are happening so quickly around here, sometimes it's overwhelming," Lane said. (Reuters)

Baking soda comes out of the oven and into the closet

By the industry's own scorecard, boxes of baking soda are sucking up odors inside nearly nine out of 10 American refrigerators. More refrigerators are likely to have baking soda than working light bulbs.

But thanks to clever marketing, and general consumer perception that baking soda is a veritable magic potion, baking soda is now coming out of the refrigerator.

These days, it's in the medicine cabinet (inside some brands of toothpaste, mouthwash, dental floss, shampoo, underarm deodorant, foot powder, feminine napkins, douches and yes, even a sore-throat gargle); the broom closet (carpet deodorizer, laundry detergent, air freshener) and of course, a must for the family pet (kitty litter).

What's next? Well, one company is testing a baking-soda makeup remover - just in case you want to bubble your makeup away.

"Baking soda is becoming the oat bran of the 1990s," said Lynn Domblander, publisher of New Product News, a Chicago trade journal. And like many of the oddball things that oat bran was mixed into during its heyday in the 1980s, she said, "baking soda is starting down the road toward goodness."

But few consumers seem to think it is goofy.

Baking soda will be promoted as a key ingredient in 25 percent of the estimated $1.5 billion worth of toothpaste sold this year. So, what is it about baking soda as an ingredient that prods consumers to grab it from the shelf?

"It has an aura of being natural - whatever that means," said Gerald Jellison, a University of Southern California professor of psychiatry. "And a ring of purity."

But it also has chemical elements that truly work: When baking soda is mixed into cake batter, it releases a carbon dioxide gas causing the mixture to rise. For deodorizing, it kills odors by chemically neutralizing most odor molecules it comes in contact with. And as a cleaning agent, it removes dirt by neutralizing fatty acids found in dirt and grease.

"A lot of people grew up with that yellow box in their refrigerators," said Al Heller, editor-in-chief of the New York trade magazine Non-Foods Merchandising. "There's a nostalgia factor there. And people trust the ingredients."

They trust it so much, in fact, that baking soda - also known as sodium bicarbonate - was one of the primary ingredients used to clean the Statue of Liberty before the 1986 Bicentennial celebration.

And to think, at one time this powdery, white mineral deposit was relegated to making bread rise.

Truth is, there's nothing really new about baking soda. What's new is the array of products the baking soda is being stirred into, said Clive Chajet, chairman of the New York corporate image firm Lippincott & Margulies.

"It was always under-marketed," Chajet said, "and at the end of the day, marketers have got to have something new to talk about. So why not baking soda?"

It would be hard to find a company that knows more about baking soda than Church & Dwight, which makes the 148-year-old Arm & Hammer brand. Its familiar logo, of a muscular arm waving a steel hammer, ranks among the world's most recognized product symbols.

But the company was generally satisfied to let baking soda just be baking soda until the mid-1980s. That's when its marketing department began to push the company to start taking tips from consumers - who suggested they make a baking soda-based laundry detergent. This was followed shortly by a carpet deodorizer and a room freshener with the ingredient.

About this same time, the company started adding it to toothpaste. It has since been followed by almost every toothpaste maker - from Crest to Colgate. And last year Chesebrough-Pond's introduced Mentadent toothpaste - which it has very successfully marketed on the basis of two key ingredients: peroxide and, of course, baking soda.

But besides tingling in the mouth, does baking soda actually clean teeth any better? Some dentists believe that the bubbling action of baking soda in the mouth can result in deeper cleaning of the teeth and gums. But one expert firmly disagrees.

"For oral hygiene, it does nothing of any great significance," said Dr. Nathaniel Rowe, chairman of the Council on Dental Therapeutics, which is the division of the American Dental Association in charge of accrediting various toothpastes. "It doesn't do much because it dissolves so quickly in saliva. There's really nothing you can hang your hat on."

In fact, the council's main concern in testing toothpastes with baking soda, he said, is to make sure that baking soda's chemicals do not counteract the good things that fluoride does.

But executives at Church & Dwight - while making no specific claims about what baking soda can do for teeth - say the sales figures speak for themselves.

THE MIDDLE EAST TODAY BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES

الشرق الاوسط اليوم
THE INTERNATIONAL BUSINESS MAGAZINE

As the Middle East makes the move from the war room to the board room, investors worldwide have directed their attention to what our part of the world has to offer.

"The Middle East Today - Business Opportunities" is the ideal forum for exposing your business to a world hungry for news and views from the Middle East.

The magazine's first issue will appear in four languages: ARABIC • ENGLISH • JAPANESE • SPANISH. "The Middle East Today - Business Opportunities" will be published in approximately 220,000 copies and reach top business leaders and industry heads in over 50 countries.

Take advantage of the new business climate in the region. "The Middle East Today - Business Opportunities" can help you reach your target audience at this pivotal moment in the area's economic future.

The Middle East Today - Business Opportunities is a part of The Jerusalem Post Group.

For advertising information call David Baker at (02) 376-411. Fax: (02) 388-408

HIGH HOLIDAYS AT THE PALM BEACH HOTEL

Spend Rosh Hashana and/or Succot at the 114 room Palm Beach Hotel, at a bargain price available only on presentation of this advert. Palm Beach Hotel on an enchanting sea shore, with indoor swimming pool (mixed and separate hours), exercise room, jacuzzi, sauna, tennis and basketball courts, table tennis, video movies, horseback riding, lectures, etc. Synagogue services, Succa.

All the rooms face the clear, blue sea and we'll take care of the kids in supervised activity.

We'll transport you from Jerusalem or the Ashkelon Junction on a secure road, via Kibbutz Kissufim, and return you.

Full board throughout, starting with dinner on the first day to breakfast on the last. All glatt kosher.

Prices are per person, in a double room. Infants up to 2 free, children 2-13 in parents' room 50% off.

Rosh Hashana 2-8 September 6 nights NIS 875. Succot 19-28 September 9 nights NIS 1,790

The Palm Beach is popular! Book now, as space is limited. Reservations and further information: Palm Beach Hotel, Tel. 07-847910, Fax. 07-847215

HEBREW
Hebrew, English, Arabic, and more.
S.A.T. • G.M.T. • Psychological preparation.
"STUDY CENTER"
03-6918787 Tel Aviv/02-253616 Jm.

Computer House
2nd Hand Computers with 1 Year Guarantee from NIS 450 + VAT
94 Derech Remetzayim
Hod Hasharon
Tel/Fax. 09-401272

RL NOW IT'S REAL COMPUTERS NOW ALSO IN JERUSALEM
486-DX266, 4 MB memory, 1.2 MB + 1-44 MB floppy disk IDE + controller, 280 MB hard disk Mini tower case, 1 MB VGA Monitor card, ACER, 0.28 S-VGA 14" monitor $1,675
Audio wave 16 bit CD-Rom double speed 10 CD $480
All prices include tax
CD Rom Big Selection
Canion Israel, 18 Yad Haruzim, Jerusalem, Tel. 02-736903 11 Amrami, Kfar Sava, Tel. Fax. 09-977043, 09-957666

Invest in the world's major exchanges with Israel Discount Bank
It's a Small World!
ISRAEL DISCOUNT BANK

Kal Auto
We have stock of over 50 used cars and vans.
Privately owned and ex-rental.
Your car can serve as a "trade-in" against a purchase.
All cars can be pre-checked at a test center and any faults will be corrected.
All ex-rentals '90-'93 are sold with 6-month warranty.
Examples from our stock:
- Citroen ZX 1993.
- Rover '94, 10,000 km., private.
- NIS 73,000.
- Delia 1.3, auto., '93, NIS 45,000.
10 Rehov Hatzfira, Tel Aviv
Tel. 03-6361307
We Speak English.

Young and Tender LAMB
Quality you can TRUST
KOSHER
Freshly frozen, cut, packed and DELIVERED TO YOUR HOME to order, call
Ben Saks,
Tzabar Merino
06-765958

Dogma falls to freethinking

It is better to be young, beautiful, intelligent and healthy than old, ugly, stupid and ill. The great chess teacher at the turn of the century, Dr. Siegbert Tarrasch, understood this very well. And in his games and annotations he is a wonderful advocate of space, time, the bishop pair and open files, among other things. This is all very well when we play opponents who haven't heard about these things. We occupy the center, develop our pieces, take their bishops and smash them. But a problem arises when our opponents know all about such principles and become decidedly uncooperative. Horror of horrors, they may even try to do the same to us!

Therein lay the weakness of the great doctor. Slaughtering the peasants was one thing, but he had problems against players well versed in positional principles who could also find the exceptions. Emanuel Lasker was altogether too much for him, for in addition to his great knowledge, Lasker also had a dynamic and lively mind free of dogma.

The classical principles formulated by Wilhelm Steinitz were general observations on the majority of cases; good rules of thumb which will probably apply. But taking them as unshakable laws, which is what Tarrasch tended to do, led to the tail wagging the dog.

The antithesis of Tarrasch was the great Russian master Mikhail Chigorin, who lived at the same time.

Chigorin was more interested in the specifics of each position, looking for the exceptions rather than the rules. And in his highly individual and creative games we sometimes see a reversal of all that Tarrasch held dear; a preference for knights over bishops and the dynamic counterattacking potential of cramped positions.

The following game, played by correspondence in 1899, is wonderfully original, and portends the arrival of the hypermoderns in the 1920s and later the dynamic young Soviets. Even with the White pieces Chigorin adopts a very restrained setup, but one with concealed dynamic energy. And when the energy is released, with 11.d4!, Black's position is torn apart.

CHESS

NIGEL DAVIES

Chigorin - Tabushnikov
French Defense
1.e4 e6 2.Qe2?

Bringing the queen out on the second move like this would be unthinkable to players from the Tarrasch school of thought. But Chigorin played it exclusively, one of the points being that it prevents ...d7-d5 and another that it helps toward a King's Indian Attack type setup with g3, Bg2, Nf3, d3 etc.

2...Be7 3.Qg4!
Completely unrepentant, Chigorin moves the queen again. Of course Black must also interrupt his development to defend the pawn on g7.

3...Bf6 4.Nf3 e5 5.Qg3!
Once again!

5...d6 6.Nc3 Be6 7.d3 Ne6 8.Be2 h6 9.Be3 Nge7 10.0-0-0 d5 11.d4!
Despite having moved his queen three times, White is ahead in development and this opening of the center spells serious trouble for Black. White's moves would be taboo for players reared on the dictates of Tarrasch, but in the specific position they were excellent.

11...exd4 12.Nxd4 Nxd4 13.Bxd4 Bxd4 14.Rxd4 0-0 15.f4 f6 16.Bc4! e6 17.Rhd1 Qa5 18.exd5 cxd5
Perhaps Black was now expecting the line 19.Nxd5 Nxd5 20.Bxd5 Bxd5 21.Rxd5 Qxd5, but he is in for a rude awakening (see diagram).

19.Nxd5!
This is met by 20.Rxd5! Bxd5 21.Rxd5 followed by 22.Rd7+ and mate on g7. Black in trouble.
19...Nf5 20.Ne7+! Nxe7 21.Bxe6+ Kh8 22.Rd7 Ra8 23.f5 Qb5 24.a3 Qc5 25.Rc7 Qb6 26.Kb1 Ng6

A last gasp, hoping for 27.Qxg6 Qxg7 27.Rxg7! 1-0
Black is mated after 27...Kxg7 28.Qxg6+ Kh8 29.Qxh6 mate.

THIS WEEK'S problem is from a game Hort - Hug, from 1972. Black to play and win (solution below diagram).

Solution: Black unleashed a devastating kingside attack with 1...Bxh4! 2.gxh4 Rf3! 3.Ne3 (3.exf3 gxf3+ is followed by 4...Qg2 mate) 3...Rg3+ 4.Kh1 (4.Kh2 Qh5) 4...Rf2! after which White resigned. The threat is 5...Rh3+ and 5.Bxf2 Nxf2+ wins the White queen.

Despite their snakelike appearance, eels are actually fish, with tiny fins near their heads.

(Werner Braun)

A slippery mystery of spawning

NATURE
D'VORA BEN SHAUL

EELS are actually fish, but they certainly don't look like fish. They look like snakes, and unless you spot their very small fins, there isn't much to say that they aren't.

Here, the freshwater eel (Anguilla anguilla in Latin, is found in rivers and streams of Europe and North Africa. It is about a meter and a half long and weighs about one kilo when fully grown. It has numerous teeth and feeds on smaller marine life, including small fish.

The remarkable thing about eels is their breeding pattern, which is unique. All of these eels are hatched in the depths of the Sargasso Sea in the Gulf of Mexico.

The adult eels that produced the eggs after a long migration die, and the eels remain alone. At this stage in their lives they do not resemble the adult eel, but are small, flatfish objects that look more or less like floating leaves.

The tiny eels then begin their long journey back to the rivers of Europe and the Middle East, and during this period, which lasts three to four years, they grow very little.

They enter freshwater streams after a slow period of adaptation in the brackish waters of the inlet and, in their chosen river or stream, they develop to full-size eels. This takes another eight to 10 years; the eel is an adult only at the age of about 12 years. How long it takes is affected by local temperatures and food supply.

Once the eels reach adulthood, they adapt to the sea and begin the migratory route thousands of miles back to the Sargasso Sea, where they were hatched, swimming along at a depth of 2,000 to 4,000 meters. There they spawn and there they will die, while another cycle of eel life begins.

It was the fact that he never found baby eels or spawning adult eels in the river that led Aristotle to conclude that eels developed from the mud at the bottom of the rivers, a case of "spontaneous generation." This was believed in many places until the end of the 18th century.

But now, even knowing where the eels breed, even having "tagged" them with radioactive isotopes and followed them back and forth across uncharted oceans, we still don't know the answer to some very basic questions. Why do they breed only in the Sargasso? How do the tiny eels find their way back to their parental homes? What sends the adults back to the Sargasso after so many years?

Partnerships made in heaven

North dealer
East-West vulnerable

North
AKQ75
A7
KJ94
97

West (Kay)
J63
QJ9642
O86
A

East 9842
K
A1052
10632

South (Kaplan)
10
10853
QJ
KQJ854

West pass pass

North
1NT
2NT

East pass pass

South
INT
3NT

Opening lead: ♡Q

THE Talmud says that marriages are made in heaven. But what about bridge partnerships?

It's not easy to keep a bridge partner, for it is natural for most bridge players to spot the weaknesses in their partner's game and eventually to become frustrated with them.

As in marriage, the best way to keep a partner is to cuddle him, and both partners must be willing to work on their game and their deportment toward each other. Bridge players are not known for politeness.

The longest-running partnership in expert circles is Edgar Kaplan of New York and Norman Kaplan of Philadelphia. They have played together for more than 40 years, and continue to enjoy the game.

This past spring, they played the Vanderbilt North American championships, losing the match by only one point. This is not an easy loss to take, and many a partnership would leave the tournament with bitterness and incriminations, but Kaplan and Kay survived.

BRIDGE

MATTHEW GRANOVETTER

One reason perhaps is Kay's gentle nature, his willingness to take the blame for errors, while complimenting his partner on a good play. Another is Kaplan's wit. Kaplan, editor of Bridge World Magazine, finds sarcastic humor in the saddest occasions.

Once they were having an absolutely dreadful game, losing points hand after hand, and it was obvious that Kaplan was upset. Kay had just gone down 800 points on two hands in a row, and after apologizing, Kay said sincerely, "Edgar, I am not trying to throw you."

Kaplan responded, "What do you want me to do, celebrate?"

Today's deal is one of Kay's favorites, despite the fact that he was playing against Kaplan at the time, and that Kay was on the losing side. The hand comes from Life Masters Individual, an event in which the top players took turns playing with and against each other. The event took place a short time before Kay and Kaplan formed their now-famous partnership, and was instrumental in the affair.

Kay was sitting West against Kaplan, who was South. North opened the bidding one spade and Kaplan responded one notrump, because he did not have enough strength to bid at the two-level.

His partner rebid two diamonds, and now Kaplan bid three clubs, showing a long club suit and a weak hand.

Nevertheless, his partner bid three notrump, not appreciating that if Kaplan held a good hand for his notrump response, he would have rebid notrump himself. North would have had a better case for bidding three notrump if he held the ace doubleton of clubs, which would have helped South run his club suit.

After Kay led the queen of hearts, dummy came down and Kaplan began to puff on his pipe furiously. There was little hope for making nine tricks, because there was no entry to the club suit, even if it could be established.

Whoever held the ace of clubs would surely duck the first round, destroying communication between dummy and South. Still, there was little else to do but to attack the club suit, so Kaplan won the ace of hearts at trick one and led the nine of clubs to the king at trick two. He was a bit surprised when Kay won the ace.

Kay switched to a diamond. Kaplan put in dummy's jack, losing to East's ace. East returned a diamond to Kay's queen and dummy's king. Now Kaplan led the seven of clubs from dummy and finessed East's 10 by putting in the eight. How did he know to do this?

"Because," said Kaplan afterwards, "I had Norman Kay on my left. Never in his life would he have gone up with the ace of clubs on the first round if he could have found another club. He just doesn't do those things."

Kaplan scored 10 tricks for a top score, but at the same time paid his opponent an enormous compliment.

Kay was so flattered that very soon thereafter, the two of them joined forces; and they have been going strong ever since.

INTRODUCING
CROSS TOWNSEND
INSPIRED BY AN ERA OF LEGENDARY STYLE

A collection of fine writing instruments that embody the intriguing design of the Art Deco Age.

CROSS
SINCE 1946

A Style For Leadership.
Sole Representative in Israel
ROLEX MIDDLE EAST - LISTENBERG
TEL. 03-6191666

ACROSS
1 Cease association with component firm (4,7)
10 Humble headquarters (5)
11 Member of an order whose stonework is priceless (9)
12 Tick given for using a plain vocabulary (4,5)
13 Made a threat involving loss of living (5)
14 Complaint by a female graduate (6)
16 Agreeing on the best place to provide domestic electricity? (2,6)
18 Children require little fish (5,3)
20 Private transaction proves a trying experience (6)
23 Additional article coated with gold (5)

CRYPTIC CROSSWORD

24 Betray and defeat factory workers (4-5)
26 Malicious references send union into a frenzy (9)
27 Light reflected from a single amethyst (5)
28 Acerbity results from a lack of capital (11)

DOWN
2 Gather it's the cry of a self-confessed moron (5)
3 Negotiated to be patiently dealt with (7)
4 Bully for daughter gaining a university place (6)
5 Agreeable lake in rustic surroundings (8)
6 Itinerant sees cross depicted in restored loom (7)

SOLUTIONS

ROANER MATERIAL
NEARBY HOSPITAL
RESEAW VERGILE DELEGATION
E A E U I A I
B O E Y B O A
THE FRONT STRIDE
I A C O A M M
TURNED BUNGLE
C E U S U S
REDONIST STOPES

Yesterday's Quick Solution
ACROSS: 7 Trance, 8 Furred, 10 Answer, 13 Zebra, 15 Grog, 18 Egan, 17 Bored, 19 Dove, 22 Lesser, 23 Everest, 24 Blotch, 25 Tongue.

DOWN: 1 Strange, 2 Posing, 3 Acted, 4 Puzzled, 5 Bribe, 6 Ideal, 8 Estimated, 14 Correct, 15 Foreign, 16 Beetle, 19 Globe, 20 Assam, 21 Devote.

QUICK CROSSWORD

ACROSS
1 Strikes sharply (6)
4 Writing material (5)
8 W African republic (5)
9 Unbeliever (7)
10 Word of opposite meaning (7)
11 Drugs (4)
12 Mistle (3)
14 Heraldic devices (4)
15 Advocate earnestly (4)
16 Turf (3)
21 Was in debt (4)
23 Accomplish (7)
25 The least possible (7)
26 Kingdom (5)
27 Hold fast (5)
28 Emphasis (6)

DOWN
1 N American tent (6)
2 Referee (7)
3 Generosity (8)
4 Pant (4)
5 Service chaplain (5)
6 Savour (6)
7 Greek 's' (5)
13 Greatly elated (8)
16 Hand-bomb (7)
17 Of the universe (6)
19 Diurnal (5)
20 Curtain drapery (6)
22 Boredom (5)
24 Smoky fog (4)

Buy the Sunday Jerusalem Post! and get The Sunday Comics in Perspective Weekly Supplement

Half and North
WE ACCEPT ADS TO THE JERUSALEM
POST
toll free 177-022-7992

From the beaches of the South of France, from the pleasures of distant islands, decorative objects for the home have been gathered, combining a blend of European design and patterns of the Mediterranean. Tantalizing offers an astonishing collection of tablecloths and table napkins - cotton, linen, and silk, woven in natural colors, napkins holders, raffia, and metal work in many colors. Natural bed covers and various accessories. WE'LL BE HAPPY TO SEE YOU.
Lina Silberg Hagit Agmon
1 Rabin Transportation Ramat Hashikma Tel. Fax. 03-5409054

FERNAND
A collection of fine writing instruments that embody the intriguing design of the Art Deco Age.

Stories from the slumbercoach

TRAVEL

STUART REID

THE persistent clanging of the bell of an American locomotive as it pulls slowly, heavily into a station is as forlornly romantic as any sound on earth. But on this occasion it was not High Noon; it was low, muggy midnight at Union Station in Washington DC, and the Silver Meteor from New York to Miami was half an hour late.

I was a right proper Englishman bound for Charleston, South Carolina. There was to be no dinner in the diner. By the time I boarded, the restaurant had closed. The bar had closed too, but there were still people there because it is the only place on the train where you can smoke.

In May, Amtrak banned smoking on its daytime service. Smokers have to travel overnight.

A group of young men were finishing off beers bought earlier and taking an occasional swig from a bottle in a brown paper bag. A heavy man with a severe crew cut, violent tattoos and a T-shirt bearing the legend "BIG MAN" came into the bar in search of company, but no one spoke to him and he left. So did I, after smoking my first cigarette for nine months.

Amtrak's reclining seats are very comfortable, with leg rests and plenty of room to stretch out. I dozed, but not for long. At 1:30 a baby began to cry, and kept it up for an hour or so. We were not yet out of Virginia.

By four I gave up trying to sleep and stared biliously out of the window into the misty North Carolina night. From time to time we passed down the main streets of towns: clapboard houses, brick warehouses, general stores, beauty parlors and dress shops with dummies in frocks and white gloves.

I went to the bar car as soon as it opened at six: where there's smoke there's talk. One of the drinkers from the night before, in baseball cap, jeans and turquoise top, was asleep in his chair. A young couple - cheerful, slim, handsome - arrived with their small boy. The father lit a thick, 20-cm cigar, the mother a Marlboro, and the boy sat at the table passively smoking and contentedly filling in a coloring book.

"I say," I said, "that's quite a thing to smoke at this time of the morning."

He grinned. "Never used to smoke," he said, "till they started telling me not to. I'll give it up in 1996 when they vote Hillary out of the White House."

He left for a moment and returned with a musical chocolate cake: It had a music box buried inside it and there were candles on top, which the boy blew out.

"Is it the boy's birthday?" I asked.

"Hell no," said the man. "It's our third wedding anniversary. The boy's birthday is tomorrow."

You meet fine Americans on Amtrak. Most of them are poor (Amtrak, which is largely funded by the federal government, charges less than the airlines). Many of them, on the Silver Meteor or at least, are blacks returning to, or fleeing from, their roots in the South.

And then there are the big people, of whom there are many in America, people too big for air travel.

A retired brakeman in his 70s - a Texan with a thick accent - joined me. He was on his way to Jacksonville, Florida. "My wife is attending a Methodist conference in Fayetteville, so I thought, 'Heck, I'll take myself off.'"

What did he think of Amtrak's new no-smoking policy? He shrugged. "Know what I think? I think it's pizza. All them people eating pizza all the time. Gives 'em cancer. Y'all have pizza in England?" I told him we ate little else.

The train rattled on. We could now see live oaks and Spanish moss and swamps.

We were in alligator country. The Texan and I discussed crime, and he said: "Mind you, most blacks aren't black. Their blood's all mixed up." He leaned forward and tapped me knowingly on the knee. "D'y'all use the word 'ferk' in England?" I told him we did, all the time. "It's all that ferking," he said.

IN ITS own way the Meteor arrived in Charleston on time - half an hour late. For the return journey - to Philadelphia - I spent an extra $36 on a "slumbercoach."

Why not spoil yourself, I thought.

The Meteor going north was one-and-a-half hours late. "There's been trouble with the track at Tampa," said the station master over the public address system. "I am sorry."

An anxious man from the City of Brotherly Love, with whom I had been discussing world affairs - he knew in minute detail the ethnic composition of every nation in Europe and most in North Africa - shook his fist at the loudspeaker and said: "Oh, no you're not, you son of a bitch." He had to be at work the next morning.

But the blacks on the platform whooped with delight and slapped hands when they heard the announcement. "Hey," one of them shouted, "that's my man."

The slumbercoach, it turned out, was not a good buy. It was little more than a lavatory, with a threadbare chair alongside the loo. It was about 1.2 meters square and smelled of disinfectant.

At chest height there was a recess in the wall facing the engine, from which I folded down a bed. The mattress was stained. I made the bed (wondering whether to lie on top of it fully clothed, or to put on pajamas and risk God-knew-what by lying between the sheets), stowed my bags and went for a drink. I had just bought a Diet Pepsi when the train hit something, swayed and came to a squealing, shuddering halt. There was silence. A conductor, his radio barking urgent but unintelligible messages, ran through the carriage.

An agreeable young man, who was sitting opposite me and periodically spat into a paper cup, said: "We've probably run over some bum. One time I got out to have a look when that happened. It was like blood had been sprayed everywhere. The body was completely discombobulated."

The idea that we'd hit someone caught on quickly. "One-and-a-half hours late and now this," said an aggrieved passenger. The lights went out.

We drank and smoked in the dark. I discussed sex, politics and religion with the young man. On the whole I was more interested in what he had to say about sex than about politics and religion. He had been in Charleston to see his girlfriend, and told me about his adventures in some detail. My advice to readers of this newspaper is: Never make love to a girl in a car in Charleston in the summer.

"What's becoming of us?" he said. He took out his wallet and pulled from it a typed sheet with an official looking heading. It was his HIV negative certificate. "I mean what's the world coming to when a guy of 25 has to carry a thing like this around?" It was time to retire.

As I walked down the corridor, elderly women, some in curlers, looked anxiously from their slumbercoaches, asking if we had hit someone. I think we have, I said.

Back in my berth, I decided to risk putting on my pajamas and sleeping between the sheets, but I kept on my socks, underpants and T-shirt. I slept for perhaps an hour, and probably for less. It was cold enough in there to store a side of beef for a month. I put up with the discomfort until about four and then turned on the light, and saw opposite the loo a panel with detailed instructions about how to control the temperature.

There was supposed to be a dial to adjust the air-conditioning, but I could not see it. However, there was a screw hanging down from the air vent, so I pushed it upwards and the rush of air slowed somewhat. Then I turned the heating on.

The slumbercoach became a little more comfortable, but there was no question of sleep now.

At seven I got up, dressed, shaved - there was a fold-down sink - and dropped my packet of Marlboro Lights. It occurred to me that three of the cigarettes in the torn corner of the packet had come into contact with the floor and were therefore now a health hazard and had to be disposed of. In my anxiety to avoid catching "germs" I attempted to place the cigarettes in the wastebasket without actually touching it. I overbalanced and fell backwards through the door, which I had earlier left ajar, gashing my right elbow. Blood....

In the restaurant car I became a little hysterical, forgetting for a moment that an Englishman's first duty when abroad is to behave at all times with rock-like dignity. A good-natured Samoan waiter said: "Hey, no problem," and got out the first-aid kit.

He gave me two vials of iodine and some plasters. I returned to my quarters to treat myself, again taking great care not to allow my hands, now surgical instruments, to touch any part of the room.

In the bar car I ordered a Diet Sprite from the attendant, a grim Slav. I asked him what exactly had happened the night before. "Some guy jumped on the line," he said with what might have been satisfaction. "There was blood and bones everywhere. They had to get the coroner out of bed, and then get the cops and clean it up. That'll be 90 cents." I gave him a dollar, and he went through the motions of fishing a dime from the cash till. "Keep it," I said. "Thanks," he said. "Have a nice one."

We arrived in Philadelphia four hours late.

Amtrak takes you on a ride into the past, into a kinder, gentler and better America. It's a great way to go. But next time I'll avoid the slumbercoach.

May that suicide rest in peace. (The Sunday Telegraph)

From China, with love for their grandchild

GRAPEVINE

GREER FAY CASHMAN

NOT everyone would make the journey from Beijing to Jerusalem to attend a circumcision ceremony. But Moshe Ben-Ya'acov, Israel's ambassador to China, and his wife, Aviva, had a vested interest in the cherub who was being inducted into the faith. He happened to be their grandson, Kfir. Guests included Chinese Ambassador Lin Zhen, who displayed a keen interest in the actual procedure, so much so that he later engaged in conversation with circumciser Yosef Halperin to find out more about the subject. Foreign Minister Shimon Peres took time out from the affairs of state to make an appearance.

THE CROATIANS are more interested in establishing diplomatic relations with Israel than Israel is in forging ties with Croatia. But diplomacy was very much on the minds of a top-level trade delegation led by Croatian Minister of Trade Nadan Vidosevic and Ivan Pesic, deputy minister for privatization, who participated in the inauguration of the Israel-Croatian Economic Authority.

It all started with a chance meeting between two new immigrants: Peter Weiss, an artist from Croatia who knew everyone who is anyone there, and British scrap-metal millionaire Walter Hubert. Weiss told Hubert that there was a lot of money to be made in his native country, and the two began exploring possibilities for trade between Israel and Croatia. The result was the founding of SOS-ROB Trading Limited, with offices in Zagreb, Lancashire and Jerusalem.

The next step was to bring together government representatives and business people from both countries to explore cooperation in the fields of tourism, shipping, communications and trade. Hubert, a former chairman of Blackburn Rovers, was happy to start the ball rolling with soccer diplomacy.

NO SOONER was it known that controversial Shas MK Aryeh Deri and his wife Yaffa had been blessed with their sixth daughter and seventh child, there was little doubt that the infant would be called Margalit. She was named after Margalit Yosef, the wife of Shas mentor and former Sephardi chief rabbi Ovadia Yosef. The rabbi's wife died late last month.

Margalit Deri was delivered on the day Deri's lawyers, Dan Avi Yitzhak and Amnon Zichroni, unsuccessfully petitioned the Jerusalem District Court to be allowed to resign from his case.

To those who regarded the thwarted resignation as yet another trick aimed at delaying his trial, due to start September 1, an angry Deri said that such people would also perceive the baby's birth as a trick. That would be taking planned parenthood a little too far.

MAIL IN Israel is occasionally late, sometimes taking a week to get across town. Mail sent from overseas may be in transit for three months. But there is no explanation for the delay in diplomatic mail from the White House to Teddy Kollek via the US Embassy in Tel Aviv.

Last September, Kollek, then still mayor of Jerusalem, visited the White House where he met with President Clinton. The occasion was duly photographed for posterity. Some days later Clinton signed the photo with a dedication message and asked Mary Emery, a staff member in the office of the national security adviser, to forward it. Emery placed it in an envelope accompanied by an explanatory note dated October 27, which she sent to William Brown, who was then US ambassador. Kollek received the photograph nearly 10 months later - on August 10.

SIGN OF the times. MK Naomi Chazan last week found a note from her soldier son: "Someone called from Jordan." But the young man, who had already returned to his unit, had neglected to take the person's name. How quickly we take things for granted.

THE CALL to Chazan had something to do with the local branch of Women's Action for the Mediterranean (WAM), which she inaugurated last Friday. The group aims to expand personal contacts between women here and those in other Mediterranean countries, including those in Moslem states which have no relations with Israel.

WAM is the outgrowth of last May's Marrakesh conference attended by women from some 30 Mediterranean and European countries. Some of the 17 Israeli delegates were introduced to Tunisian and Algerian women delegates, thanks to Palestinian women, observed Peace Now's Gaila Golan. Moreover, according to Chazan, the ability of Israeli and Palestinian women to communicate was seen as a lesson for Greek and Turkish women to follow.

GERMAN BUSINESS tycoon Josef Buchman, whose numerous philanthropic and investment interests in Israel are legend, this week hosted a gala benefit dinner for the Israel Philharmonic Orchestra at Hamburg's Four Seasons Hotel. The dinner, which netted DM 100,000 for the IPO's special projects fund, was graced by Israel Ambassador Avi Primor and some 200 of northern Germany's most affluent personalities, many of whom had earlier attended the IPO's Schleswig-Holstein Festival recital under the baton of Zubin Mehta.

IS THERE a special link between Beit Hanassi and Channel 2? Aharon Barnea, who was President Ezer Weizman's spokesman, is one of the leading figures on the Channel Two news team. And Channel 2 ombudsman Gloria Pordes served briefly as Weizman's military adjutant after a long stint under former president Chaim Herzog, whom he served as spokesman.

CHANNEL 2 newsreader Oshrat Levi, whose on-camera attire is generally conservative, went in the opposite direction in her choice of wedding gown. Levi, 26, wore a low-cut, revealing halter-neck dress designed by Yuval Raviv last Thursday when she married Liron Kotler, 33. The wedding was held at Jaffa port.

WITH GRAPES growing wild in her garden, Susan Minkowicz, public relations director for Kedma educational projects, decided to make the vine the theme of her birthday party. Guests were invited to pick and take home all the grapes they could carry, and platters of stuffed vine leaves graced the buffet.

IT'S TIME TO DO SOMETHING FOR YOURSELF JOIN THE MACCABI TRADE UNION

The new Health Insurance Law will come into force within a few months. If, as is expected, it is accompanied by an Organization Tax Law, you will have to pay organization tax like everyone else. As Presently constituted, anyone not belonging to a trade union will in effect be paying this tax automatically to the Histadrut.

To avoid a situation where your money goes to a trade union of which you are not a member,

JOIN MACCABI TRADE UNION NOW, AND ENSURE THAT YOUR MONEY IS USED FOR YOUR OWN BENEFIT.

Maccabi Trade Union benefits every single employee: salaried employees, self-employed, housewives, students and unemployed persons. Naturally, Maccabi Trade Union provides all the services currently offered by other labor federations: protection of wages and social security benefits, protection against arbitrary dismissal, pension planning, promotion of social legislation, etc. At Maccabi Trade Union's legal advice bureau, the finest lawyers and experts in labor law, industrial relations and worker welfare will provide free advice to members.

Maccabi Trade Union will further promote your welfare with a variety of additional services:

- Supplementary health insurance
- Basic long-term care insurance
- Health-care programs (dieting, nutrition, etc.)

Joining the Maccabi Trade Union does not entail either membership dues or any other payment, which will only commence once the Organization Tax Law comes into force and according to the law.

REGISTER NOW USING THIS COUPON:

To: Maccabi Trade Union, P.O.B. 50126, Tel Aviv 61500

I the undersigned wish to be accepted as a member of the Maccabi Trade Union.

A. I hereby declare and agree that as a member of the Maccabi Trade Union, I will abide by the rights and obligations detailed in the organization's regulations, and by existing or future decisions taken by its authorized institutions. I undertake to be bound by these regulations, rules and decisions in full.

B. I hereby declare that the following details are correct: (Please mark X in the appropriate box)

First name and family name: _____ ID no.: _____

Address: _____ Address of work place: _____

Work place: _____

☐ I am a member of the _____ Trade Union

☐ I am not a member of any other trade union

Date: _____ Signature: _____

*A copy of the regulations are available in all branches of Maccabi HealthCare Fund. *Selected employees, students, housewives, pensioners, self-employed, unemployed, etc.

Glim Image Promotion Systems

הסתדרות עובדים מכבי
קרן מכבי MACCABI TRADE UNION